2,200 CHURCHES IN VERA CRUZ TO BE CLOSED

Catholics Forced Out by New Law.

BY JOHN CORNYN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MEXICO CITY, June 18.—There will be complete suspension of public worship in the state of Vera Cruz as a result of the radical law passed last night, reducing the number of priests in the state to one for every 100,000 inhabitants. Vera Cruz has a total population of 1,100,000, and so would permit only eleven priests throughout the entire state.

Archbishop Leopoldo Ruiz y Flores, head of the Catholic church in Mexico, declared today that he would not name the eleven priests to officiate in the state under this measure, and that all priests had been ordered to continue services despite the law until ordered out.

Vera Cruz Churches.

The suspension of services would mean enforcement of the decree as outlined by Dr. Rafael Guizar y Valencia, archbishop of Vera Cruz.

"There is the excessively small number of priests for the large state of Vera Cruz. It is impossible to continue having the churches open," he said. "The state contains over 200,000 communicants and Vera Cruz has over 2,200 churches. It is impossible to continue services with only eleven priests, including the bishops within the state."

Priests Will Leave Churches.

Word came from Vera Cruz at noon today that the priests there had begun to deliver the churches to the government, as was done in the Tabasco conflict nearly five years ago, and leave the state. It seems to be the beginning of a continued struggle between the state authorities and the church.

A large number of residents of Vera Cruz have presented petitions following petitions to the legislature, protesting the measure.

"To protest the accusation that the Catholic church has a fanatical influence over the masses. The civilization of the contemporary world and especially the Mexican people is due to the Catholic church, now slandered by unworthy sons."

A telegram from Catholics of Vera Cruz addressed to President Rubio says: "It is unquestionable that the law grieves gravely the sentiments of the Catholic population of Vera Cruz. Due to the enormous importance of the matter we appeal to the sense of justice to intervene in favor of our petition which is in accordance with justice."

Priest Is Ambushed.

Father José de Jesus Cano, parish priest of Huatusco, in the state of Vera Cruz, had been ambushed and shot on Tuesday as he returned from giving last rites to a dying person in one of the villages of his district, have been confirmed, according to Archbishop Ruiz y Flores. He also declared that the priest at Huatusco was believed to be a communists and that a group of armed agrarians had demanded it from the mob. The newspaper La Prensa carried stories of the alleged assaults against priests.

Cardinal Writes Cardinal.

MADRID, June 18.—(AP)—In a letter addressed to Cardinal Pedro Segura, primate of France, President Alcala Zamora tonight informed the cardinal he was expelled from Spain "to preserve the public order."

The president said he hoped the cardinal would "voluntarily stay outside Spain for some time." Replying to the primate's protest that while he was a prisoner at Guadalajara, the police failed to visit him, the president said:

"You ought not to surprise you, on your return to Spain did the governor of Toledo. Be happy to know that you found there comforts which you were denied you while you were a prisoner in Spain. I am glad you are alive and in such health in spite of reports of your death you were detained."

Referring to Cardinal Segura, the president said that he was sorry he failed to maintain the same cordiality with the cardinal as with the majority of other Spanish prelates. When the cardinal left Spain for Rome, the president said, he was not expelled, "nevertheless the latter understood from the papal nuncio that the cardinal's stay in Spain would be prolonged while the

GANG MACHINE GUN ROARS; ONE SLAIN BY SLUGS

Outbreak Is Laid to Beer Rivalry.

Two men were shot, one fatally, in an attempted wholesale assassination by machine gunners in front of a saloon at 1137 West 69th street last night. Two other men who police say probably were the intended targets of the gunmen escaped injury, as did a family of three persons whose automobile, caught in the line of fire, was hit five times by machine gun slugs.

The victims of the would be murderers are James Janis, 32 years old, 5514 Blackstone avenue, a brakeman employed as a part time bartender in the saloon, and Thomas Norton, 30 years, 7039 Throop street, a steamfitter. Janis was riddled twelve times by slugs and taken to the Englewood hospital, where he died early this morning. Norton was wounded in the left thigh and cut about the face and hands by flying glass shattered by bullets.

Blame Beer Rivalry.

Detectives laid the machine gunning to beer rivalry on the south side. One report was the shooting might have been a signal of the return of Joe Saltis, "retired" southwest side beer czar, to the racket. In any event, the inspiration is believed to have been in the purchase of "wrong beer" by the saloon.

Norton and Janis were sitting in the automobile of William Conway, 6842 South Racine avenue, in front of the saloon. Conway and his brother, George, 6751 South May street, reputed owner of the resort, were sitting in front of the butcher shop next door at 1139 West 69th street.

Out of the east approached a touring car. As it neared the saloon it slowed down. Suddenly there was a roar and a stream of bullets sprayed the Conway car. At this moment the automobile of Clyde W. Bennage, 6723 Green street, eastbound, came in the line of fire, cutting off the targets of the assassins.

Auto Hit; No One Hurt.

Bennage's machine was pierced at the front, windshield and center, but he, his wife and their son, Earl, 7 years old, escaped unscathed. As Bennage's machine passed beyond range the foiled gunmen sent three bullets toward the Conways, the missiles piercing the butcher shop door behind them.

William Conway took Norton to St. Bernard's hospital. Later he and his brother appeared at the Englewood station for questioning. They offered no motive for the shooting.

Since the middle of April, when Edward Fitzgerald, alleged follower of Frank McErlane, was killed, several harmless shootings have been reported on the south side. They were charged to a feud between the McErlane and "Spike" O'Donnell beer outfits.

Report New Gang Formed.

Another theory on the shooting being investigated involves an upstart gang of beer boys led by Dan McGeoghegan, once condemned to the gallows but eventually freed. The story is that McGeoghegan recently organized a beer outfit in the Chicago Lawn territory and is now poaching on the south side sections controlled by McErlane and Saltis.

McGeoghegan, it is said, has won two of O'Donnell's aids to his camp, Joe Cainski and George Larson, and is prepared, with a following of desperadoes, to carry on deadly war against his established rivals. The recent shooting troubles on the south side, which until last night shed no blood, originated, it was said in McGeoghegan's entry into the beer field. Incidentally Cainski and Larson were seized early Tuesday morning after the former's car was found bullet riddled at 33d and Bishop streets.

SORORITY GIRL, AMNESIA VICTIM, IDENTIFIED BY KIN

Miss Thelma Warren, 19 years old, 7615 Bosworth avenue, was found wandering aimlessly in the Marshall Field & Co. store yesterday, and was taken to the county hospital. There it was found she was a victim of amnesia. She was not identified until early today.

After reading of the girl's plight in a newspaper, and that she wore a De Molay ring and two diamonds, as well as a Phi Beta Pi pin, her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence B. Warren, and her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Harry L. Hart, all of whom live at the Bosworth avenue address, went to the hospital and identified her.

Fire Sweeps School Board Member's Flat

Hundreds of men, women and children in night attire were driven to the streets early this morning by a spectacular fire in the apartments of Walter H. Brandenburg, former president of the Board of Education, and still a member of it, on the sixteenth floor of the 3240 Sheridan road building at Sheridan road and Melrose street. The flames broke out shortly before 4 o'clock and were visible for miles as they leaped from every window of the nine room apartment.

Mr. Brandenburg was in the apartment alone when the fire started. He managed to escape without injury, but in a dazed condition. The fashionable apartment building has its own fire pumps, and the firemen carried their hose to the sixteenth floor, where it was attached to the pumps. The streams from the hose carried high over Sheridan road, which was thronged with motorists out to escape the intense heat of the night.

Discovered by Elevator Man.

The fire was discovered by Henry Soderstrom, night elevator operator, who smelled smoke in the elevator shaft. Calling Robert Bergh, a janitor, they went up the shaft until they found the smoke coming from Brendenburg's apartment. As they reached the door Brandenburg staggered out, dazed from the smoke, but otherwise unhurt. He was taken to the apartment of his brother, O. Brendenburg, on the same floor.

Origin Undetermined.

Arriving firemen found a long procession of men, women and children, cats, dogs and other pets coming from the many apartments of the big building. Many of the children were carried by nursemaids. Most of those fleeing down the stairs were dressed in pajamas and other night raiment.

The origin of the fire had not been determined early. All the furnishings of the apartment were destroyed, and the loss was unofficially estimated at $5,000.

UNCLE TOM, 118, BEGINS TO FEEL A WEE BIT PUNY

Poplar Bluff, Mo., June 18.—(AP)—For the first time in about 100 years, Uncle Tommy Kemp, 118 years old, admits he is "puny."

"My age," he confessed, "is beginning to tell on me. I've been puny most of the spring and couldn't do my farming for the first time since I can remember. About all I can do is sit around the house and be a grouch."

Kemp will be 119 years old Sept. 20, he says. His neighbor, Ben Hodge, will be 119 on Dec. 21, he says.

GRAF ZEPPELIN TO TAKE 'SWIM' IN LAKE TODAY

FRIEDRICHSHAFEN, Germany, June 18.—(AP)—In preparation for its proposed flight to the north pole to meet Sir Hubert Wilkins' submarine Nautilus, the Graf Zeppelin tomorrow will "go swimming" in Lake Constance.

The great dirigible will take off at 8 a. m. for a flight over Switzerland and when it returns over the lake in the afternoon an attempt will be made to bring it down smoothly on the surface of the water.

There will be no landing crew to help Dr. Eckener get his ship down to steamship level. The whole maneuver will be effected by releasing gas until the airship floats on the rubber covered bumpers of the control and rear gondolas. When the ship has satisfactorily shown its "seaworthiness" for a short water cruise it will ascend again by releasing water ballast. It will be the first time since 1912 that a Zeppelin has landed on Lake Constance.

Boy Mimics Melon Peddler and Is Wounded in Leg

John Turajko, 14 years old, tried to mimic the call of a watermelon vendor who passed his home at 2317 North Hamilton avenue yesterday afternoon. The imitation was so good that it made the melon merchant angry. He threw a knife at the boy, striking him in the left leg and inflicting a severe cut. The peddler fled.

Igoe Boomed for Governor at Party Fete

Springfield, Ill., June 18.—[Special.]—Minority Leader Michael L. Igoe was boomed for governor tonight by his Democratic colleagues in the house. He is the one candidate upon whom all the party factions should agree, said representatives from senatorial districts as far apart as Cairo and Chicago, because he has united divergent groups into a strong whole.

"If the Democrats want me to run for governor I will run, and I will be elected," said Mr. Igoe. "You men have never asked me to do anything that I could not honorably do. If this is your wish, I shall do it.

"I think I know the political temperament of Illinois," he continued. "I know the history of Democracy in Illinois. In the last 40 years, there have been two Democratic governors and next year there will be another.

Harmony in Party.

"When I came to the assembly eighteen years ago, it was impossible to hold a Democratic caucus, for there were drys, wets, Chicago Democrats, and downstate Democrats. I feel that now we have achieved complete party harmony."

Former Judge Truman A. Snell, house member from Carlinville, was toastmaster at the banquet. The first speaker was Alex Wilson of Cairo, who presented Mr. Igoe with a painting in behalf of the minority bloc. Other speakers were: Howard Doyle, Decatur; Charles Cola, Chicago; Charles Franz, Freeport; A. B. Lager, Carlyle; Michael F. Hennebry, Wilmington, and George A. Fitzgerald, Chicago.

Battle Cry Sounded.

Representative Thomas J. O'Grady, from Chicago, sounded the battle cry with an attack on the "statehouse gang headed by Gov. Emmerson."

He said:

"I use the word 'gang' advisedly. For twenty years Emmerson, Omer Custer, Andrew Russell, Garett Kinney and Oscar Nelson have run the statehouse. They have deposited the state's funds in their own banks and awarded contracts to their favored friends and built up a machine to perpetuate their control of the state."

House Republicans banqueted at the same time in another hotel to listen to an address by State Republican Chairman C. J. "Tip" Doyle of Springfield. They also gave presents to Speaker Shanahan, Chairman Tice of the appropriations committee, and George C. Blauer, clerk of the house.

Slayer of Texas Sheriff Dies in Electric Chair

Huntsville, Tex., June 19 (Friday).—(AP)—Ollie Herrera was electrocuted in state prison early today for the murder of Sheriff A. T. Murray of Mason county.

Record Heat for Summer Set Yesterday

Yesterday was Chicago's warmest day thus far in 1931, the mercury standing at 90 at 5 p. m. Today, according to forecast, will be scorching, too, with fair skies and an indicated maximum as high or higher than yesterday's.

The heat wave probably will extend over into tomorrow, Forecaster C. A. Donnel stated, but it is expected that by tomorrow night lower temperatures will prevail. The sections west of the Mississippi, which had readings above 100 on Wednesday and yesterday, are anticipating relief today.

Near All Time Record.

Yesterday's maximum was only one degree below the all time record for June 18, set in 1923. The highest official temperature in Chicago this year, before yesterday, was 87 on May 28 and June 12. June's highest mark, 99 degrees, was reached on the 30th in 1913.

One death during the day was attributed to heart disease aggravated by heat. The victim was Henry Brandt, 63 years old, 648 Forest avenue, Oak Park, a painter. He collapsed while at work in Melrose Park and died soon afterward.

High Readings in Midwest.

Extremely high temperatures were reported in the Missouri river sections of Nebraska, Iowa, Minnesota and South Dakota. At Sioux City, Ia., the mercury had climber to 95 at 3 p. m. Farmers were said to be fearful that a few days of such temperatures and dry winds would damage crops.

At Canton, Ill., the rise in temperature between 6 a. m. yesterday and 3 p. m. was thirty degrees to a maximum of 93. Mercury readings in excess of 100 continued in parts of South Dakota. Three deaths and three prostrations by heat occurred in the northwest.

Beaches and Parks Crowded.

Chicago beaches and parks were crowded yesterday. The Lincoln park bathing places are under supervision, as are street ends north of Lawrence avenue. Twenty-five guards were on duty at Belmont, Diversey, Fullerton and Oak beaches, although no locker or dressing room accommodations will be available until July 1.

The beaches under the supervision of the south park board will be officially opened and guarded after June 27.

COLD, FLOOD IN ALBERTA.

CALGARY, Alta., June 18.—(AP)—Settlers in the southern Alberta mining town of Wayne tonight struggled to save their homes from the rising floodwaters which have taken five lives and threatened scores of others.

Four persons are known dead, another is considered lost in the roaring torrents and a sixth is near death in a hospital. More than 100 have been forced from their water-threatened homes and hundreds more are seeking means of protecting their dwellings against the rising waters.

Continued rain and temperatures easing down toward the freezing point promise to add to the suffering.

NAUTILUS GOING BLIND THROUGH A ROUGH SEA

Washington, D. C., June 18.—(AP)—The Polar Submarine Nautilus was struggling under her own power tonight in a rough sea without running lights or a periscope.

Rear Admiral Claude C. Bloch, commander of the Wyoming and Arkansas training squadron with midshipmen aboard, reported tonight to the navy department that the submarine was being piloted blind, its bridge and periscopes having been washed away.

Sir Hubert Wilkins, who hopes to reach the north pole in the craft, had it sealed up. It was being directed on its course by radio from the battleship Wyoming. The warship had a strong searchlight trained on the submarine, which, Admiral Bloch said, "is rolling heavily." He added "the Nautilus can see nothing."

The position of the Nautilus was reported about 250 miles off Queenstown, Ireland, its first point of destination.

FAMOUS BRITISH AVIATRIX, FRIEND KILLED IN CRASH

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, June 18.—Two women, a pilot and a passenger, in a two seater airplane, burned to death when their machine crashed and burst into flames in a field adjoining the De Havilland landing field, near Hatfield, tonight.

The pilot was Miss Cecily O'Brien, well known sportswoman and eldest daughter of Sir Timothy O'Brien. Her companion is believed to have been Mrs. Mildred Leith, half sister of Lord Burgh. The identity of the latter, however, has not been established.

Miss O'Brien lost a leg in an air crash in 1928, but later qualified as a pilot despite her infirmity. She took up flying as a profession six years ago, a few months later winning the first women's air race in England.

2 INSTALLMENT TAX BILL PUT UP TO GOVERNOR

Not Effective Until 1931 Payments.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., June 18.—[Special.]—One ray of hope for the overburdened taxpayers of Illinois was found today when the senate adopted house amendments to the Bohrer bill providing for semi-annual payment of real estate taxes. The bill now goes to Gov. Emmerson.

MRS. FLORENCE PIPER BOHRER.

The bill was Senator Florence Piper Bohrer's own idea, she said tonight, but it has since been adopted by the Chicago Real Estate board and by Mayor Cermak in his search for relief legislation for Chicago.

As originally written, the bill included personal taxes in the semi-annual plan. It was passed in this form by the senate, but the house amended it May 27 so that the personal taxes should be paid in one installment. The senate agreed to this change late today.

Realty Men's Chief Plank.

The real estate board in particular made the plan one of the principal planks in its proposed relief program and embodied it in the twelve bills introduced last week.

These were killed off night before last when the house tabled more than 1,000 bills by striking all in committee and those up on the calendar, save appropriations. Former Acting Corporation Counsel Busch of Chicago favored the installment plan when he was in Springfield a few weeks ago in the interests of aid for Chicago.

When Plan Is Effective.

The installment plan goes into effect for downstate with the payment of 1931 taxes, the due dates being Feb. 1 and Aug. 1, according to the bill. Cook county, however, is far behind on its taxes and a schedule of due dates for it is set forth in the bill. It follows:

Tax 1931, first payment, Sept. 1, 1932; second payment, Feb. 1, 1933.

Tax 1932, first payment, July 1, 1933; second payment, Dec. 1, 1933.

Tax 1933, first payment, May 1, 1934; second payment, Oct. 1, 1934.

Tax 1934, first payment, Feb. 1, 1934; second payment, Aug. 1, 1934.

In the opinion of many there will be a fight to have the provisions of the bill apply to 1930 taxes, but tax experts do not believe this can be done.

How much it will relieve the taxpayers of the state by obviating the necessity of borrowing money to pay taxes and the attendant payment of interest could not, of course, be judged, but in Mrs. Bohrer's district, which includes Bloomington, she believes the savings will amount to $50,000 annually.

State Tax Levy.

The state tax levy bill came over from the house tonight and was read a first time. It necessitated a Saturday session to get in the three days of reading specified by the constitution. It will be sent to second reading tomorrow and passed after midnight when the senate, if still in session, will pass the necessary motions to make it a Saturday session. There may be a session in the early forenoon, but the senate leaders already have their bags packed to get away in time to attend the American Derby at Washington Park.

The state tax levy bill with which Homer Tice [Rep., Greenview] held the senate back, technically at least, provides for raising $13,000,000 for 1931 and $18,000,000 for 1932 for general revenue purposes and $10,000,000 for 1931 and $10,000,000 for 1933 for state school purposes.

PROPOSE 10 PCT. SAVING

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

"A saving of ten per cent of the unincumbered balances of the city appropriations for 1931" will probably be recommended to Mayor Cermak by his economy committee headed by Col. A. A. Sprague.

Coal with which to pump city water and keep the sewer pumps working is a vital necessity. Postage cannot be obtained unless the cash is laid on the line. Money set aside in the appropriation to pay bond interest is considered an essential. Such items will be classed as largely incumbered.

All other items are to suffer the 10 per cent cut, according to the program. This, of course, includes salaries, but Mayor Cermak is opposed to a reduction in the wage scale and the salary saving will probably be obtained by reduction in the number of employés, vacations without pay or a working week of five days.

An ordinance enforcing a two weeks' vacation without pay on all city employés was being drafted by Corporation Counsel Sexton and is likely to be submitted to the council meeting on Wednesday. Col. Sprague said the ordinance would include "everybody including cabinet members" and indicated that the mayor and the aldermen, city clerk, city treasurer, and Municipal court attachés would be asked to do their share.

Sewell Avery, chairman of the mayor's advisory committee, was said by Col. Sprague to have "enthusiastically approved" the two weeks' vacation plan. Sprague added that other savings will be necessary.

Must Save $15,440,000.

According to the mayor's advisers, the appropriations were made on the assumption that 91 per cent of the taxes would be collected, while the present prospect is that not more than 70 per cent will be gathered in. For the city to live within its expected tax income, there must be a saving of approximately $15,440,000.

Then the 1931 city income from licenses, fees and other miscellaneous sources, usually around $15,000,000 a year, is running about 10 per cent behind last year. The general licenses, by which this miscellaneous income is gauged, total $2,022,394 for the first five and a half months of this year, as compared with $2,225,526 for the same period of last year.

Another gauge is the number of automobiles licensed. Mayor Cermak put on a drive to compel auto owners to take out licenses; but in the first five months of this year only 409,983 autos have been licensed as compared with 479,484 for the same period of last year. This is a reduction of 16 per cent.

Large Saving Mandatory.

Even if the banks decide to buy tax anticipation warrants later, the mayor's advisers feel certain that purchasers will not take more than they believe the collected taxes will liquidate. Therefore the Col. Sprague group assert that a large saving is mandatory.

As a relatively small aid, the Illinois Bell Telephone company yesterday purchased $1,500,000 of the 1931 tax anticipation warrants, on the agreement that the city will take them back as compensation which may be required in a new franchise, when granted. Mayor Cermak signed the warrants yesterday afternoon.

An additional aid to the city was seen in the ruling of Mr. Sexton that all amendments to the city's 1931 appropriations bill, which was passed by the city council on Feb. 25 or thereafter, providing for the expenditure of additional money are illegal.

The opinion affects more than fifty employés who had been reclassified in their positions in order to give them salary increases, and employés filling positions created since the passage of the budget.

The ruling is the first to be given under the legislation passed by the general assembly in the special session last year relating to budget amendments. This legislation prohibits the amending of the budget except within a definite period following passage of the budget. Since the expiration of that period the council has passed more than a score of orders and ordinances reclassifying employés, creating new positions, and granting salary increases. Many of them were passed under the last administration.

Another aid came yesterday in a decision of the state Supreme court, which upheld the power of the city to collect license fees from gasoline filling stations in proportion to the storage capacity of each station.

President Lewis E. Myers of the school board notified City Controller Szymczak yesterday that the board will have the $458,375 necessary on July 1 to pay interest on its bonds.

Tell Finances of County.

The finance committe of the county board obtained a statement yesterday indicating the status of the county treasury on May 31, but it did not disclose whether the county will have $55,000 to pay bonds and interest due July 1.

Up to May 31, the county's cash receipts were $5,155,808 and its disbursements were $7,432,385. That statement shows $2,276,577 more paid out than received. It was explained by the county auditor that certain additional cash has been received which has not yet been officially entered upon the records. This totals $2,120,000. A clear statement of the county treasury was promised for the next board meeting.

Creditors Take Warrants.

The county sold $174,477 worth of 1931 tax anticipation warrants to its creditors. The Bowman Dairy company took warrants for $22,861; the Western Dairy company warrants for $26,686; the Borden Farm Products company, $52,635; Sidwell Dewindt company, $4,086; Royal Fuel company, $5,027; Reiner Coal company, $15,185; Albany Coal company, $24,725, and F. Bieschke & Sons, $23,269.

The county hopes to persuade its creditors to accept tax anticipation warrants, in lieu of cash, to the extent of $250,000 within the next three days. When this and other action is taken the board will attempt to sell a bond issue of $1,000,000 in order to pay creditors.

No Action in Sight.

On the so-called permanent financial relief, which some believe can be obtained from the legislature, there were no developments yesterday of any importance, except the bill for installment paying of real estate taxes—dividing the yearly payment into two payments six months apart.

Mayor Cermak said that since the general assembly had denied his remedial legislation at its regular session, there could not be any remedial action until a special session is called.

Gov. Emmerson was quoted in Springfield as saying that he would be glad to call a special session whenever a workable program is formulated which has substantial backing in Chicago.

Although the sanitary district is not in any financial predicament as are the other taxing bodies, according to President Thomas J. Bowler, he said that the trustees are willing to sit in with any of the other local governments to draft a plan that would better the taxing system.

Several, including Joseph K. Brittain, representing the Association of Commerce, said that an attempt will be made to draft a program acceptable to the major interests concerned with the legislation. They expressed the opinion such a program can now be framed because the several organizations must now be convinced that individual efforts are not very effective, as the experience with the present legislature demonstrated.

The appointment of H. L. Meites, editor of the Chicago Jewish Chronicle and secretary of the Jewish Historical Society of Illinois, as city superintendent of water was announced yesterday by Mayor Cermak. Mr. Meites, who lives at 1424 Winona street, succeeds Joseph F. Gubbins, an appointee of the former city administration. The position pays a salary of $6,750 a year.

COOK COUNTY BOARD TO CLOSE TWO BOYS' INSTITUTIONS JULY 1

The Cook county commissioners have ordered the closing on July 1 of the Chicago and Cook county school for boys and The Oaks, an institution for the examination and training of borderline defectives. The boys' schoo now houses 122, and The Oaks 55 more.

According to Emmett Whealan, president of the county board, the care of these inmates properly is a function of the state and the state will have to provide for them.

"Our agreement was to keep the institutions running only for the first six months of this year," he said. "That agreement has been kept. The appropriations made for the purpose have been exhausted and the schools must be closed. There is no more money available for them."

Juvenile authorities are said to be unwilling to have the boys sent to the St. Charles reform school, where they must associate with older lads more hardened in crime. The St. Charles institution already is reported to be overcrowded.

COUNCIL GROUP PLANS HEARINGS ON TAX CRISIS

A series of meetings at which the inequalities in the taxation of real and personal property will be discussed were announced yesterday by Ald. Barnet Hodes [7th], chairman of a council subcommittee which has been authorized to make a study of the tax situation. The first meeting will be held at 8 p. m. next Tuesday in the council chambers.

"The subcommittee has been advised," said Ald. Hodes, "that under the existing laws of taxation in Illinois only approximately 10 per cent of the people come under a direct taxation. Such a condition places too great a burden upon a single base of taxation, with real property suffering the greatest portion of the cost of government."

For the first three hearings the Chicago Real Estate board has been invited to submit evidence. At the first hearing members of the organization will outline the taxation methods in Cook county and the results created by those methods, and at the subsequent meetings relief measures will be presented.

Canal Board Rejects Bids for Bonds; Wants Par

The sanitary district yesterday rejected bids on $535,000 worth of bonds, to be sold for continuance of work on the sewage disposal program ordered by the United States Supreme court. Two bids, one for $508,325 and the other for $509,523, were received.

Ross A. Woodhull, chairman of the finance committee, stated that due to the solvency of the drainage district at a time when most other local taxing bodies were having difficulties it should be able to sell the bonds for par.

$120,000 Suit Started Against Chris Paschen

The precipe of a suit for $120,000 was filed in the federal district court yesterday against Christian P. Paschen, city building commissioner in the former administration. The suit was brought on behalf of the Henry Uihlein Realty company of Milwaukee. According to the law firm of Scott, Mac Leish & Falk, who filed the precipe, the action is to recover a $120,000 mortgage bond given Paschen for collection.

County Ordered to Pay $200,000 Bill for Ballots

The Supreme court yesterday issued a writ of mandamus compelling the county to pay the Atwell Printing company the $200,000 contested bill for the printing of ballots used in the general election of last Nov. 4.

1930 TAX BOOKS ALMOST READY FOR REVIEWERS

The first of the 1930 real estate tax assessment books are to be turned over to the board of review on Monday. This was announced yesterday by John E. Conroy, secretary of the board of assessors. Books for 30 country towns are to be delivered. Those for the remaining country and city townships will be delivered during the week in advance of the scheduled date of July 1, Conroy said.

The assessors are to proceed immediately with the 1931 quadrennial assessment. Yesterday they heard complaints on 1930 assessments in the towns of Rich, River Forest, Riverside, Schaumberg, Stickney, Thornton, Wheeling, North Evanston, and Niles. The board of review will meet today to discuss handling of complaints and hearings on the 1930 assessment.

Shooting Victim Dies as Gun Owner Offers Blood

Stephen De Nova, 27 years old, 1511 West Harrison street, was shot Wednesday when his friend, Joseph Esposito, 23 years old, 1510 West Harrison street, pointed a pistol supposed to be unloaded at him. Last night De Nova died at the county hospital a few minutes before physicians were ready to give him a blood transfusion, Esposito supplying the blood.

CHAIN STORE TAX AMENDED TO HIT BUT A FEW LINES

Applies Only to Tobacco, Drugs, Provisions.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., June 18.—[Special.]—The Pintozzi bill to license chain stores went to third reading in the senate late today towing a long string of amendments which restrict its application to groceries, meats, drugs and tobacco.

SENATOR FRANCIS J. LOGLEBAX

The license fee for each store more than the first three in a chain was changed from $1,000 to $200. The date when it would become effective was made July 1, 1932, and provision inserted that the fees should go into the school fund.

The bill passed the house, 135 to 0, last week, and its sponsors tonight hardly recognize it. Its opponents argue it has been trimmed down to such a narrow piece of class legislation that the courts would toss it out on its ear as unconstitutional.

Assailed as Suppressive Measure.

The unending of the bill filled the chamber with two hours of debate and followed presentation of arguments earlier in the day by representatives of chain systems. Throughout the hearing and discussion, the argument was raised that the Pintozzi bill is not a revenue bill, but a bill aimed to drive out chain stores as one of the new trends in economical distribution. Chain stores dealing in wearing apparel, shoes, millinery, furniture, jewelry and all other manufactured goods but those specified as under the ban were taken out of the bill. So were gas stations, lumber yards, coal and ice yards.

Senator Andrew S. Cuthbertson [Rep., Rockford Hill], in moving to reduce the license fee from $1,000 to $200, said his idea was to equalize competition between local merchants and chain stores, and for a time the senate was filled with talk of "equalization," until it sounded like the old Democratic fight over the McNary-Haugen bill.

The bill is set for a vote in the senate tomorrow and both sides today say it may be a close fight.

Presidents Amendment Fails.

An effort by Senator Edward P. O'Grady [Dem., Chicago] to strike groceries and meats from the bill and after Senator Arthur Adam Roloff [Rep., Brookfield] had urged "We ought to take out the poor man's bread, meat, and milk," a motion by Senator Francis J. Loglebax [Dem., Chicago] to take tobacco apparel out was carried 22 to 18.

As it now stands, the bill provides that establishments with more than three stores retailing groceries, meats, drugs and tobacco, shall pay $25 a year each for the first three and $200 each for the rest. At the early hearing Attorney Joseph B. Fleming of Chicago, representing a chain system with 45 stores in Illinois, set forth that the bill is materially different from the Indiana act, recently upheld by the Supreme court.

"I believe this bill would be an illegal act," said Mr. Fleming, "for it constitutes special class legislation, is a denial of equal application of the law, it provides an arbitrary classification, and it imposes an unwarranted tax.

Attacks Motives of Bill.

"It is called a revenue bill, but it is a tax imposed without any reference to valuation of property, income, earnings, capital. How many stores is the only basis for the imposition of the tax.

"Chicago has many department stores which are really dozens of stores under one roof, but they are taxed. The only measure is number of stores. Up to three, no tax; more than three, tax on all of them. A recent survey by colleges showed chain store groceries sold at prices 10 to 12 per cent less than others. This is saving to consumers. The effect this bill is an attack upon the purchasing public, who would be required to pay the tax.

"Its only justification is as a revenue bill, but it is not that—it seeks to penalize certain lines of business and to wipe out weaker units."

Mr. Fleming's arguments were elaborated and echoed by Attorney John G. Riordan, representing a chain of shoe stores with 35 units.

"This system lost $175,000 last year; it expects to lose $165,000 this year," he said. "It would be a physical impossibility to pay this tax."

Discusses Need of Claims.

F. H. Massman, vice president of the National Tea company, with 850 stores in Illinois, and chairman of executive committee of the National Chain Store association, with 2,500 stores in Illinois in its membership, dwelt on chain stores as a new tendency in distribution.

"Distribution has been 20 years behind production," he said. "President Hoover said the waste in distribution is 25 to 30 per cent. The older régime of distribution was extravagant. The new trend means a saving of 12 per cent to consumers. This is spent on something else, and increases employment in factories and on railroads."

Court Clerk's Error Frees Maniac Who Attacked Wife

A homicidal maniac, released through an error by a newly appointed court clerk was abroad last night while his wife whom he had beaten into unconsciousness with a hammer several months ago was being guarded by a special police detail. The madman was released last Tuesday but it was not until yesterday morning when the wife appealed to the crime commission that police were notified and the manhunt begun.

The maniac, Maurice M. O'Neil who once had been committed to the Elgin state hospital for the insane for a hammer attack upon another woman, was arrested on March 26 for the attack on his wife. He was indicted for assault with intent to kill. Public Defender Benjamin Bachrach had O'Neil examined by Dr. Harry Hoffman, an alienist, who pronounced the prisoner a dangerous maniac.

Ordered to Asylum.

Last Tuesday a jury in Judge Peter Schwaba's Criminal court ordered O'Neil committed to the Chester Asylum for the Criminal Insane. Following the usual court procedure, the charges were ordered stricken from the record with leave to reinstate if O'Neil regained his sanity.

Clerk John Bodan, newly appointed by Criminal Court Clerk George Seif, sent to the county jail the slip showing that the charges had been stricken. O'Neil was then released. Half an hour later the slip showing that O'Neil had been committed to the Chester asylum arrived. Jail officials reported back to the clerk that the prisoner had been released on the first slip.

Error Kept Secret.

The jumbled proceedings were kept secret for two days until the wife, hysterical with fear, appealed to the crime commission. The commission appealed to the police to protect the woman. The detective bureau instituted a search for the madman at once, but Capt. Lynch of the Warren avenue police declared he could not spare men to guard the woman's rooms at 1625 West Madison street. Last night the detective bureau posted a special guard.

Last night in her rooms above a shoe repair shop with a little white dog for company Mrs. O'Neil told of the terror of living for ten years with an insane husband. She described the many nights on which she was afraid to go home and spent the long hours waiting in restaurants.

The wife also said that her husband had threatened her life on many occasions and frequently she had been forced to flee to save her life.

Mrs. McNeil also told of the unprovoked hammer attack her husband made on a neighbor woman in a tailor shop one evening; how O'Neil once had attempted to kill his mother, and of another attack upon a daughter. She fears that O'Neil, blaming her for his arrest, will attempt vengeance.

Seif Denies Office Erred.

Criminal Court Clerk Seif in a statement issued this morning, after a night of inquiry into the O'Neil case, denied that the maniac's release was due to a slip on the part of his office.

"I find that every detail of procedure has been handled properly," he said, "and that the necessary order to be filed in had been sent to the jailer's office in proper time. The clerk in Judge Schwaba's court made out the remand order and gave this order to the bailiff in charge of the prisoner. My records show that the prisoner should be in the Chester asylum."

Robbed of $850 Collections of Butcher Shop Chain

Menaced by an armed bandit, Bernard Fine, 3741 Sunnyside avenue, was robbed of $850 in cash and checks in front of his home early this morning. The loot represented collections of the Fine Brothers chain of butcher shops.

Mr. Kluge Saves His Watch, His Bondsmen Save Selves

Fred Kluge met three new friends yesterday. The friendships were of short duration. Mr. Kluge got at least three pokes on the nose and each of his new friends got at least one. And all four of them spent a part of the evening in cells at the State street police station.

Mr. Kluge, who is 38 years old and lives at 1468 Belle Plaine avenue, admitted yesterday afternoon he had been drinking a little liquor that had been made partly of old boxing gloves. He was taking a friend—an old friend—into the La Salle street station when the first of the new friends stepped up to him. It was Thomas Yougene, 41 years old, 4048 Greenview avenue.

"You're my friend," said Mr. Yougene, and poked Mr. Kluge on his nose. Mr. Kluge had never seen Mr. Yougene before and he resented such intimacy on short acquaintance. Therefore he retaliated and Policeman James Casey took both to the station. There, in his cell, Mr. Kluge was visited by another new friend, Harry Goldman, 30 years old, 525 Brompton avenue. Mr. Goldman is in the bond furnishing business and, after finding out that Mr. Kluge worked for the board of assessors and had a watch and $26, furnished bonds for his release.

But when Mr. Kluge started to leave Mr. Goldman followed him to the street. With Mr. Goldman went his friend, Ebey Weinstein, 37 years old, 1234 South Wabash avenue, also in the bond furnishing business. So Mr. Kluge had two new pals.

But Mr. Goldman and Mr. Weinstein are business men before they are pals, and they asked Mr. Kluge for his watch and his $26. Then Mr. Goldman's nose was punched. Mr. Weinstein's nose was punched. Mr. Kluge's nose was punched. Mr. Goldman hurled his bondsman's seal at Mr. Kluge and Mr. Kluge hurled a brick at both his new friends.

Then Mr. Kluge fled to a northbound Wabash avenue car and boarded it ahead of his pursuers. Mr. Goldman followed in a taxicab and Mr. Weinstein followed on foot. At Congress street Mr. Goldman got Policeman Michael Foley to arrest Mr. Kluge. When Kluge stepped off the car, with the policeman holding him, both the business men punched him.

That made Policeman Foley angry, so he arrested the bondsmen. They were charged with disorderly conduct and thrust into the same cell from which they had taken Mr. Kluge. Although they cried loudly, "You can't do this," it was done. It was a case of "Bondsman, bail yourself out."

Which they did. Mr. Kluge's brother, a real friend, furnished bonds for him this time and didn't try to take his watch.

CRIMINAL COURT CHIEF WILL BE ELECTED TODAY

The judges of the Superior and Circuit courts will meet this afternoon to elect the chief justice of the Criminal court, make assignments in the courts and elect members of their executive committees. Almost every judge in the two courts has been rumored as the choice for the next chief justice of the Criminal court and has made denials of candidacy.

Those mentioned most often are Circuit Judges Harry Fisher, Michael Feinberg and Philip Finnegan and Superior Judge John P. McGoorty, the present chief justice.

Under ordinary procedure the chief justice would be selected from the Circuit court as the courts have alternated in the past in filling the post. The Superior court judges, however, recently adopted a resolution abolishing the alternating rule, since they have supplied the majority of judges in the Criminal court. This was said to be a move to reelect Judge McGoorty.

ORCHESTRA LEADER BEN BERNIE IS SUED BY DANCE HALL OWNER

Monroe, Mich., June 18.—[Special.]—A battle between Ben Bernie, Chicago orchestra leader and radio performer, and Clarence Kirk of Jackson, a dance hall proprietor, in which the latter claims the musician struck him with a music rack, resulted in the filing of a suit here for $5,000. Summons was served on Bernie, who was playing at a dance hall at Lakeside, last night. Kirk claims that Bernie's orchestra failed to fulfill terms of a contract. Bernie intimates he will file a counter claim and says he hit Kirk with his fist because the latter refused to pay him.

Woman and Aid Guilty of Counterfeiting Charge

Mrs. Dorothy Collins, alias Kalleaness, 36 years old, 907 Miller stteet, and Sam De Maggio, alias Cantonese, former employé of the B. & O. restaurant, 93d street and Cottage Grove avenue, were found guilty of counterfeiting charges in Federal Judge Barnes' court yesterday. According to Prosecutor Owen A. West, they passed fifty spurious $10 notes.

HOOVER HAS OWN IDEA ABOUT LAW TO BE ENFORCED

Washington Notes Some He Neglects.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., June 18.—[Special.]—When President Hoover said at Springfield yesterday that the republic cannot live unless all law be implicitly observed and enforced, he did not mean, it is assumed, that his utterance should be taken too literally. For Mr. Hoover, Washington has noted, from time to time, is perhaps our most distinguished chooser of what law to observe, what law to enforce and what law not to enforce.

REPRESENTATIVE GEORGE H. TINKHAM.

Of late, there has been much comment on Mr. Hoover's apparent inattention to the Virginia law limiting the speed of automobiles on the highways of that state to 45 miles an hour. Mr. Hoover customarily rides to and from his Rapidan camp at a speed which, outside of the mountain stretches, reaches 60 or more miles an hour—how much more has not been accurately established, for when the Hoover car hits 60 the trailing newspapers reporters are left far behind.

Some Amendments Ignored.

Mr. Hoover's failure to take any steps toward enforcing the Fourteenth and Fifteenth amendments to the constitution, which are flouted in the south as much as the Eighteenth amendment is everywhere, has been the subject of much animadversion. A couple of years ago, Representative George Holden Tinkham [Rep., Mass.] sought unsuccessfully to induce the President to enforce all the amendments to the constitution.

In a letter to the President, Mr. Tinkham quoted Mr. Hoover's inaugural pronouncement that "our whole system of self-government will crumble either if officials elect what laws they will enforce or citizens elect what laws they will support," from which the congressman deduced that Mr. Hoover, if sincere, "must either recommend to the congress the passage of laws to enforce these amendments or refer the enforcement of them" to the commission the executive was about to appoint, now known as the Wickersham commission. The President did not deign to act upon the suggestion or to answer Mr. Tinkham's letter.

Letter Asks Enforcement.

"Permit me respectfully to draw your attention to the Fourteenth amendment and the Fifteenth amendment of the constitution," said Mr. Tinkham in his letter. "The former amendment makes Negroes citizens of the United States and provides that the basis of representation shall be reduced in proportion to existing disfranchisement in any state and the latter amendment prohibits any state from giving preference in the matter of suffrage to one citizen over another on account of race, color or previous condition of servitude, and the duty of enforcing these amendments rests with the congress and with the President.

"No laws have been passed to enforce these amendments. They are now wholly and grossly nullified in many states. Negroes are counted in the population for purposes of representation in the lower house of congress and then disfranchised, giving those states disproportionate representation, unfair to the other states of the union and thereby making election to the house of representatives and of a President illegal and unconstitutional."

Chooses Which to Enforce.

As a matter of fact, Mr. Hoover, like his predecessors in his high office, chooses what laws to enforce and what not to enforce. The merchant marine act of 1920 furnishes a case in point. One provision of this law is that goods imported in American bottoms shall be admitted at reduced tariff rates. The purpose of congress was to encourage thereby the upbuilding of an American merchant marine.

President Wilson had no sooner signed the bill than the British, whose mercantile marine interest was chiefly threatened by the legislation, threatened retaliation. The act specifically directed the President to abrogate any commercial treaties that might interfere with carrying into effect the tariff discrimination in favor of goods carried in American bottoms. Mr. Wilson announced that he would not carry out the law, asserting that the abrogation of the treaties would precipitate a trade war.

Mr. Hoover is the fourth President to ignore this unrepealed provision of law. Senator Wesley L. Jones [Rep., Wash.], who was chairman of the senate committee that drafted the law, thinks that the excuses given for not carrying the provision into effect are not valid and that the President even at this late day should comply with the directions of congress.

Other Marine Laws Ignored.

Another provision of the merchant marine act of 1920 was that preferential rail rates were to be accorded goods imported and exported in American bottoms. This provision has not been complied with.

Another law more honored by Mr. Hoover in the breach than the observance is the La Follette seamen's act. That this law, with the exception of two or three provisions, is a dead letter is admitted by officials of the department of commerce to which its administration is committed.

As secretary of commerce in the Harding administration Mr. Hoover appears to have enforced this law with some vigor. The change came in the Coolidge administration when the number of violations recorded dropped from 405 in the last year of Harding to 104 in the first year of Coolidge and declined further to 34 in the fiscal year of 1925.

Nonenforcement of this law is attributed to the complaints of American ship owners that they could not compete profitably with foreign shipping so long as they were compelled to bear the higher wage and other operation costs imposed upon them by the provisions of the La Follette act.

Still another law that is not generally enforced under the Hoover administration is the Mann act under which a man may be penalized for transporting a woman from one state to another for immoral purposes. Having found that this law was being used as an instrument of blackmail the department of justice laid down the rule that no prosecutions should be instituted thereunder except when the complaints are made by injured third parties and are devoid of any taint of blackmail.

Hoover Optimistic on His Return to Capital Over Economic Outlook

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., June 18.—[Special.]—President Hoover returned to Washington this afternoon optimistic over the improved conditions he found during his four day trip to the midwest and satisfied with the receptions accorded him in Indiana, Ohio, Illinois, and other states through which he passed.

According to the reports made to the President by those with whom he came in contact, the country's economic situation is looking up and the people are certainly more cheerful than they were three months ago. Bread lines, Mr. Hoover was informed, are a thing of the past; retail buying has somewhat increased, and the ameliorating effect was beginning to extend back into industry, particularly in the smaller communities.

Except in the northwest, where a shortage of rain has hurt the farms considerably, crops throughout the midwest were reported as being generous. The President, therefore, sees in this another favorable factor in that, leaving out the matter of farm commodity price levels, the large yield will give more employment for farm workers and more business to the railroads and all other industries connected with the handling of agriculture's products.

Sees Movement Back to Land.

As for the prices of farm commodities, it is being pointed out that though they may be low, so are all price levels low and that this year's crop will have been made at a cost considerably under the average.

Another trend which has impressed the President is what is being described as a considerable and real movement from the cities back to the land.

Though no predictions are being made, the administration is more confident than before the western trip that the demands for relief during the coming winter will be fewer and far less insistent. There will continue to be a measure of unemployment, it is felt; in fact, it is admitted that business and industry will be some time in reabsorbing the workers they have learned how to do without. But the general level of business and employment is expected to be higher.

New inventions and the industries growing out of them are being looked to, to give employment to workers thrown out of jobs by the process of retrenchment and the extended use of labor saving machinery.

Annoyed at Politics Gossip.

What did not please the President so much, it is understood, was the interpretation of his trip as a political maneuver. It is insisted that he did not so intend it and he was pictured as annoyed by persons who persisted in regarding him as the president of the Republican party instead of President of the United States.

"It is going to be difficult, however, to persuade many who watched the President's journey closely that his midwestern visit was without some political motive. The back platform appearances with their accompaniment of geniality; the number of Republican leaders who boarded the train at various points and traveled stages of the journey in the President's company; the close watch and anxious evaluation placed on the various receptions given to the President—all these were signs to those bent on interpreting that the swing through West Virginia, Kentucky, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and back again was indeed the first move of the Hoover campaign for reelection.

Evidences of Purpose Seen.

The aggressive way in which the President discussed the problem of the depression at Indianapolis and his outspoken disposal of the Harding administration incubus at Marion helped to make many political watchers believe Mr. Hoover was animated by an ambition for a second term.

In grading the reactions to the President's appearances, the demonstration at Indianapolis was certainly the least enthusiastic and that at Springfield the most cordial.

The President and those surrounding him were described as satisfied, however. It was said on their behalf that they did not look for, in fact did not want, anything resembling the whoopee type of reception. Mr. Hoover, it was explained, is not the sort of man to inspire that sort of thing.

The President, it is understood, is through with travel, for the next couple of months at least, and plans to spend the summer working in Washington.

GROUND 4 PILOTS FOR DISTURBING HOOVER'S SPEECH

Columbus, O., June 18.—[Special.]—Licenses of four Columbus aviators were temporarily suspended late today by a department of commerce aeronautics inspector, H. F. Rough, of Detroit, in connection with the flight of airplanes last Tuesday during the Harding memorial dedication at Marion, O., which it was claimed interfered with the addresses.

The Curtiss flying service at Port Columbus reported that the inspector suspended the licenses of Harold Distelhorst, John C. Corrodi, and Joseph Mackey, of the flying service and Grant Melvin, a private pilot, on orders by telephone from Washington.

President Hoover directed the department of commerce to investigate the flying of planes over the memorial during the dedication. The noise interfered with the speeches.

GRANTED $16,000 LOVE BALM FROM MARRIED MAN

Miss Lillian McQuillan, 35 years old, 1922 North Central Park avenue, won $16,000 for the ten years she spent as the sweetheart of William H. Evans, owner of the Evans Flexible Reamer corporation, 3513 Lincoln avenue, by the verdict of a jury returned yesterday before Judge Marcus Kavanagh in the Superior court.

Miss McQuillan sued Evans for breach of promise. They met in 1919 and shortly thereafter he proposed marriage on various occasions, she charged. The wedding day never arrived, however.

Evans denied all of Miss McQuillan's charges, asserting that she knew he had a wife living in California from the beginning of their association. A motion for a new trial, entered by his attorney, Victor Frohlich, is to be heard on July 2.

POSTPONE START OF MISS NICHOLS FLIGHT TO TODAY

New York, June 18.—[Special.]—Departure of Ruth Nichols on the first leg of her flight to France, which was supposed to take place today from Floyd Bennet field on Barren island, was postponed until tomorrow when the flyer discovered that several adjustments were still needed on her plane.

The decision to postpone start of the Atlantic flight came after Miss Nichols had flown her plane from the Jersey City airport to Bennett field. There she expressed her dissatisfaction with the functioning of certain instruments.

SENATE ADOPTS REMAP REPORT OF CONFERENCE

Expect House to Follow Suit Today.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., June 18.—[Special.]—The senate, tonight adopted the report of the joint conference committee on congressional remap by a vote of 32 to 3. Through this action, the upper chamber receded from the amendments it tacked on the bill, with the exception of those rectifying errors in boundary lines in the Cook county districts, and one downstate change. Whiteside county is put into the Winnebago district.

The joint report was presented in the house by Sol P. Roderick [Rep., Chicago] and was made a special order for tomorrow morning. House leaders look for concurrence without trouble, as the Winnebago shift is the only alteration in the 13 downstate districts.

Ten on Committee.

The joint conference committee which made the report which brought about the recession of the senate from its amendments was composed of: House — Mr. Roderick, Elmer J. Schnackenberg [Rep., Chicago], Roger F. Little [Rep., Urbana], George A. Fitzgerald [Dem., Chicago], and Frank W. McClure [Dem., Abingdon]. Senate—Richard J. Barr [Rep., Joliet], Charles H. Thompson [Rep., Harrisburg], Andrew S. Cuthbertson [Rep., Bunkerhill], Arthur A. Huebsch [Rep., Brookfield], and John Broderick [Dem., Chicago]. The conference report was signed by all members except Fitzgerald, McClure and Senator Thompson.

How Districts Stand.

The thirteen downstate districts now stand in the remap as follows:

15th—Winnebago, Stephenson, Jo Daviess, Carroll, Whiteside, Ogle, De Kalb, Lee and Boone.

16th—Rock Island, Mercer, Warren, Henderson, McDonough and Hancock.

17th—Henry, Knox, Fulton, Schuyler and Brown.

19th—McHenry, Kane, Kendall and La Salle.

20th—Kankakee, Livingston, Grundy, Ford, Iroquois and McLean.

21st—Champaign, Dewitt, Macon, Piatt, Moultrie, Shelby, Fayette and Effingham.

Ten in 22d District.

22d—Adams, Pike, Calhoun, Green, Scott, Morgan, Jersey, Cass, Mason and Menard.

23d—Sangamon, Christian, Montgomery, Macoupin, Bond and Logan.

24th—Madison and St. Clair.

25th—Vermilion, Edgar, Douglas, Coles, Cumberland, Clark, Jasper, Crawford, Richland, Lawrence and Wabash.

26th—Clay, Marion, Jefferson, Wayne, Edwards, Hamilton, White, Saline, Gallatin, Hardin, Pope, Johnson and Massac.

BANK OF ENGLAND HEAD AND MELLON HOLD CONFERENCE

"Unofficial Visit" Keeps Official Busy.

BY JOHN STEELE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, June 18. — Andrew W. Mellon, secretary of the treasury, today refused to deny that he was in London for the purpose of discussing war debts and reparations, but firmly refused to make a statement regarding his activities, despite the fact that it is known he has been in constant conference with British government officials and bankers.

MONTAGU NORMAN. [Underwood & Underwood.]

"I am not here on an official mission," Mr. Mellon said.

"It is reported that you are here to discuss the debt question," the correspondent replied.

"No, I have no statement to make," Mr. Mellon reiterated.

"Will you make any before leaving London?"

"I do not think there will be any occasion to give out a statement," Mr. Mellon added.

Visits Ramsay MacDonald.

Yesterday Mr. Mellon visited Prime Minister MacDonald, with whom he conferred for more than an hour. Mr. MacDonald said later that Mr. Mellon's visit was purely a courtesy call, but it became known today that Foreign Minister Arthur Henderson and other ministers were present. Another conference was held in the house of Montagu Norman this afternoon.

Montagu Norman, governor of the Bank of England, called at Mr. Mellon's hotel this morning and, after a long conversation remained for luncheon. It is known also that a number of other officials called on Mr. Mellon yesterday and today, but the utmost secrecy surrounds the activities in Mr. Mellon's hotel suite.

Another financial leader who talked at length with Secretary Mellon was Leon Gollet, assistant manager of the Bank of France.

It is understood that Mr. Norman at luncheon today impressed on Mr. Mellon the necessity for America to join hands with Great Britain to prevent an economic crash in Europe, and he is done either through the government or through private banks. Mr. Norman made great play of the action of the Bank of England in going to the aid of Austria after French bankers had refused to do anything unless they were given guarantees that there would be no customs union with Germany.

Europe on Verge of Smash.

Mr. Norman, it is reported, told Secretary Mellon that Europe was on the verge of a smash, and that if Austria had gone other nations would have followed. Mr. Mellon, it is said, was much impressed, and it was reported this afternoon that he is considering extending his trip to Paris and Berlin, after he has made a visit to his son at Cambridge university. In political circles here the talk is that any forgiveness of debt, or even the grant of a moratorium by the United States, will be discounted unless things become very much worse than they are at present and not unless an immediate crash is threatened.

The British foreign office today announced that Prime Minister MacDonald had accepted an invitation by Chancellor Bruening of Germany to visit Berlin with Foreign Secretary Arthur Henderson on July 17. The visit will return the recent visit of Chancellor Bruening and his foreign minister, Julius Curtius, of Chequers, when they pleaded with the British cabinet for a revision of reparations terms.

HOPE DELAY OF VISIT

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, June 18.—Germany, on being informed that Prime Minister MacDonald and Foreign Secretary Arthur Henderson had set July 17 as the date for their visit here, launched efforts to have the British statesmen change the date to July 21, the day Secretary of State Stimson is expected to arrive here. It is understood, however, that Mr. Stimson is anxious to keep his visit as unofficial as possible under the circumstances, and it is uncertain whether the maneuver can be arranged.

Rome to Greet Stimson.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME, June 17.—Preparations are being made for Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson's arrival in Naples on July 5.

The American embassy has said nothing as yet as to what is known about Mr. Stimson's plans while he is in Rome, beyond that he wants to emphasize the vacation aspect of his visit as much as possible.

Stimson Talks to Hoover.

Washington, D. C., June 18.—[Special.]—Final plans for his projected trip to Europe this summer will be discussed by Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson with President Hoover tomorrow. Tentative arrangements now made call for the departure of the secretary of state and Mrs. Stimson Wednesday or Saturday of this coming week. Whether any recent developments will cause a change in the secretary's plans was not disclosed today. Secretary Stimson has devoted the last few days to putting affairs at the state department in shape for an extended trip abroad. Disarmament and war debts will be the major subjects of discussion during the conferences between Mr. Stimson and foreign officials.

Fined as Speeder

MRS. PHYLLIS FAHERTY.

The name of Michael J. Faherty, former president of the board of local improvement, failed to impress Motorcycle Policeman Henry Groh in Evanston yesterday when he arrested Mrs. Phyllis Faherty, 34 years old, daughter-in-law of the politician, for driving past a stoplight.

"It's no use giving me a ticket," she told him. "I'll have it fixed. My father-in-law is Michael J. Faherty, who used to be president of the board of local improvements."

Instead of giving her a ticket, he took her to the police station. There she had an immediate trial before Justice of the Peace James L. Corcoran, and without mentioning her father-in-law again paid a fine of $3 and costs. She gave her address as 4300 Lake Shore drive. The license of her car, however, was issued to Charles L. Faherty, 3735 Pine Grove avenue.

POLICE POWERS, 50 MEN DENIED HIGHWAY FORCE

BY PERCY WOOD.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., June 18.—[Special.]—Complete police powers and an increase of 50 men were denied the state highway maintenance force by the house today. On third reading, senate bill No. 398, which would give the highway officers the same rights as city police and county sheriffs, failed to pass by a vote of 56 to 84.

REPRESENTATIVE R. G. SODERSTROM.

The bill was backed by the Emmerson administration forces, but only 50 Republicans voted for it, 25 electing to join 59 Democrats in opposition. Six Democrats, on the other hand, joined hands with the Republicans who wished it passed.

The opposition of organized labor, which believed the bill "would clothe tryanny in the mantle of law," in the words of Representative R. G. Soderstrom [Rep., Streator], president of the state federation of labor, and arguments that the highway force, if given broader powers, would run rough shod over the principles of home rule, were responsible for the defeat. A number of the members who voted against it said they did not object to adding 50 men to the 300 now functioning, but did not believe they should be allowed concurrent powers with local or county authorities.

BAIL BOND BILLS PASSED BY HOUSE; GO TO EMMERSON

Springfield, Ill., June 18.—[Special.]—Three senate bills sponsored by the Commonwealth Club of Chicago to rectify evils in the bail bond system were passed in the house this afternoon and now go to Gov. Emmerson. The bills were introduced by Senator Arthur A. Huebsch [Rep., Brookfield].

One provides for the licensing of all persons giving bail, criminal and quasi-criminal cases, by the department of trade and commerce, with a clause for the revocation of licenses.

The others clarify and correct sections of the bond law and provide that the lien of any bill bond or recognizance shall continue for three years unless sooner terminated.

Failure to appear on a bond forfeiture is made a felony with imprisonment in the penitentiary for one year as the penalty. Another provision is that in case of writs of error the supersedeas bond shall require the defendant to appear at the next term of court, if there is a fixed term, but if not, at the next succeeding session.

COURT REFORM BILLS KILLED; COUNCILS LIVE

Springfield, Ill., June 18.—[Special.]—Eighty bills, the complete program of the judicial advisory councils of Illinois and Cook county, late tonight went into the discard in the house. The only measure consented to was the bill to continue the life of the commissions for two more years. This carries a $20,000 appropriation.

"Maybe by that time the lawyers of the state can be educated to these changes," said Minority Leader Michael Igoe, a member of the commission, who suggested passage of the one bill when it appeared certain that downstate opposition probably would kill all the others. "I'm sorry the members cannot see the advantages of this legislation, but apparently they can't, and we on the commission will have to take the blame."

The downstaters launched a furious attack on the measures the minute they were called on second reading. It had been hoped they could be passed to third reading tonight in order to be put through tomorrow. The session is due to end Saturday.

Motions to strike the enacting clause greeted the first of the court reform bills as it came to the members' attention. Mr. Igoe and Roger F. Little [Rep., Champaign] were supporting them.

"But we might as well serve notice right now," warned Frank G. Thompson [Rep., Mount Vernon] that these bills are not going to pass the house this session. Downstate lawyers have little sympathy for them."

"They are progressive changes in the court system," replied Little.

Thomas P. Sinnett [Dem., Rock Island] said: "The same rules of court procedure have been in effect since I began to practice law. If you pass these bills everything will be changed —an entire new system will be set up. It's too much to ask of the lawyers of Illinois."

The measure to continue the commissions passed without a dissenting vote.

WATCHMAN KILLS METROPOLIS BOY; INQUIRY STARTED

Hint of Prohibition Zeal in Slaying.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.
(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)

Metropolis, Ill., June 18.—Down in this old Ohio river town, near the spot where Aaron Burr dreamed of an alien empire outside the Union and where Illinois is southern in temperament and development, the killing off of young Asbury Smith of Metropolis on the night of May 21, last, is a matter that seems to require a little ventilation. It was nearly covered up once by accident or design as an automobile accident.

The boy's death by the bullet of Thomas Gregory, night policeman of this city, can hardly be added to the list of prohibition killings, although this angle of justification has been thrown into the case and it bears many of the earmarks of famous killings under this cause, including the old excuse of "shooting at the tires" which federal agents have so often invoked successfully.

Question in Doubt.

Now one of the earnest questions asked along the shady benches in the courtyard is whether Smith actually had the smell of liquor on his breath when he died and whether the fruit jars had in them the odor of alcohol. Officialdom shakes its head and looks knowingly, though there are no specifications in their book of judgment beyond the words of friends of the killer.

It is not to be taken from this that Metropolis is fanatically dry. Like the rest of the rural south, it is politically so, but it has a bearing and may furnish a way out in this case.

Gregory, who was appointed a policeman by the mayor and paid by merchants to watch their stores at night, had only a slight jurisdiction in prohibition law violations at the best and the shooting took place beyond the city limits where his official seal carried him.

The aftermath of the killing, the report that it was an automobile accident, and the verdict of the coroner's jury furnish matter of interest. Gregory, who is out on bonds of $1,000, will go to trial in the fall term of court here.

Had No License For Car.

Smith who was 19 years old, had come to town on the evening of May 21 to see his girl. He had been working on the farm of a cousin near town and was driving an old car without a license. He was a little afraid of "the law" on this account, according to his father, Jim Smith, a Metropolis laborer, and this may account for his actions. He was never able to tell his own story and so it must come from Gregory.

"Night Policemen Sleeter and I were making our rounds in the city car when we saw a car standing in the middle of the road," Gregory told the jury of substantial business men gathered together by Coroner James Bates. "We started to see about the car and some one whistled. We saw some one run and get in the car. He came from behind the other side of the car."

"Did you call to him to stop?" queried Roy R. Helm, state's attorney.

"Yes sir, we blowed the horn and police whistle.'

Q.—Then what happened? A.—We went plumb out 12th street. He went pretty fast. It was rough and we had to slow down.

Q.—What finally took place? A.—I think I shot two or three times, I don't know which, and he didn't stop. After we got over the railroad [the city limits] I shot one or two times, out the side of the car.

Q.—Was it your intention to shoot into the car? A.—No sir, I wanted to scare him.

Q.—What happened to the car? A.—It ran into a ditch and broke a wheel. We stopped and found it had run into another car.

Q.—What was in the car? A.—Fruit jars.

Q.—Anything in the jars? A.—Not that I know.

Q.—Was he alive? A.—Yes, but not conscious. We took him to Dr. Fisher's hospital. He died in 20 or 30 minutes. I didn't know he was shot.

Dr. J. H. Fisher testified that the wound had apparently been made by a bolt or something of that sort.

There was an interruption at this time and Dr. Fisher was asked to make a further examination of the body. The undertakers had discovered something. When Dr. Fisher resumed the stand he said:

"I want to make a little explanation. The history of the case I had last night was that he was in an auto wreck. I felt for fractures. I wasn't thinking of gun shot. I overlooked a place in the back of the skull. I didn't see that last night. On further examination it shows as apparently a bullet going in from the back."

Q.—Your opinion now is that he came to his death by gun shot? A.—I think so.

Q.—What would you say as to his being intoxicated? A.—I smelt liquor on his breath.

Q.—In your judgment had he been drinking? A.—I think so.

It was by this narrow margin that the death came close to being listed as an auto accident, with no mention of a shooting.

Find Bullet in Wound.

B. W. Littlemeyer, deputy coroner and embalmer, and his assistant, were the ones who discovered the real cause of death. They called at the hospital after the boy had died. Littlemeyer took one look at the body and asked if he had been shot. There was a group of men there, including Mayor W. H. Karr. Some one told Littlemeyer that it was an auto wreck. At the embalmer's room they probed the wound and found a shot and where it had entered. Then they called in the coroner. They went to the scene of the shooting and found a hole in the rear curtain of the car, which looked like a bullet hole.

Samuel Fitzpatrick, a Negro, testified he heard the shots from his house and saw the flash of light and heard some one say, "We must have got him." The carefully selected coroner's jury decided the case as follows:

"We find that he came to death by a gun shot wound and from the evidence the shot came from the revolver of Thomas Gregory, a policeman of the city of Metropolis. And we further find that the officer was not shooting directly at the deceased, who was fleeing from the officers, and the shot was not fired with intent to kill and was accidental, and that Thomas Gregory be exonerated from the killing."

Father Not Satisfied.

But Jim Smith, the father, who has been in trouble with the law himself, was not willing to exonerate Gregory and he went after State's Attorney Helm to get a murder warrant issued. Mr. Helm, after studying the case and looking up decisions in similar cases, decided that it was only a manslaughter case at the best and had such a warrant against Gregory sworn out. Three days later a similar warrant, charging Sleeter as an accessory, was issued, and there the case rests.

"I never had any education," said Jim Smith, the father. "Me and the boy bached together here for a long time and we couldn't get work, so I tells him to separate and he goes out in the country and is helping those folks out. He was trying to help me. He was a good boy. I hold that was murder, but then, I ain't educated. I've got some friends and they raised some money to prosecute, but Mr. Helm says he don't want any one to help him."

DUKE FOOTBALL STAR SHOT WHILE FLEEING FROM AUTO CRASH

Charlotte, N. C., June 18.—(AP)—Shot as he fled from police after an automobile wreck shortly before dawn today, Lowell Mason, Duke university star quarter back, lay in a hospital here tonight with a serious wound which may mean the end of his grid career.

The city council has ordered Police Capt. Alex West and two patrolmen suspended pending an investigation.

Taken to the police station with two companions after their car had struck a milk truck about 4 a. m., Mason was said by police to have made a break for freedom. The trio was drinking, officers said.

As the youth darted down a side street Capt. West, behind a nearby building, heard other officers crying "stop him," and fired twice into the ground, he said. Mason disappeared, but was found an hour later wandering in a Negro district.

Capt. West said he fired merely in an attempt to frighten the fleeing youth into surrender and insisted his bullet could have struck Mason only by ricocheting from a rock or wall. Ed Pittman, chief of police, also held to the accident theory.

Earlier in the night officers had taken Mason to headquarters for drunkenness, but released him when J. R. Wilkes of Charlotte and F. T. Dellinger of Cherryville, State college students, promised to take him home.

After the wreck some hours later Wilkes was charged with driving while drunk and Dellinger with drunkenness.

TRAFFIC SURVEY SHOWS NATION IS AGAIN ON TOUR

Traveling Motorists Pour Through Chicago.

Motorists throughout the nation are taking to the highways again after the comparative drop in motor travel last year, according to visual evidence offered on Chicago's boulevards where a marked increase has been noted recently in the number of automobiles bearing out of state license tags. Cars have been observed with licenses from states from Florida to Minnesota and from California to New York.

Both traffic police and Chicago Motor club officials have noted the increase. They explain it in part as one of the effects of the depression, saying that many people out of work are traveling about seeking jobs or prefer to be on the move rather than remain at home with nothing to do. Another factor, motor club officials say, is the number of hard roads completed throughout the country in recent years.

County Police Make Count.

Chief William Collins and his men of the Cook county highway police yesterday took a count of cars licensed by other states which were traveling on highways in the metropolitan area. During the three hours from 3 p. m. to 6 p. m. records were kept at Dempster and Waukegan roads, at Ogden and Harlem avenues, and at Torrence avenue and the Lincoln highway.

The survey showed the number of cars from other states as follows: Ohio, 61; California, 26; Pensylvania, 30; Texas, 4; New York, 36; Michigan, 42; Iowa, 29; Tennessee, 15; South Dakota, 7; North Dakota, 2; Indiana, 138; New Jersey, 4; West Virginia, 3; Kansas, 3; Florida, 5, and Minnesota, 11.

Chief Collins said that from his observations he believes the number of out of state cars to be greater than ever before. Most of the visitors are of the tourist class, he said.

Information Calls Increase.

The touring department of the Chicago Motor club reported that in the first five months of the year the club has received 155,000 calls for information on touring, an increase of 8,000 over last year. While motors club officials say that the number of calls received from out of town drivers is large they have no exact figure as no record is kept of the source of calls for information.

Club officials estimate that many millions of dollars will be spent during this year by motorists driving for pleasure in the United States. Other millions will be spent by American motorists in Canada, Mexico and Europe.

PREDICTS PROFIT FOR LARGE SCALE HOME PROJECTS

Prof. Woodbury Reports Survey Here.

Present and probable future market conditions in residential properties in Chicago are distinctly favorable to a program of large scale construction of housing for families with annual incomes under $2,500, according to a survey just completed by Prof. Coleman Woodbury of the Institute for Economic Research of Northwestern university.

Although in the higher rental districts a surplus of housing facilities exists, the vacancy percentage in the lower rental but more extensive areas indicates a need for quick resumption of building, Prof. Woodbury found. His conclusion was that private capital could safely and profitably be invested in projects similar to the Wilkinson Boulevard Garden apartments for Negroes, built by Julius Rosenwald.

"Attractive As Investments."

Commenting yesterday on the results of his survey, Prof. Woodbury said: "I agree with others familiar with housing problems that economic conditions just now make large scale, low renting housing developments exceptionally attractive as investments.

"I also am convinced that a definite program of such construction, reviving activity in the building industry, would do more toward promoting prosperity than almost any other plan which has been proposed. It would put the industry off dead level, start capital moving through a basic industry, and furnish employment. In my opinion the building industry itself could well afford to help finance such projects by furnishing second mortgage capital from which it would reap its own returns."

The Woodbury report was prepared for members of the large scale operations committee of the Hoover conference on home building and home ownership which Prof. Woodbury is assisting.

Facts Covered in Survey.

Two kinds of information were sought by Prof. Woodbury: First, the record of residential building in Chicago during the last few years and, second, the amounts of vacancy in the low rental districts of the city. Its sources included a postal survey of the city by districts, material published by the Chicago Association of Commerce, the opinions of real estate men, of officers of the Chicago Real Estate board, of building and loan association officers, of a member of the staff of the county assessor's office, and of settlement workers.

As a basis for his residential construction data, Prof. Woodbury calculated from the 1920 and 1930 census figures that during the decade the number of Chicago families increased 18,315 or an average of 15,691 a year. It found that during the ten year period new housing facilities were provided for 214,078 families or 181 per cent of the population increase. The number of families provided for and the percentage of the population increase represented by these families, by years, was as follows:

1922	24,287	154.40
1923	33,532	213.75
1924	35,905	228.82
1925	39,519	251.89
1926	41,118	263.95
1927	41,391	263.53
1928	34,967	219.33
1929	19,977	150.05
1930	3,141	17.47
1931 [6 months]	450	9.65

Prof. Woodbury divided the types of buildings into single family, two family, and multi-family structures. He was unable to separate them as to rental rates or sales prices. He pointed out, however, that:

"The data does indicate clearly the sharp slump in 1929 in the amount of residential construction and the almost complete paralysis of residential building during the last 18 months which seems destined to endure for several more months at least. The drop in 1929 was particularly sharp in apartment houses.

Rise in High Income Classes.

"Although it should be remembered that much of the building up to about 1928 was occasioned by the general housing shortage of the war and immediate post-war years, a considerable surplus of certain types of housing structure was undoubtedly piled up during the years from 1925 to 1928. This is clearly, however, this surplus must be reduced rapidly by such conditions as have existed since 1928 if population grows even slowly and if 'doubling up' in living quarters is to be decreased.

"Probably at least 75 per cent of the families of Chicago and of those added yearly to its population fall in the income groups under $2,500.

"In the higher rental districts vacancy percentages admittedly are high. This condition is probably largely attributable to loose financing and the usual failure to realize how relatively small are the income classes which can afford to live in such districts. In the lower rental districts with their large proportion of two family dwellings and 'flats' the vacancy percentages are smaller—around 3 per cent is suggested by some. If vacant buildings actually unfit at present for habitation were excluded this percentage would probably be somewhat reduced."

Several of the authorities interviewed by Prof. Woodbury expressed the belief that the vacancy in lower rental properties at present was largely due to "doubling up" and that if the necessity for such a money saving measure could be removed the vacancies in this grade of housing would disappear.

Prof. Woodbury pictured the low income family areas in Chicago as a vast virgin field for large scale housing operators. In the past, he said, they have confined themselves largely to high rental buildings, particularly along the lake front and in the suburban districts, ignoring the first ring of property around the loop which, although advantageously located, is populated by hundreds of persons of moderate incomes.

POLICE FLOUNDER AMONG THEORIES IN STARR'S DEATH

Solution to Mystery Seems No Nearer.

New York, June 18.—[Special.]—With another twenty-four hours of inquiry to their credit, police authorities investigating the drowning of Starr Faithfull were no nearer a decision as to whether she was murdered after being drugged or had committed suicide during a period of mental depression.

The investigation, after a flurry of excitement over an erroneous report that the young woman had been seen in Grand Central terminal the afternoon of her disappearance, veered back to the theory that the girl met her death in a plunge from a boat outbound from New York harbor.

The theory of suicide in the Faithfull case gained ground in Nassau county official circles after receipt of a cablegram from Cunard line officers in London stating that a letter written by the girl to Dr. G. Jameson Carr, dated and mailed on June 4, "indicated a fully premeditated design of suicide within the next twenty-four hours."

At the same time, Inspector Harold King, asserting that "some very recently discovered clues" had revived his interest in the passengers aboard the Mauretania and other ships, ordered a check of the tides and winds from June 5, when Starr disappeared, to June 8, when her body was found on the sands of Long Island.

The Cunarder Mauretania, which sailed at 5 p. m. on June 5 is believed to have been visited by Starr on the morning she disappeared, and it is now believed possible that she may have returned aboard just before the liner's departure.

Dr. G. Jameson Carr is scheduled to reach New York Monday on the Cunarder Laconia, bringing with him the farewell letter written by Starr the day before she disappeared.

Dr. Carr, ship's surgeon on the Franconia, last saw Starr on May 29, a week before her disappearance, when she stowed aboard the Franconia after it had left the pier and was put ashore on a tug.

CAFE MANAGER IN CAPONE NET GIVES U. S. BOND

Potson Surrenders; Press Hunt for Others.

Mike Potson, manager of Colosimo's cabaret at 22d street and Wabash avenue, surrendered yesterday at the federal building, furnished a $2,500 bond, and was released. Potson was one of those indicted with Al Capone for conspiracy to evade the prohibition laws. He is charged with owning the property at 3136 South Wabash avenue on which prohibition agents found a Capone brewery and 66,000 gallons of high powered beer.

Meanwhile, search for others of the 33 department heads and helpers in the Capone syndicate was continued by federal agents. The operatives centered their efforts on the arrest of Joe Fusco, business manager of the beer combine. Steve Swoboda, Capone's brewmaster, and Bert Delaney, superintendent of manufacturies, are the only other two of importance among those named with Capone in the indictment.

Froelich to Stay Here.

Attorney General Mitchell stated in Washington yesterday that William J. Froelich, special assistant attorney general, who assisted Mr. Johnson in the coördination of federal forces for the attack on the Capone gang, would be needed in Chicago for some time. There had been reports that Mr. Froelich would be moved on to New York for similar duties there.

Robert E. Neely, acting collector of internal revenue, awaited the arrival from Washington of a jeopardy assessment which will give him legal authority to seize Capone's property to satisfy delinquent income taxes.

Assistants U. S. Attorneys General O. A. Youngquist and Charles P. Sisson, in charge of personnel and administration and prohibition and taxes respectively, conferred during the day with U. S. District Attorney George E. Q. Johnson. They declared they were here to discuss the crowded federal court docket in this district and means to clear it up.

On Tour of U. S.

The two prosecutors said their visit was part of a tour throughout the country begun several weeks ago. They insisted that the Capone indictment and plea of guilty had nothing to do with their visit here.

"Our main purpose is to expedite the disposal of cases," the two prosecutors said. "Our message to the district attorneys of the land is a request for more vigorous enforcement of the prohibition law as well as other federal laws and a concentration upon major violations of all laws."

MOTHER KILLED, GIRL IS HURT IN NAPHTHA BLAST

Mrs. Sophie Maciejewski, 47 years old, 11749 South Michigan avenue, was fatally injured yesterday when naphtha in which she was cleaning a dress exploded in her home. She died last night in the Roseland community hospital.

Her daughter, Miss Adele Maciejewski, 23 years old, was seriously burned on the arms and body by the explosion.

In another explosion, in the office of the Rome Coal company at 1001 South Fairfield avenue, two employés were seriously burned. They are Joseph Gootnick, 23 years old, 2555 Jackson boulevard, and Miss Anna Berry, 21 years old, 4248 Van Buren street.

Home After Being Praised by President

"Most Enjoyable"

United States Attorney George E. Q. Johnson, his wife and 12 year old son, Eugene, were back in Chicago yesterday after their reception by President and Mrs. Hoover at the governor's mansion at Springfield on Wednesday.

Mr. Johnson was summoned by the President to call at the executive mansion following the ceremonies of rededicating Lincoln's tomb. He declined to comment on his visit with the President, except to say that it was "most enjoyable."

It was presumed that President Hoover's purpose in inviting the district attorney to call upon him was to offer his congratulations over the successful termination of the government's two cases against Al Capone, who pleaded guilty to income tax evasion and conspiracy to violate the prohibition laws. The President was reported to have been particularly interested in breaking up the Capone gang.

Doody May Waive Jury in Murder Trial Today

Willie Doody, diminutive bandit, who was once under sentence of death for the murder of Police Chief Charles Levy of Berwyn, may waive a jury when his case is called for a second trial today in Judge John Prystalski's court. Attorney William Scott Stewart, representing Doody, gave this indication yesterday. The first conviction of Doody was reversed by the Illinois Supreme court last February.

New Cement to Speed Up Jackson Boulevard Paving

Use of a new quick drying cement will permit the paving of Jackson boulevard between La Salle and Sherman streets in less than three days, south park officials announced yesterday. Work will commence Saturday morning at 7 o'clock and the street will be reopened on Monday at 2 p. m., they said.

PURE MILK LAW CALLED INVALID BY HIGH COURT

Springfield, Ill., June 18.—(AP)—The pure milk law enacted by the general assembly in 1923 was declared unconstitutional by the Supreme court today.

The legislature of Illinois has not the power to enact a law prohibiting the use of cocoanut oil in combination with skim milk, the court ruled in upholding an opinion of the Circuit court of Montgomery county.

The case was the outgrowth of a suit by the state against the Carolene Products company, Litchfield, manufacturers of a product made by taking sweet skim milk, evaporating the moisture and adding cocoanut oil.

SAMMONS MUST STAY IN PRISON; WRIT IS DENIED

Death for Four Upheld by Supreme Court.

James [Fur] Sammons, public enemy No. 26, a gang machine gunner with a criminal record spanning 22 years, probably will spend the rest of his life in Joliet prison as the result of an Illinois Supreme court ruling yesterday. The court denied the gangster his freedom on a writ of habeas corpus and remanded him to the custody of the warden.

FUR SAMMONS.

Death sentences for four convicted killers were affirmed by the high court and a stay of execution granted to a fifth in a series of rulings on appeals in other criminal cases.

Four Doomed to Die.

The men doomed to the electric chair are Frank H. Bell and Richard Sullivan, convicted of the murder of Christ Patras, manager of the Villa Rica café, 2572 North Clark street, on June 16, 1930, and John Popescue and Charles Rocco. The last two pleaded guilty to the murder of Courtney R. Merrill, South Chicago banker, during a holdup Oct. 28, 1930. Oct. 16 was fixed as the date of the executions of all four.

The Supreme court allowed a supersedeas for John Preston convicted slayer of Miss Agnes Johnson, whom he attacked and killed after luring her on an automobile ride to a lonely Du Page county road two years ago. The stay of execution was issued pending a review of hearings on Preston's sanity in the Du Page County court. Preston's execution had been set for tonight. He had been found insane by one jury and later was held to be sane. The review was granted on the last sanity hearing.

Swanson Praises Ruling.

Local law enforcement officials expressed satisfaction over the Supreme court rulings, in particular that keeping Sammons in prison. "Very encouraging to the state's attorney in the performance of his duty," was the comment of State's Attorney Swanson upon the rulings.

Sammons was returned to Joliet Nov. 26, 1930, after a hearing before Chief Justice McGoorty of the Criminal court to serve out an unexpired 30 years of a 50 year term for murder. The parole board had terminated his parole and on April 17 of this year the Supreme court sustained this action. Sammons asked for a writ of habeas corpus, however, contending that a previous conviction for robbery should have been abrogated by his conviction for murder. The Supreme court yesterday overruled this contention.

Sammons' Parole Voided.

Sammons climaxed a long career of crime by killing Patrick Barrett, a saloonkeeper, May 17, 1903. A sentence of death for murder was commuted to life imprisonment by former Gov. Yates a day before he was to be hanged. Later former Gov. Small commuted the life sentence to 50 years' imprisonment and less than a month later he was paroled. Three years afterward he won a final discharge. He was again imprisoned when the parole was voided a year ago.

The ruling yesterday was said to make it virtually certain that Sammons will remain in a cell the rest of his life. He is now 43 years old and will be 79 when the murder sentence is finished. He then faces a year to life sentence for the old burglary conviction.

Affirmation of the death sentences for Bell and Sullivan recalled a confession made by Bell while he was in jail last October that he participated in the murder of Alfred Lingle. Bell declared that he drove an automobile for Sullivan and Joseph H. Traum, an Indiana gangster, to the scene of Lingle's death. Patras, the café owner, he said, was killed in an effort to collect $10,000 he was to pay Bell and Sullivan for their job. The confession later was held to be a fabrication.

Denounce Each Other in Court.

The two were tried together for the killing of Patras. They bitterly denounced each other in court, Sullivan charging that Bell had "framed" him. They were found guilty in Judge Joseph Sabath's court and sentenced to death.

Rocco and Popescue, who are each 23 years old, confessed the killing of Merrill, whom they held up in the rear of the Union State bank of South Chicago. One of them stabbed him in the back. They also confessed killing John Schweiger, a mill worker. Judge Philip E. Finnegan of the Criminal court sentenced them to death despite their plea of guilty. He held that there were no mitigating circumstances.

CAPONE'S FALL WORK OF HONEST MEN ON JOB, MITCHELL SAYS

Washington, D. C., June 18.—(AP)—Attorney General Mitchell believes the government's success in its campaign against Al Capone shows that gang leaders can be eliminated "if you have honest men on the job and a real purpose."

Mitchell said today the justice department intended to "hit out at the gangster problem wherever it becomes particularly obnoxious," but that his branch of the government was not now planning any nation-wide drive throughout the larger cities.

From other government agencies word has come during the last week that gangster activities would be investigated not only in New York but also in such cities as Philadelphia, Detroit, Cleveland and St. Louis.

"There are certain things that federal agents can and will do regularly," Mitchell said, "but in the last analysis it is a local problem. It is true, however, that by such work as was done in Chicago we hope to inspire local authorities."

The attorney general was reluctant to comment upon the federal anti-gangster drive now in progress in New York beyond saying that justice department agents were at work there.

At the same time, however, indication that Capone's pleas of guilty to income tax and prohibition law violations will not end the federal drive against the Chicago underworld was given by the attorney general.

Orphans' Escort Fined for Passing Stop Light

James J. Kilberger, superintendent of the Bohemian orphanage at 5065 North Crawford avenue, was fined $11 yesterday by Magistrate Percy Harms of Niles Center on charges of passing a stop light and disorderly conduct. He was dismissed on a complaint that he resisted arrest. Kilberger was driving a truckload of orphans home from a picnic on May 31 when he was apprehended at Milwaukee avenue and Waukeegan road in Niles by Police Sergeant Warner Guenther.

NEW YORK HAS U. S. TAX DRIVE ON RACKETEERS

New York, June 18.—[Special.]—As the federal government concentrated its forces on this city today to accumulate evidence against racketeers who have paid no income tax on their earnings from the sale of drugs and liquor, one of the leading beer runners of the city, Arthur [Dutch] Schultz, was virtually delivered into their hands. He is in the west side jail under $150,000 bail on three criminal charges, and Dan Iamascia, one of his lieutenants, captured with him this morning, lay dead in a hospital.

ARTHUR [DUTCH] SCHULTZ. [Acme Photo.]

Two detectives who caught Schultz wounded Iamascia and put three other gangsters to flight in a pistol battle in 5th avenue and found $18,545 in the gang leader's pockets when they searched him for weapons. Police Inspector John A. Lyons informed George Z. Medalie, United States attorney, of this find and it is expected that Mr. Medalie and Lyons will confer in a day or two on plans for cooperating toward the end that Schultz may be picked up on federal charges in the event that he dodges the criminal counts.

Schultz, whose real name is Arthur Flegenheimer, has been arrested nine times in the last twelve years for everything from disorderly conduct to homicide, but there is only one conviction on his record.

ADVERTISE IN THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE

GIANT SEAPLANE LANDS AT BAHIA ON LONG CRUISE

Will Go to the Brazilian Capital.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

RAO PAULO, Brazil, June 18.—The German seaplane DO-X, which crossed the Atlantic on June 8, landed at Bahia at 1 p. m. today after a 600 mile flight along the coast from Natal. The plane will next go to Rio de Janeiro, to be exhibited before the populace of the Brazilian capital.

Three hours aftetr the flying ship lifted from the water at the harbor of Natal at 5:30 this morning it landed at Lagoa Grande, at Macelo, to refuel. At the takeoff the DO-X was only able to carry fuel for a three hour flight, on account of adverse winds which would not let it rise from the water with a heavier load.

Ship Draws Huge Crowds.

People in all the towns along the route of the ship turned out en masse to witness the flying boat cruise by at almost a 100 mile an hour clip, and hundreds lined the lake shore at Macelo when the DO-X settled down gracefully to fill her tanks.

After an hour and a half stay at Lagao Grande, the ship roared away again at 10:09, circling above the town twice before turning its nose southward to Bahia, where it landed safely three hours later.

At Bahia the crew of the DO-X will tune up the ship, and refuel. Following an indefinite stay in the capital, it will hop off to the United States.

Accidents Pursue Plane.

The DO-X left Alternhein, Switzerland, last November, flew to England, and then to Lisbon, Portugal, where a fire destroyed one wing of the ship. After extensive repairs it was taken to the Canaries and thence to Bolama, Portuguese West Africa. Several attempts were made to hop off for Brazil over the south Atlantic route, and finally on June 6 it left Cape Verde islands and completed a 1,400 mile over-water flight.

The ship is under the command of Friedrich Christiansen.

HOLD THREE FOR SLAYING.

Herrin, Ill., June 18.—[Special.]—Bennie Johnston, 26, of Scottsboro is dead from a bullet wound in his stomach and Roland Kent, 30, Robert Hill, 29, Albert Clayton, 31, are in the Marion jail as a result of a pistol battle in Scottsboro, near Marion, last night. Police are unable to determine which of the three fired the fatal shot.

What to Do on 10 Day Train Ride Across Siberia? Drink Red Hot Tea All Day!

BY HENRY WALES.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ABOARD THE TRANS-SIBERIAN EXPRESS, May 8 [By Mail.]—What the deuce does one do all day long, day after day, on a train for ten days, is what I always wondered, having in mind the tortures of the one day train from Paris to Geneva, or the misery of the four day ride, Paris to Constantinople.

Well, you'd be surprised how the time passes, and without being able to talk any language to any one, either. At the beginning of the trip you are all full of pep and hop out at every station and walk briskly up and down for exercise, and study the time table (if you have one) and locate the place on the map, and check up on time, whether you are late, etc.

Checking Time a Hard Job.

That business of checking up with your watch is your first disillusion. They operate the railway all across Russia on Moscow time, although the country is divided into eight zones and there is seven hours difference in time between the capital and Vladivostok. The porter explained that it would be confusing to the railroaders as well as to the customers to keep on changing the hour every thousand miles or so—and besides, it would be deleterious to watches.

So here we are, going to bed when our watches say it is only 3 or 4 o'clock in the afternoon, and getting up in broad daylight when they show it's midnight, and eating lunch with the sun overhead when the hour hand is at 6 o'clock. We are due in Vladivostok at 7:15 p. m., according to the time table, but I now find that it means 2:15 in the morning, with the seven hours tacked on.

Russian Cleverness Bared.

Imagine running a train 6,000 miles for ten days and even then contriving to land it at such an unearthly hour as 2 in the morning? But the Russians are clever at that. Most trains are scheduled to arrive places at unheard of hours, and you can't even count on being saved by the train running late, as it frequently rolls in an entire 24 hours late, so there you are, arriving at the same hour but a day behind.

It takes a lot of cunning to arrange these things, especially in view of the hotel crisis in this man's country and the fact that when you land anywhere you can't get a room right away but must sit around on your luggage for a few hours, waiting for a place to be available. You sit on your baggage, by the way, and tie down whatever pieces you can't sit on to prevent it being stolen. Nailing off suitcases and valises, not to mention hats, coats, and overshoes, is one of the things the Russians didn't need a five year plan to develop.

What They Use Baggage Cars For.

Speaking of baggage, I found out what they carry in Russian baggage cars. Empty bottles. Empty bottles and empty crates they keep the bottles in. That's all. No Russian or any other traveler in Russia ever confides his baggage to any one, never leaves it out of his sight.

My impedimenta consists of a big suit case, a normal suit case, my typewriter, a rucksack containing my provisions, a six foot duffle bag full of everything, chiefly bedding, a package of books and maps and copy paper and carbon, rubbers, coat, hat and camera. It is coiled and stowed and packed all over this compartment and my poor roommate can only find a corner of the opposite window seat to plank himself on, but he is not kicking because I give him a cigaret every so often.

I have a long steel chain and a padlock and link everything up together and then snap the chain around a stanchion of the car so that thieves would have to lug this sleeper right off the wheels to get away with anything from me—unless they split open the duffle bag and suit cases with a knife, which is not playing fair.

Drinks Tea to Kill Time.

You drink fifteen or twenty cups of tea a day in a train, and that kills a lot of time. They serve it red hot and you hold it and burn your fingers from the glass for about ten minutes. Then imbibe it slowly and that's an other ten minutes. It takes about 45 minutes to wash, because the water comes out of the faucets so slowly in a tiny little stream it takes five minutes to rinse off your hands. Shaving requires half an hour, what with fetching the hot water in a tea glass from the samovar and losing the cap to the tube of shaving cream.

Well, you write a few pieces or think a few thoughts and it's time to put on the lunch act, and then you read a short story, or investigate a few maps to see exactly where Kashgar is, and how the new Russian railway wall thrust straight into the vitals of China, and then it's time for supper. After supper you figure now is the time to go to bed right away before my roommate comes back from the dinner and starts to converse in Polish-German, so you hop into bed [one blanket per person] and pretend you're asleep when he comes in.

Roommate on Way to Exile.

My roommate is a young Russian engineer who is being exiled to Okhotsk, somewhere near Kamchatka, because he made some mistake, and every hour or two a little G. P. U. soldier riding back in a hard car, comes up and peeks in to see if he is still with us.

I had another roommate previously, who was foxy. He went to bed very early, about 7 p. m., and hopped into the lower, and then, when I roared, said he was sorry and it was all a mistake and made as though to hop into the upper, to show his good faith. But I said, "No, stay where you are a minute," and called in the porter and had him change the sheets and pillows first, so the clean ones were down on my bed, and he took the same ones up with him.

I fetched some vermin exterminator with me, but have had no shooting yet. Won't have, either, as it is getting colder and colder as we go east and north, and will continue to do so until we hit Kharbarovsk.

Averages 28 Miles and Hour.

I have figured it all out, and find that this train averages about 28 miles an hour across Asia, and could be jacked up to do 30 or 35 easily if they would cut out about a million stops and if they could be sure the rolling stock wouldn't fall to pieces from the strain, and if they had some locomotives that didn't leak steam all over.

Twenty minutes is the longest we stop anywhere, according to schedule, and we have only exceeded that once. That was waiting to get a new locomotive that hadn't come in from its run yet. Generally the stop is six minutes, but that runs into a lot of time when you are making about twenty stops a day.

Three hours is the most we have gone yet without a stop, covering about 75 miles doing it. From Paris to Calais the Golden Arrow runs 185 miles without a stop in just three hours. At that rate we could cross the continent to Vladivostok in less than six days.

2,600,000 VOLT X-RAY SHOT BY THREE FOOT TUBE

Power Beats All Radium in the World.

Pasadena, Cal., June 18.—(AP)—A 2,600,000 volt X-ray tube, built of paper, rubber and aluminum and reported by two German professors, proved a shock today to America's leading scientists.

This sensational tube, it was reported, is but three feet long, operates at 2,600,000 volts, and produces hard gamma rays equal to 100,000 grams of radium, more than all in use today throughout the world.

The announcement of the tube was made in a paper by Profs. F. Lange and A. Brasch of the University of Berlin, presented to the American Association for the Advancement of Science in session here.

Fruit of Long Effort.

The story presented from their report was one of the most fascinating and romantic of the strange mysteries of science. It grew out of the spectacular work started by the two Germans in 1927, when they went to the Swiss Alps to follow out Benjamin Franklin's idea of getting power from the thunderbolts. Science had been told years ago of their 15,000,000 volt natural laboratory.

From this they went into construction of X-ray tubes. Dr. Alexander Goets of the California Institute of Technology revealed the story in interpreting their paper today.

Electron Glide Eliminated.

They made simple use of the problems that have baffled the most advanced experts in building X-ray tubes. One of these was the electron glide along the inside surface of the modern X-ray tube that causes breakdowns. So they discarded the peculiar shaped glass tubes and constructed one of alternate ring layers of aluminum, paper and rubber.

Costly transformer oil is used in modern high voltage X-ray tubes. The Germans found the cheapest oils the best.

The layer tube of aluminum, rubber and paper eliminated the troublesome electron glide, and then the German converted these electrons to use by inserting a little cylinder of porcelain in the center of one end of the tube down which the electrons glide like a greased pole, then shoot straight down to the outlet for proper use.

May Solve Mystery.

Out of the development of this tube, it was reported, a solution may be expected of the mystery of the cosmic ray, and tremendous new advances in medical use of the X-ray. Power is furnished by a surge generator, of condensor type, and tubes may be constructed up to 7,000,000 volts, the paper set forth.

The gamma ray is so powerful it drills a hole an inch deep in the anti-cathode, and can penetrate a foot of lead.

The largest X-ray tubes in use today are the 900,000 volt cascaded tube at Memorial hospital, New York, and the 750,000 volt Lauritsen tube here. The California Institute of Technology is building a 1,200,000 volt tube here.

842,057 Foreign Born Listed In Chicago Out of 3,376,438

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., June 18.—[Special.] — Poland, Germany, Russia, Sweden and Italy in the order named furnished the largest number of white foreign born residents in Chicago at the time the 1930 census was taken, the department of commerce announced today. Other countries contributing materially to the white foreign born population were listed as Czecho-Slovakia, the Irish Free State, Lithuania, Canada, and England. Poland led the list with 149,622 out of a total population of 3,376,438 on April 1, 1930. The total foreign born white population in 1930 was given as 842,057, compared to 805,482 in 1920.

The tabulation of foreign born whites was made public a few hours after the commerce department had released figures showing the population of Chicago by age, sex and color for 1930 and 1920. These statistics disclosed that the masculine population predominated in Chicago by a matter of 45,000 persons.

Males Predominate.

Out of the total population, 1,710,663 were male and 1,665,775 female. The native whites numbered 2,275,674, compared with 842,057 foreign born white. Negroes numbered 233,903, and other races 24,804.

Although the males predominated in total numbers, an examination of the census figures showed that there were more women than men in Chicago within the 15 to 29 year age groups. Of Chicago's population between 15 and 19 years of age 150,851 were feminine and 141,724 masculine. There were 168,748 women between the ages of 20 and 24, compared with 156,435 men. In the next age group, that from 25 to 29, there were 164,927 women and 164,473 men.

Of the total population of the city, 24.1 per cent are under 15 years of age; 18.3 per cent are from 15 to 24; 36.2 per cent from 25 to 44 years of age; 17.3 per cent are from 45 to 64 years of age, and 4 per cent are 65 years of age and over.

Children Under 5 Decrease.

The number of persons under one year of age was 50,056 as compared with 51,154 in 1920, representing a loss of 1.2 per cent. The entire group of children under 5 years of age decreased from 272,455 in 1920 to 255,359 in 1930, or 6.3 per cent. All other age groups increased.

The Scotch, Poles, Jugo-Slavs, Rumanians, Lithuanians, Italians and Turks registered the largest percentage gain in foreign born white population. Of the total number of foreign born whites 149,622 were born in Poland, 111,366 in Germany, 78,462 in Russia, 73,960 in Italy, 65,735 in Sweden, 48814 in Czecho-Slavakia, 47,385 in the Irish Free State, and 7,404 in Northern Ireland, 31,430 in Lithuania, 29,831 in Canada, and 26,237 in England.

4 BANKERS ON TRIAL TODAY IN LARCENY CASE

Alexander Flower, chairman of the board; Samuel Flower, president; Frank Fowler, director, and Louis Frank, cashier and director of the Roosevelt-Bankers' State bank, will go on trial this morning before Judge Joseph Burke on a charge of larceny.

The bank closed Aug. 2, 1930, with an estimated shortage of $772,000. The Flower brothers and Frank are accused of misappropriating the funds. The case will be the first test of the efficacy of the new bankers' bureau formed by State's Attorney Swanson and directed by Assistant State's Attorney Henry Ayers.

The specific charge upon which the defendants will first be tried will be larceny of bonds worth $2,100 from the safekeeping department of the bank.

SUPREME COURT PROHIBITS LEGAL ADVICE BY BANK

Illinois Ruling Also Hits Corporation Practice.

Banks and trust companies have no right to engage in the practice of law, the Illinois Supreme court ruled yesterday. The high court assessed a fine of $1,000 against the Peoples Stock Yards State bank, now known as the Peoples National Bank and Trust company, for employing attorneys who furnished legal services to the bank's customers.

The ruling has been awaited with interest by all lawyers. It was regarded as a prohibition to the growing practice of corporations engaging in legal practice.

Bar Associations Bring Suit.

The Chicago Bar association was joined by the Illinois State Bar association in proceedings against the bank. Their petition asked that the bank be cited and forbidden to collect fees for legal services performed by its attorneys and that all other banks be similarly enjoined.

The original information in the case, filed in 1928, was referred by the Supreme court to Thomas J. Holmes, master in chancery of the Superior court, to hear as a commissioner. Evidence was offered to show that, although the bank abandoned its legal department in 1927, it had continued to give advice and perform services through its attorneys to its customers.

Bars Many Activities.

The question involved in the contempt proceedings was whether the bank was violating the rule against banks engaging in legal practice by furnishing this legal service. The Supreme court judges held that the practice of law was not confined to appearances in court and that the service amounted to unauthorized practice of the law.

The ruling bars banks and all corporations from giving legal advice, acting as attorney for executors and administrators, handling real estate transactions, examining abstracts of real estate titles, preparing wills and conducting foreclosure proceedings.

Rome Status Unchanged.

BY DAVID DARRAH.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME, June 18.—The position of the holy see and the Fascist government remained substantially unchanged today, with the probability that the question of principle, between the two contenders, arising out of interpretation of article 43 of the concordat, will be settled by the eventual appointment of a mixed commission, which, it is said, will be presided over by Senator Scialoja.

This, of course, would not come until after other matters incidental to the dispute, such as the alleged insults on the pope, damage to church property, and proof that members of the Catholic Action societies indulging in anti-Fascist activities had been settled by a further diplomatic exchange of notes.

The oratory circles and parochial clubs of the Catholic youth are gradually being reopened in Rome and throughout Italy. At the same time the Vatican secretary of state today advised the Cardinal Bishop of Naples that the open air processions, which had been banned by the pope three weeks ago at the outbreak of the trouble, might be held in the district of Naples at the discretion of the bishops.

Vatican circles tonight issued a denial that the pope was ill. It was announced that he had merely discontinued his daily promenade through the Vatican gardens due to intense heat.

"I have used Manor House since Chicago was a little city, and I still prefer it to any other. It has the most delightful quality a coffee can have—a rich, pleasing flavor which never varies."

Mrs. W. J. Chalmers

Mrs. Chalmers' fascinating apartment on Lake Shore Drive tells a vivid story of the brilliant events that make up her life. The walls and tables are crowded with mementos of famous folk. Here, a lace cloth presented by royalty—there, a daguerreotype of Abraham Lincoln and Mrs. Chalmers' father, who was Allan Pinkerton, Civil War Secret Service Head. Yet none of the events that fill her days is more important to her than her work with the 110 little cripples in the Home for Crippled Children to which she devotes so much of her time.

CLEAR WAY FOR EXPANSION OF ART INSTITUTE

Supreme Court Removes Last Obstacle.

The last legal obstacle to the plan of the Art Institute to enlarge its present building on a broad scale was cleared away yesterday when the Illinois Supreme court at Springfield denied the writ of certiorari filed by the Sherman Hotel company asking a review of the findings of the Appellate court by the higher tribunal.

Building plans for the institute, however, are indefinite, according to Percy B. Eckhart, vice president and attorney for the Art Institute, who has directed the long court battle to establish the museum's right to build in Grant park.

No Money to Build.

"We haven't a penny in our building fund, and we must now lay plans for raising the funds necessary for the construction of the new building," Mr. Eckhart said last night. Architectural plans will be chosen after an international competition for drawings which the attorney estimated would require a year's time.

When the plans were first drawn three years ago, Mr. Eckhart explained, the directors hoped to secure the financial aid of the World's Fair commission, which talked of using the institute as the fine arts building during the Century of Progress exposition. While the right of the institute to build was being threshed out in court these plans were changed. "The raising of funds now will be a slow process," said Mr. Eckhart. "We don't want to compete with the World's Fair and we have no pet ideas to further at the expense of Chicago's general good. Unless some good angel comes to our aid there is no hope of completing the building for the fair."

Planned $5,000,000 Addition.

The plans as originally drafted called for the construction of an east wing to the present Michigan avenue structure with a façade 800 feet long facing the lake on the inner drive of Grant park. The project was to have cost between $5,000,000 and $10,000,000.

Shortly after the plans were announced the Stevens hotel sought and was granted a bill restraining the Art institute from further enlargements of its building, basing its contention upon an old agreement designed to keep the park free of buildings. The action was appealed to the Illinois Supreme court, which returned the case to the Appellate court in 1930, ordering it had no jurisdiction in the matter. Last February the Appellate court decided in favor of the institute, reversing the lower court. The attorneys for the hotel carried the case again to the State Supreme court on a writ of certiorari. In its decision yesterday the Supreme court denied the petition, removing all legal barriers to the institute's expansion plans.

TEXAS HELD FOR DEATH QUARREL.

Dallas, Tex., June 18.— (Special.)—A grand jury today held without bail Alva Garrett, 27; Robert Hill, 29, and Hubert Hunt, 30, for the killing of Bennie Adams, 27, near the Lester strip mine in Hall, during a drunken brawl.

Start Work on Giant Hangar

L. B. Manning, vice president of the Century Air Lines (with shovel), breaks ground for one of world's largest air terminals and hangars at 63d street and Cicero avenue. President Robert Maynard Hutchins of the University of Chicago was an interested spectator.

Will House 20 Planes

L. B. Manning, vice president of the Century Air lines, broke ground yesterday for the company's new hangar, which will be constructed at the southwest corner of the Chicago airport. President Robert Maynard Hutchins of the University of Chicago was present for the ceremony.

The building will have space for twenty of the Stinson tri-motored ships which the Century line operates out of Chicago to Detroit, St. Louis and Cleveland. The hangar will be 200 by 160 feet, of steel, concrete and pressed brick. Officials of the company estimated the cost at $150,000.

BRITAIN TO MAKE NEW $125,000,000 LOAN FOR DOLE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, June 18.—The government will shortly introduce a bill to increase its borrowing power to meet the unemployment insurance fund, known as the dole, by another $125,000,000—an amount which will bring the total indebtedness of the fund to $575,000,000.

The present deficit amounts to around $450,000,000, due to a weekly debit of $5,050,000 in payments over receipts. The fund has been in debt for years.

MONTROSE AVE. AIRPORT URGED FOR 1933 FAIR

Lake Front Field Needed, Hearing Is Told.

BY ROBERT WOOD.

Stirred by the realization that unless immediate steps are taken Chicago will be without adequate facilities to accommodate the thousands who will travel here by air during the 1933 World's Fair, 50 aviation leaders and city planners met yesterday in the city hall to give their views on the various proposals for a lake front airport.

After two hours of discussion it was generally agreed that Chicago was in need of a downtown landing field both as a valuable adjunct to the Century of Progress exposition and as an aid to the city's transportation system. But it was also agreed that in view of the present financial difficulties of the city government there was slim possibility of obtaining a city-built airdrome within the next five years.

Recommends Montrose Site.

As a temporary expedient to be used only for the next two years, Maj. R. W. Schroeder, who has selected the sites and developed several of Chicago's airports, recommended the conversion to a landing field of the plot of made land in Lake Michigan opposite Montrose avenue, a proposal which has been under discussion for several months.

After some discussion it was agreed with but few exceptions that this plan offered the best solution of the lake front air field problem. However, Engineer Hugh E. Young of Lincoln park relayed the news that the park commissioners had made up their minds to refuse any proposal to place an air field within the boundaries of the park.

Sponsors of the plan, who in their first hearing before the commissioners were told by President Warren Wright that there was little public interest in aviation, said they will again visit the commissioners to present arguments for the proposal.

Warns City to Wake Up.

"Twenty-five years ago the automobile industry tried to locate in Chicago, but it got a cold shoulder because Chicago wouldn't believe there was any future in autos," commented John C. Bowers, who headed a large delegation from the Central Uptown Business Men's association at the hearing. "Automobiles went to Detroit. The same thing is going to happen with regard to the aviation industry unless some of our city leaders wake up."

Air transportation, Mr. Bowers argued, is a semi-public enterprise and should receive aid from the various municipalities. He cited the expensive outlay authorized by the park commissioners for a yacht harbor which he said is used for the accomodation of a "handful of private amusement craft."

C. A. Donel, government meteorologist, reported that weather conditions in Chicago offer no obstacle to the operation of aircraft on the lake front, which he said was as desirable a location as any in the metropolitan area insofar as meteorological conditions are concerned.

Hearing Held by Committee.

The public hearing was held by the lake front airport committee of the Chicago aero commission and was attended by air line operators, and representatives of the city, the railroads and the park boards.

The exhibits committee of the World's Fair yesterday announced its plans to bring representative types of aircraft to Chicago for the exposition. Their plans, however, did not include mention of how planes would be operated from the lake front in conjunction with the fair.

DEADLY NEW BOMBING PLANE LANDS HERE ON WAY TO ARMY TESTS

Lieut. Eric Nelson, army round the world flyer, landed at the Chicago airport last night in a new bombing plane which is reputed to be the most deadly air fighter yet developed. The plane has just been completed and is en route from Seattle, Wash., to Dayton for delivery to the United States army air corps.

The craft is a low wing monoplane with two Hornet 525 horsepower motors built into the wing. While specifications are being kept secret by the builders, the Boeing Airplane company, until after the army tests, the plane is reported to have a speed of 175 miles an hour. It will carry a crew of five, 2,500 pounds of bombs, and is fitted with two machine guns and a radio telephone.

The ship's fuselage is narrow, but its wing span is 86 feet. The landing gear is retractable, making it possible to attain greater speeds than in the ordinary bomber. The plane has been dubbed the "death angel" and was developed at the request of the army air corps. Traveling with Nelson as pilot of the ship is Harold Lewis, Boeing test flyer.

PARADE EXHIBITS MEAT INDUSTRY TO LOOP THRONGS

Stress Lower Prices in Big Spectacle.

Pictures of the meat industry from farmer to retailer were presented yesterday noon to thousands of spectators on Michigan avenue and State street as a parade more than two miles long sought to convince the public that meat prices are the lowest in years. The parade also illustrated the importance of the meat industry to Chicago.

Pioneer and miniature models of railroad stock cars, 100 cowboys, 14 bands, several hundred farm boys and girls of Four-H clubs, 500 butchers with cleavers from the stockyards, floats designating various carcasses and cuts of dressed meat and comparative prices with a year ago, trucks of hogs, sheep and beef on the hoof and at the rear a drove of sheep ambling along the boulevard and into the loop were some of the highlights of the festival parade.

Parade Wins Praise.

On the boulevard in the reviewing stand among others sat former Gov. Frank O. Lowden of Illinois, and R. W. Dunlap, assistant secretary of agriculture. Each proclaimed the parade as impressive and unique and each declared it would help impress upon Chicagoans that they can purchase meat supplies at low prices.

Pretty girls were not lacking. In addition to those posing on many of the 55 floats, two large groups marched in sections. One group depicted farmerettes going back to the farm. They were from the office and plant forces of the Swift and Armour packing plants. Another group consisted of girls who wrap the packaged meats in stockyards factories.

Comedy at intervals enlivened the parade. A clown with a mule amused thousands of children.

Legion Kiltie Band Plays.

One of the musical units was the stockyards Legion post kiltie band, said to be the only one in the country that plays well known American songs with distinction and which interspersed typical Scottish wails with "Yankee Doodle."

One railroad advertised its dining car service on a float which carried two chefs carving roasted cuts of meat. Sausage manufacturers characterized their industry with a huge "red hot" accompanied by a sign which said that Americans with the help of some foreign countries ate 5,000,000,000 of the "red hots" last year.

Banners of the national live stock and meat board, sponsor of the parade, told the importance of the meat industry. Carcasses of pork were placarded to show wholesale prices 35 to 37 per cent lower than a year ago. Another banner declared meat prices were back to horse and buggy days. A truckload of steers carried a banner: "Chicago buys more than $500,000,000 worth of live stock annually."

Following the parade the board of directors of the National Livestock and Meat board, met in final session at the Blackstone hotel and reelected Charles D. Carey of Cheyenne, Wyo., chairman. He has already served two such terms. Thomas E. Wilson of Chicago, head of the packing company of that name, was reelected vice chairman, and Everett C. Brown, also of Chicago, past president of the National Live Stock exchange, was returned as treasurer. R. C. Pollock, likewise of Chicago, was elected secretary-general manager.

WHOLESALE PRICES SHOW DECREASE OF 2¾ PER CENT IN MAY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., June 18.—[Special.]—The purchasing power of the 1926 dollar increased to $1.403 in May, according to wholesale price statistics for that month issued today by the labor department. The increase was reflected in a decrease of 2¾ per cent in the bureau of labor statistics' index number of wholesale prices, which dropped from 73.3 in April to 71.3 in May.

The bureau's index number, it was pointed out, includes 550 commodities ranging from farm products to chemicals.

Wholesale prices of farm products as a group averaged 4¼ per cent below the April average, according to the bureau's figures. Price decreases were noted for corn, oats, beef cattle, hogs, sheep, poultry, eggs, cotton, alfalfa, potatoes, and domestic wool. Rye, wheat, onions, and oranges, on the other hand, the bureau said, were higher in May than in April.

Among foods, further price decreases were reported for butter, cheese, fresh meats, lard, dressed poultry, and sugar, resulting in a net decrease of 2½ per cent for the group. Wheat and rye flour and coffee, however, showed slight increases during May.

FRANCE VOTES TO CENTER ITS NAVY ON POCKET SHIPS

Chamber Admits Need of Combating Germany.

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, June 18.—That modern flying Dutchman, the new German pocket battleship, which has been troubling the sleep of European admiralty chiefs for the last year, figuratively steamed up the river Seine tonight and trained its phantom guns on the chamber of deputies, where the French naval program for 1931 was being voted on.

Under its ghostly menace, the French deputies were powerless to take any concerted action and the ultimate vote was a tacit confession that they were stumped. In one thing the whole chamber—with the exception of 15 communists—agreed. That was, that France must enter into a capital ship race with Germany and to surpass by whatever means the deadly new German battle cruiser. The French realize that the naval question has shifted from the Mediterranean to the North sea, and that Germany, rather than Italy, is the enemy most feared.

The government had asked for funds to build a 23,000 ton dreadnaught, the first of a projected squadron of three. Even the pacifists agreed that there was need of replying to the latest German threat. This principle was asserted in the vote, but at the same time Minister of Marine Louis de Chappedelaine was instructed to make further experiments to prove the practicability of 23,000 ton battleships before starting with the construction. To this end, credit for only $17,640,000 for experimental purposes was voted.

This means that nothing will be done about new French battleships until after the disarmament conference in 1933, where it is hoped that conveniently low tonnage limits will be fixed. Thus, the European policy of getting the United States to give up heavy ships, which are the backbone of her navy, will be fought for harder than ever.

Even Pacifists Worry.

Paul Boncour, pacifist spokesman, during today's debate urged France to wait until after the disarmament conference before starting a program, but he did not attempt to minimize the danger of Germany building.

In discussing the high cost per ton of the German pocket cruiser Deutschland the deputies voiced suspicion that some of the credits attributed to the construction of the battleship were really used to build submarines, the hulls of which, it was alleged, had been seen by French journalists.

The minister of navy, Charles Dumont, then accused Germany of violating the treaty of Versailles by planning to build eight ships of the Deutschland type before 1935. He dwelt at length on the great cruising radius of the German vessels, and declared this was designed to cut off France from her colonial possessions. "Ships of this sort," he declared, "were not made for the Mediterranean but for the vast spaces between Brest and Fort de France."

INDIAN WOMAN TELLS OF $27,000 LOSS IN SWINDLE

Mrs. Euler Davis, 50 years old, a half breed Indian from Clearview, Okla., yesterday told Municipal Judge Hartigan in the Felony court that she had been swindled of $27,000 in bonds by B. B. Kirkpatrick, said to be business agent for the Liberty Life Insurance company, 3511 South Park way.

Kirkpatrick, she said, came to her some time ago and induced her to buy 540 shares of stock in the insurance company for $27,000, which she had received from the sale of gas wells on her land. She was to become a director of the company, she was told, and was to have her expenses paid twice a year to Chicago.

A few days ago she came to Chicago and learned, she told the judge, that the stock was worth only one-tenth of the value at which it had been represented. Colored officials of the company refused to return her bonds and they were arrested upon her complaint while the state's attorney's office seized her bonds which they found in the bank vault. The case was continued until July 17 in order that Kirkpatrick, who is white, might be found. The bonds were held by the state's attorney's office pending disposition of the case.

Bandit Forces Messenger Into Car; Gets $205 Loot

While throngs passed by unsuspecting on the nearby boulevard, a youthful bandit yesterday forced Steve Juran, messenger for Elizabeth Arden, Inc., 70 East Walton place, back into his automobile as he left it at the Lake Shore Trust and Savings bank, 605 North Michigan avenue. He made Juran drive to Navy pier, where he robbed him of $205.

STORE ROBBED TWICE DURING 14 HOUR PERIOD

Twice within fourteen hours bandits raided the Chicago and Grand drug store at 2908 West Chicago avenue, making off with $200 on the first occasion and $500 on the second. The holdups occurred Wednesday evening and yesterday noon.

Yesterday morning at 11:30 o'clock when the proprietor, Jacob Kanzelbaum, was just recovering from the shock of the preceding night's robbery, two men armed with sawed off shotguns entered the store and forced him, together with his son Arthur, the pharmacist, David Funt, and three customers to lie upon the floor while their pockets were searched. A sum of $12 was taken.

Then the group was herded into the washroom and the bandits rifled the cash register of $500. As the robbers fled, Arthur Kanzelbaum seized a revolver and fired several shots after the maroon sedan in which they made their escape.

Three men bearing revolvers perpetrated the holdup of the preceding evening, entering the store shortly after 10 o'clock when the elder Kanzelbaum, his wife and two customers were present. Kanzelbaum said that he believed the two crimes to have been committed by different gangs.

Court Reverses Results of Election in Brookfield

Results of the election of village president in Brookfield on April 21 were reversed yesterday after a recount ordered by County Judge Jarecki. Judge Jarecki declared James Mansfield the winner over Ernest B. Graham, 2,112 to 2,085. Graham led by nineteen votes on the original canvass.

THIS ILLINOIS LEGISLATURE.

This has been an addled legislature. Its organization was not incompetent and there were some men of ability and good parts in it with enough veterans to know the way about, but its average of intelligence and purpose was low. Probably an assembly which is not only quite aware that it is unconstitutionally constituted but is determined to proceed by nullification will naturally be irresponsible when charged with serious business and alert only when pursuing its own advantages. The Illinois legislature is so constituted and so behaves. Men are unlikely to make much pretense of good conduct when they begin by degrading the law under which they are assembled. They first put the constitution in the waste basket and then put the rest of their duties in on top of it.

The state's financial affairs, including those of Chicago in distress, have been handled as if they were irrelevant to the conduct of public affairs. Bills dealing with these matters have been treated as if they were of no concern to any one. It is admitted that there has been a confusion of purpose arising out of a real anarchy of affairs, but this produced only legislative impatience or indifference. Very likely if the men trying to find remedies had not found themselves in the ice box at every effort a program could have been constructed. Bills were thrown away which should have been the material for relief.

All this probably points to an extra session which will have the advantage of concentration upon particular purposes, but the disadvantage of needing a two-thirds instead of a majority vote in each house for legislation.

The legislature has been active enough with the bills of peculiar character which are aimed at the pocketbook. They are expected of every session, but they do not always limit the interest of the assembly. In a legislature composed and conducted for and by special privilege for special advantage it is natural that public considerations should be ignored.

This session of the Illinois assembly makes it plainer that the metropolitan areas will not be safe except under the administration of a Chicago governor. That is the only protection against a squirarchy which produces an unconstitutional and an undependable legislature.

APPLAUSE AT SPRINGFIELD.

"As we scan our history," said the President, rededicating the tomb of Lincoln, "ever since his day, who can doubt Lincoln's own words that national heritage is 'worth the keeping'? And it was Lincoln who stated and restated in impressive terms that its keeping rests upon obedience and enforcement of law."

Thunders of applause from members of the Illinois legislature who were disobeying the mandate of the constitution of Illinois to reapportion representation according to population.

Thunders of applause from citizens who approve and support their disobedience.

MUSSOLINI AND DR. MACINTOSH.

Dr. Donald Macintosh, the Canadian divinity professor at Yale, has petitioned the United States Supreme court for reconsideration of its opinion on his application for citizenship. A five to four decision of the court held in effect that the constitution did not grant exemption from military service at the personal choice of the citizen. Exemptions may be allowed by congress, or are, but they are not inherent in citizenship. Consequently Dr. Macintosh may not write his own ticket of admittance. An issue is being made of his case by intellectuals who hope for another definition of the power of the state and the right of the individual.

Along with the news item of this petition comes a declaration by Mussolini, in the Vatican controversy, that the child belongs to the state; in other words to him, he being, as he says, the state. The child may have religious instruction. He desires that it should have and it may get this from the church, but otherwise the child, and therefore the individual, belongs to the state. The state gives and it takes away.

Mussolini's idea of state absolutism is as romantic and tyrannous as Dr. Macintosh's idea of individualism is impractical. One is an echo of the past and the other a guess at the future. The true modern state is in between the two. It is not a thing which exists for its own sake nor a thing which exists by the tolerance of any group or individuals. It isn't the state which Hobbes, the English absolutist, conceived, an organization created by conquest or compact, by which all individuals lived and had their property rights and which therefore had absolute control over them and their property.

The modern state is less of doctrine and more of usage. Theoretically Hobbes may be right. Then Mussolini is only assuming that an emergency exists requiring the submission of the child to the discipline of the state. He is more likely singing in the wind. Theoretically the doctrine of Dr. Macintosh would make the state a town meeting without authority over dissenters. Theoretically this would destroy the state. Consequently the Supreme court has refused to permit a Canadian to rewrite the American constitution. Patriotism usually concedes what the absolute state would demand. The individual retains his rights and concedes his obligations. Almost the whole theory of the modern state is contained in the instincts of the free citizen.

THE TAKE IN THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

Between 1915 and 1931 the number of pupils in the Chicago public schools increased by 55 per cent. In the same period the costs of operating the schools increased by 444 per cent, according to Oscar Hewitt. There can be and there is no adequate explanation of this discrepancy.

The increase in the cost of living will not explain it. The increase in teachers' salary rates will not explain it. The raising of educational standards and the increase in high school attendance will not explain it. Each of these factors might justify some increase in the annual outlay, but together they do not warrant an increase of 444 per cent or anything like it.

The teachers, who have not been paid and for whom no money is in sight, are certainly not the beneficiaries of the extraordinary increase in school expense. They are saying through their spokesmen, and they have reason on their side, that, if the present board cannot find the money to pay what it owes, the board had better make way for abler trustees. As the present majority of the trustees have lost the confidence of the public and the taxpayer as well as the teachers, the resignation of the holdover members is the only reasonable course open to them. They offer no explanation of the extraordinary increase in expenses; and in the absence of that explanation they can enlist no support for emergency measures for the benefit of the employés of the school system.

The take, as Mr. Capone might put it, places the Chicago public schools in the preferred class, holding rank with such lucrative rackets as are associated with the trade in beer and alky. The taxpayers are paying far more than the schools ought to cost and the school children are receiving in education far less than is paid for. The difference is going somewhere, the precise destination being a matter in which the majority of the school board is showing no great interest. The school board, on the contrary, is wasting its time with a fantastic scheme for issuing $50,000,000 in bonds for school buildings. That being so, the question of where the money is going would seem to be a matter for the grand jury to determine. The experience of the state's attorney in the investigation of rackets should prove helpful.

SECRETARY ADAMS ON THE NAVY.

The speech of Secretary Adams of the navy department the other day was not only impressive. It was startling, and for the simple reason that a responsible officer in the American government said the navy was necessary. Mr. Adams said it was useful in peace, essential to the commerce of the country, the requirement of its trade and prosperity, and the defense of its security and well being. He said it was good within the limitations imposed upon it, but because of the limitations was not what it should be, that age was working against it, and provision was not being made for it.

These statements from a cabinet minister, even from the secretary of the navy, being true and simple, were startling because they have been so disregarded. They could have been made back in the eighties, when the United States had no navy, and would have been regarded as admonitory. Fortunately they were heeded then and Dewey and Sampson had ships. Now Mr. Adams seems strangely unconventional. Ships are things to lose in naval conferences. Disarmament is the great joss. A good deed takes a good gun off a ship and dumps it overboard. The higher thought whittles down the tonnage. The cult is for weakness and that has become virtue. Mr. Adams is revolutionary.

Editorial of the Day

FOR FREEDOM OF THE PRESS.

[New Haven Journal-Courier.]

The Supreme court decision on the Minnesota press freedom suit ends the present session of the tribunal and dramatizes again the shift in dominant sentiment which has come upon the court. Undoubtedly this shift will appear in history one of the major events of the Hoover administration, for the philosophical complexion of the Supreme court is of course profoundly influential upon our whole national life. It was the Supreme court of Roger Taney that hastened the civil war; it was the post-war Supreme court that so completely reversed the whole philosophy of the court as it had been constituted during a long Democratic domination. It was the Supreme court under Taft that made the world seem safe to the conservatives; it is now the Supreme court under Hughes which in several striking instances has shown it has a new jealousy for the preservation of ancient public rights.

The press decision came, of course, upon an obscure scandal sheet in Minneapolis. The publication is the kind all careful newspaper men despise—dedicated exclusively to the detailing of scandal, careless as to the corroborations, generally disreputable. If ever there was a publication that deserved suppression it was this. And that is what makes the Supreme court decision all the more significant. The vices of the paper in question made the argument for censorship particularly appealing to all wholesome people. But the new liberal majority, Hughes, Holmes, Brandeis, Stone and Roberts, were not blinded by the superficial defects of the paper on which the case was built. They were arguing principles.

They determined that petty abuses were to be tolerated in defense of major liberties. They declined to cast the baby out with the bath. They insisted that a person libeled by the Saturday Press of Minneapolis had recourse to the libel laws and that restriction of publication of "scandalous" matter might very well infringe upon the right of respectable newspapers to criticize the malfeasance of public officers. They repeated the venerable doctrine that freedom of the press is a prime bulwark of democracy. They revived, in fact, one of the most ancient principles of our philosophy of government and rephrased it in ringing words. The decision is a blow at the encroaching governmental control, the insinuating paternalism which everywhere is evident in these troublous times. It resounds with political significance.

OLD STYLE SCURVY.

IN "OLD LOUISIANA" Lyle Saxon reproduces part of a diary written more than two hundred years ago by Mr. Dupratz, who was a Louisiana slave owner and sugar planter and, in this diary, told his observations on how to pick healthy slaves for purchase, and how to keep them healthy and in a state of efficiency.

He purchased slaves newly brought into the country from the tropics. One disease to be examined for was scurvy. The signs of this disease were swollen, bleeding gums and, in some cases, eruptions and discolorations outwardly, and pains in the joints.

To prevent scurvy he had his people drink a cold tea, made as follows: Get some fresh water cress, St. John's wort, and scurvy grass. Clean and mix in equal proportions. Pound and grind in a mortar. Put two handfuls of this mixture in an earthen glass or porcelain vessel. Add one lemon, chopped up but with all the juice. Add a piece of purified saltpeter the size of a walnut. Add one quart of cold water. Sweeten. Let this mixture stand overnight. Filter out the herbs and give the water as a drink. A person should drink two pints of this a day. This cures scurvy and it also prevents it.

He made a mixture of the same herbs, ground them up, and added enough lemon juice to make a soft paste. This he applied to the gums. Had Mr. Dupratz used a mixture of lemon juice and lettuce, cabbage, or any other salad, he would have got equally as good results. Scurvy grass, St. John's wort, and water cress as remedies were all right, but they are no better than celery, radishes, and turnip salad.

Another disease for which he always had his doctors examine prospective purchases was yaws. His advice was to always reject those who had areas of the skin that were as smooth as glass, and without any tumor or "rising." Because of the intelligent carefulness of the men who stood and stand guard yaws has never got into this country and we have no interest in any treatment for it. It is claimed by some that malaria, yellow fever and, possibly, typhoid fever were brought to America from Africa by slaves. The men who stood guard were not intelligent enough to keep these diseases out of the country and, in consequence, the losses have run into the billions.

Another group of diseases that Mr. Dupratz was on guard against were the venereal diseases.

This diary told Mr. Dupratz's opinion on the care of slaves. Their health was always to be well protected. "They must be well taken care of when sick. The master and his wife should give them their personal attention." "The slaves must have plenty of nourishing foods including herbs." "One man must be set apart as a fisherman to provide the others with fish for food." [The fish were probably of the salt water variety.] "Nursing mothers must be given one and a half times as much food as other women. This must include a quart of milk a day. Mothers must breast feed their babies. The older children are to be cared for by old women set apart for that duty alone."

CIVIL SERVICE JOB.

Chicago, June 9.—[Friend of the People.]—Will you advise me how to obtain a position as city machinist? W. A.

We do not have an examination scheduled at this time for the position of machinist, but have placed the name of the writer on our mailing list for notification of the next examination called.

JAMES S. OSBORNE,
Secretary, Chicago Civil Service Commission.

LOST CITIZENSHIP.

Chicago, June 12.—[Friend of the People.]—Is a woman who became a citizen of the United States by naturalization of her husband in 1917 and after the death of her husband married an alien eligible to citizenship in January, 1922, still a citizen of the United States? H. V.

No. She lost her citizenship by her remarriage before Sept. 22, 1922, and must again be naturalized.

FRED J. SCHLOTFELDT,
District Director of Naturalization.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

How to the Line, let the quips fall where they may. —R. L.

WHOSE CHILD? WHOSE CHILD?

Is Chicago in Illinois or ain't it? Huh! The legislature of the state is about to adjourn and hasn't done as much for Chicago as the legislature of California or Delaware or New Guinea—if New Guinea has a legislature. Our city officials and prominent citizens in carriages and on foot have invaded the legislative halls and gone down on their knees to the squires and wept scalding tears, but every bill for the relief of the city has been given the bum's rush and taken for a ride. But maybe the squires don't know the facts in the case. Send 'em geographies which have maps showing that Chicago is a part of Illinois. Send the maps and more maps. Send them sworn statements that Chicago is in Cook county and that Cook county is in Illinois. Have a new survey made proving that Chicago is in Illinois. Or maybe it isn't. We're commencing to doubt it now ourselves. Maybe Chicago is in Indiana. Or maybe we're in Wisconsin? Who knows? Anyhow, on looking over the work of this session of the legislature Chicago doesn't seem to be in Illinois. They never heard of us. Where are we? Let's hunt around and find where we belong. Maybe we belong to Canada. Oh, if we must belong to something or other, let's hope it's Canada!

ONCE WE WERE FRIENDS.

When I look at you, there is a veil between us.
We do not chaff or scoff at each other today.
We frantically hunt for meaningless phrases to screen us
From all of the things that we might, but we dare not say.

Once there was joy in merely being together,—
Joy that both of us felt, but didn't need show;
Now we are very polite, and chat of the weather.
Once we were friends;—but that was so long ago.

WHEAT went to 55¾ cents yesterday, the lowest in 35 years. And if the farm board ever finds this out they're going to be awfully surprised; surprised and somewhat hurt, considering all they've done and all the millions they spent to hold up the price. But that's just the way with wheat: work your finger nails off for it, put it in big granaries, take the tenderest care of it, and rock it to sleep at night; then look what the darn stuff does! It's certainly discouraging.

TO MY NEIGHBOR AT THE CONCERT.

She sat beside me in the hall with nothing on her mind at all.

Why she ever chose to come where horn and oboe, harp and drum, cymbals, clarinet, and cello wove into a saltarello

I wonder. "Theme with variations" gave her mental trepidations.

To her the modern symphony was but a mad cacophony.

She rattled paper, smoothed her hair, and with bad perfume fouled the air.

Of all delight she was bereft—
she rose with mundane grace and left, and I've no doubt that in the lobby shouted, "Music is my hobby!"

LAGNIAPPE.

THE MOVIES have grabbed the opportunity offered by the reconstructed Fort Dearborn and are going to use it as the background for an Indian massacre. Oh, shucks, the racketeers and gangsters pull much Bigger and Better Massacres than the Indians ever did. R. H. L.

A PECULIAR KIND OF COURAGE

FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

16 YEARS AGO TODAY

JUNE 19, 1915.

LONDON.—Austria has suddenly taken the offensive against Italy on the sea. Scout warships and destroyers have bombarded the Italian coast towns of Rimini, Pesaro, and Fano, on the northern Adriatic, and the war office at Rome admits considerable damage was done to the coast railway. At Fano shells fell near the railroad station as well as in the vicinity of the famous cathedral.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Germany will not answer President Wilson's rejoinder regarding protection of Americans in the submarine war zone until after July 4, according to advices from Berlin. Germany appears to regard it unwise to dispatch the answer on the eve of the Fourth of July celebration in the United States, when it would be certain to be made the text of much patriotic oratory.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—President Wilson called at the home of William Jennings Bryan to bid good-by to Mr. and Mrs. Bryan before they depart on a southern trip.

30 YEARS AGO TODAY

JUNE 19, 1901.

CHICAGO.—President Harper at the University of Chicago convocation prophesied an endowment of $50,000,000 for the university. The prediction was made in the presence and with the tacit sanction of the university's founder, John D. Rockefeller. President Harper pictured a university, expanded until its ramifications embraced the whole of the United States and portions of Europe, and housed in acres of beautiful structures.

CHICAGO.—Big guns were trained on the bookmakers at the Harlem track and the withering fire of the day was followed by an announcement in the evening that racing had been absolutely suspended there. The track will be closed today. The action was taken because of Judge Stein's refusal to dissolve Judge Holdom's injunction restraining the race track people from pool selling. Outside of the courts the bookmakers received a blow when Mayor Harrison declared with emphasis that he would not allow betting on the Derby to be run at Washington Park on June 22.

NEW YORK.—The joint commission on the revision of the canons of the Protestant Episcopal church made its report. The most important of the revisions recommended is that which prohibits clergymen from joining in wedlock divorced persons.

LONDON.—Hazen S. Pingree, former governor of Michigan, died here.

50 YEARS AGO TODAY

JUNE 19, 1881.

ALBANY, N. Y.—In the balloting in the legislature for United States senator, Chauncey M. Depew came within nine votes of an election on a light ballot. The vote was Conkling, 20; Depew, 44; Wheeler, 29, and Platt, 17. The coveted prize is so nearly in Depew's grasp that his friends will endeavor to bring back his forces Sunday night or Monday morning so that he can slip into the senatorial chair through the absence of his opponent's supporters.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Frederick Douglass returned to Washington from a trip to Wye river, Maryland, where he was raised a slave. It is the first time the colored statesman has revisited the scenes of his childhood for 56 years. The scene of the visit was the homestead of Edmund Lloyd, his old master.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind.—Henry S. Lane, former governor of Indiana, and a former United States senator, died at his home in Crawfordsville at the age of 80. Gov. Albert G. Porter issued a proclamation that a military salute be fired at the capitol at the hour of the funeral at Crawfordsville on June 21.

CHICAGO.—The grand parade of W. C. Coup's four ring circus and hippodrome will take place tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock. The circus will show on the lake front for one week.

LONDON.—Edwin Booth, his wife, who is ill, and his daughter leave Liverpool today, together with Mr. and Mrs. McVicker, for America. Mr. Booth will appear in New York under Mr. Abbey's management at Booth's theater at the beginning of October and afterward will make a tour of the country.

CRIMINAL JUSTICE.

Chicago, June 16.—The following circumstances of a criminal prosecution in Cook county may explain why criminals escape and the public is discouraged in prosecution:

Some months ago Adolph Berger and his wife, conducting a small food shop at 1415 East 53th street, were held up twice by the same gang of young hoodlums, consisting of Frank Tedesco, Angelo Ravenick, Frank Fragola, and Frank Bailey. These men were apprehended by an efficient police department, fully confessed, and were indicted under indictment No. 60,700. The case, No. 60,682, came up for hearing before Judge Finnegan on June 15.

Mr. Berger traveled to the far west side as a witness and was sent by the bailiff of Judge Finnegan to the chief justice. There he was informed that there was no court and that all cases would be heard before Judge Sabath. Upon appearing at Judge Sabath's office the bailiff stated that he had no record of such a case and sent Mr. Berger to the sheriff's office. The sheriff sent him back with a deputy to the office of the chief justice, where again he was informed there was no court. He was then taken on the merry-go-round to Judge Sabath and there told to go home and wait for another subpoena.

This is not the first time that this gentleman had been summoned to appear, but he noted some interesting facts: First, that the other witnesses to the crimes this gang had committed are no longer present at these hearings; second, he believes that at least one of the defendants is present at these hearings with an attorney, but seems to be out on bail.

The attacks made upon these good people were exceptionally brutal and the owners of eighty-four homes in the building where the Berger family conducts a highly reputable place of business are as one in the conviction that this case must be followed to its bitter end, regardless of the law's delays, in order that Chicago may be made safe for honest American citizens.

EARLE A. SHILTON.

ON CHILDREN.

Chicago, June 9.—Under the caption "The Training of a Gunman," a contributor to the Voice of the People of June 8 comments on the gun play of children. I also have been "attacked" by these mock heroes. A threatening gesture will scatter them in all directions, shrieking with fear and terror. Their outspoken cowardice is both disgusting and amusing. A generation ago Prof. Hugo Münsterberg wrote of our pert and disrespectful children.

I should put it this way: we have millions of brats and but very few children in our beloved country.

EDWIN J. KUH, M. D.

FROM A SCRAPBOOK.

Chicago, June 12.—In making over an old scrapbook I find the unfinished sermon of Prof. David Swing. This unfinished sermon was read by Lyman J. Gage, at memorial exercises, in Central Music hall, Oct. 21, 1894, and published the following morning. Strange to say, the title of this unfinished sermon is "The Redemption of a City."

Verily the Kingdom of Heaven approached slowly—toward Chicago.

U. G. P.

TAXES.

Springfield, Ill., June 13.—In your issue of June 9 an article written under the name "Holds Teeth in Tax Law Would Drive Money Away" was read by me with considerable interest and I agree generally with the statements therein contained.

I have suggested to various persons already, including members of the legislature, that an amendment to the Illinois constitution be drafted and submitted to the voters which would limit the amount of taxes that can be assessed against property by direct taxation to 1 per cent of the assessed value of the property, and that by the same amendment the legislature be permitted to provide for some other form of taxation, such as income tax or sales tax, or perhaps both. Of course, I realize that the present legislature cannot submit such an amendment because two years ago an amendment to the revenue section of the constitution was proposed, but no curative legislation that amounts to anything can possibly be passed without an amendment to the constitution, and we shall probably have to wait until the next legislature meets anyway.

I am thoroughly convinced that if the amount of taxes on personal property could be limited to 1 per cent for all purposes, such personal property would be placed upon the assessment books for taxation. All that the ordinary citizen asks for is that his property shall not be confiscated. He is willing to pay a fair tax, but under the laws as they now stand any citizen who declares his or her personal property will have about one-half of the income therefrom taken away.

DAVID H. JACKSON,
In Charge of the Securities Department, State of Illinois.

IN A GARDEN.

Chicago, June 9.—I am supposed to be living in a decent, conservative bungalow district, but we have our racketeers and parasites. Early this spring some degenerate and low lived specimen of human protoplasm at different times dug plants from our garden. Not being satisfied with these, he has again made himself a visitor and is now digging up the annuals and gladioli. A man who destroys a person's garden and enjoys the flowers from stolen plants is not a human being, but a human degenerate. He is a moral coward who hasn't the courage to join the criminal world when he belongs.

M. J. TAUS,
Teacher, Lane Technical High School.

THE PUBLIC PAY ROLL.

Harvey, Ill., June 10.—I see in today's paper that 19,500 county and city employés are not receiving their wages. In the classified lists of workers no degree or no mention is made of $50 a day legal experts, high priced engineers, and supervisors of various sorts. Let us hear how they are faring in this financial crisis. If there is to be any short rationing of salaries why should not everybody in the county share, from the mayor and county commissioners down, instead of just the lower paid school and hospital employés, most of whom can ill afford it?

A DISTINCTION.

Chicago, June 3.—I dislike very much the cartoon on the editorial page of today's TRIBUNE indicating that the American people have lost confidence in their country. We have not lost confidence in our country, but we have lost confidence in the old grandmothers that are filling our public offices.

ATTORNEY SAYS VANDERBILT JR., WIFE WILL PART

Versions of Arno Affair Are Conflicting.

[illegible], Wyo., June 18.—(AP)—Legal separation of Cornelius Vanderbilt Jr. and his wife, the former Mary Davidson Weir of Chicago, was forecast here today as the outgrowth of an incident early last Monday when Vanderbilt is reported to have chased Peter Arno, New York artist, with a gun.

William Woodburn, attorney for Mrs. Vanderbilt, said he would confer with Vanderbilt's attorney, Samuel Platt, and predicted that the marital ties would be severed.

Mrs. Vanderbilt Leaves.

Mrs. Vanderbilt, who has left the Vanderbilt home and is staying with friends, denied herself to newspaper men. Comment from Vanderbilt was not available.

"If any such action is contemplated, I have nothing to say," Platt told reporters.

Two separate and conflicting statements were issued concerning the Arno affair.

Vanderbilt's attorney declared "it goes without saying that a man is not going to leave his house and go running for a man without provocation and, according to Vanderbilt's story he did not, he had just cause to do so, for on at least two different occasions he says he had noted open evidences of affection toward Mrs. Vanderbilt by Arno."

Says It's Imagination.

On the other side was the statement by Clyde D. Seuter, Arno's attorney, who termed the entire affair a "creation of Vanderbilt's imagination."

"Arno's conduct towards Mrs. Vanderbilt was at all times gentlemanly and proper," he said.

Full elaborated today on the report of the incident as given to him by Vanderbilt.

TRUTH IN TRADE GROUP MANAGER ACCUSED OF PLOT

Phil Grinnell, secretary and manager of the Chicago Better Business bureau, was charged in injunction proceedings yesterday before Judge Albert E. Gentzel in the Superior court with conspiring with officials of a Mexican land company to ruin the business of a rival concern.

Judge Gentzel issued a temporary injunction restraining officers and employes of the Mexican National corporation, 188 North La Salle street, from circulating false or slanderous statements concerning the business of Wm. S. Shively & Co., 33 West Randolph street.

Shively is selling land at Santiago Pill, in the state of Oaxaca, Mex., where he has a mahogany milling project. On May 7, he charges, Grinnell and his assistant at the business bureau, George W. McDonald, sent out 9,000 copies of a bulletin in which they charged that Shively was of questionable character and that his claims regarding his Mexican property were untrue.

Shively testified that most of his salesmen left him as a result of the bulletin and that after going to work for his rivals they used the bulletin to win his customers away.

Grinnell also testified. He asserted that the charges which he made against Shively in his bulletin were true and that he acted in good faith for the protection of the investing public and not as a result of any conspiracy with Shively's rivals.

Pullman School Girl Wins Two Prizes for an Essay

Antoinette Simmer, Pullman school girl, was presented with an engraved scroll by the Chicago chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution for her prize essay on the bi-centennial of George Washington's birthday. The award was made at the chapter's Flag day meeting yesterday in the Stevens hotel. Last night she read her prize essay at the commencement of the Pullman Manual Training school and was awarded a gold medal, given by the Colonial Daughters of America.

Poses as Delivery Man to Rob Woman in Home

Posing two packages and posing as a delivery man for a store, a bandit late yesterday was admitted to the home of Mrs. Esther Davis, 6127 North Claremont avenue. He menaced Mrs. Davis with a revolver, and threatened her with death if she called for help. The gunman then cut the telephone wires, and searched the apartment until he found the safe box. He emptied the container of several rings, two watches, a bracelet and tie pin, valued at $4,150, and $135 in cash.

U. S. DRY RAID ON GREIN'S SHOP ENDS IN FAILURE

Judge Quashes Warrant as Without Reason.

The last gesture of E. C. Yellowley's regime as prohibition administrator came to an end yesterday. Federal Judge George A. Carpenter quashed a search warrant on which City Sealer Joe Grein's malt and hop shop at 210 West Madison street was raided on May 8, 1930.

JOE GREIN.

Mr. Yellowley's raid, accompanied by the banging of flash light photographs and the carting away of eight truck loads of merchandise, valued at more than $25,000 followed a ruling of the Supreme court that held articles designed and intended for the manufacture of intoxicating beverages to be illegal. Criminal charges against Mr. Grein, his partner, Joseph Pahls, and two clerks were dismissed by the government.

Issued Without Cause.

The search warrant was quashed yesterday at the outset of the government's attempt to libel the $25,000 stock of goods, which included, besides malt, hops, bottle caps, filterers, and rubber hose, a quantity of sauer kraut and tomato juice. Judge Carpenter allowed a motion of Attorneys Clarence Darrow and William F. Waugh to quash the warrant on the ground that it was issued without probable cause. United States Commissioner Walker, who issued the warrant, overruled a similar motion to quash after the hearing of several days' arguments.

Attorney Waugh told Judge Carpenter that two prohibition agents visited the store and bought some malt, hops, filterers, and rubber hose, informing the clerks they desired to make some beer.

"Did they actually intend to make beer?" asked Judge Carpenter.

Never Intended to Brew.

"No, your honor, they never intended to make beer. As a matter of fact, the articles they purchased still repose at the prohibition headquarters."

Assistant United States Attorney Heber T. Dotson declared that the government proceeded on the theory that the articles in question were capable of being used for the making of beer and that they were sold with the belief that they were to be so used.

Judge Carpenter then began scanning the search warrant which enumerated the items seized. He ran across the item "thermometer."

"Suppose I bought a bath thermometer and sent it to my daughter's children. Would the store from which I bought the thermometer be guilty of violating the prohibition law?" asked the court.

JURY IN PANTAGES 'GIRL MARKET' CASE DISAGREES

San Diego, Cal., June 18.—(AP)—The trial of Alexander Pantages, multimillionaire showman, and three others on conspiracy and morals charges, ended today in a disagreement of the jurors after 24 hours' deliberation and the judge dismissed them. A date for retrial tentatively was set for July 13.

Pantages and Jesse H. Shreve, rich San Diego business man, were charged with conspiring with the alleged operators of a Hollywood girl market, Olive Clarke Day and William Jobelmann, to bring Lydia Nitto, a minor, here from Los Angeles for immoral purposes, the trial began May 25 and was placed in the hands of a jury of nine men and three women at noon yesterday. The three women voted for acquittal on every ballot.

The question of Miss Nitto's age, the issue raised by the defense, deadlocked the jury. Juror W. F. Aherns said the women jurors were convinced the Nitto girl was not a minor.

LANGGUTH-LINDGREN CONVICTION IS UPHELD BY SUPREME COURT

The convictions of Elmer P. Langguth, 35 years old, former president of the Peoples State bank of Maywood, and Miss Laverne D. Lindgren, 26 years old, former cashier of the bank, on charges of making false statements to deceive bank examiners, were sustained yesterday by the state Supreme court.

The two, who were alleged to have been engaged in a clandestine romance, were sentenced to 1 to 10 years in prison by Judge Otto Kerner last September. They have been at liberty on $50,000 bonds.

Retiring Justice William Farmer, who prepared the opinion, stated that "the evidence clearly showed the defendants guilty. Langguth admitted to the directors of the bank that he was short in his accounts; that he had been deceiving the bank for three years." Concerning the allegation that the jury was inflamed against the defendants by the argument of the prosecution and newspaper stories regarding the relations between them, the court stated that it found nothing prejudicial to the defendants.

House Votes $25,000 for Statue of Columbus Here

Springfield, Ill., June 18.—[Special.]—The house today passed the Leonards senate bill appropriating $25,000 for a statue of Christopher Columbus to be placed in Columbus park, Chicago. It was engineered through the house by Representative R. V. Libonati [Rep., Chicago].

CITY ASKS CASH IN LOSS OF FREE PHONE SERVICE

Demands Compensation in New Franchise.

Demands that the telephone company make some concessions to the city to replace the free city hall telephone service which the city loses under the terms of the franchise now being negotiated were voiced yesterday by members of the council committee on oil, gas, and electricity.

ALD. CRONSON.

The aldermen's demands were finally boiled down to two proposals, which attorneys for the city were instructed to take up with the company lawyers.

The first, made by Ald. Oscar F. Nelson [46th] was that the company pay the city, in addition to the compensation now fixed by the proposed new franchise at 3 per cent of the company's gross revenue, an additional percentage roughly equal to the value of the free service which the city enjoyed under the old franchise which expired in 1929.

Phone Attorney Objects.

Although Kenneth F. Burgess, general counsel for the company objected strenuously to this, on the grounds that all of the other utility companies pay the city approximately 3 per cent compensation, and that for the telephone company to pay more would be discriminatory the city attorneys were instructed to lay the proposal before the company.

Ald. B. A. Cronson [4th] made an alternative proposal. As it is now drawn the franchise provides that the city shall receive only fire and police calls free. Other service shall be at the public rates, but the city is granted a 50 per cent discount on its bills until 1935, and a 25 per cent discount from 1935 to 1945.

Many "Visitors" Use Phones.

Ald. Cronson suggested that the city pay $85,000 for 500,000 calls each year, and that it receive the next 2,000,000 calls free. That with the 1,750,000 free calls annually to the fire and police departments would put the city in the position of paying $85,000, approximately the same sum it paid in the past for service to departments outside the city hall for 4,250,00 calls a year.

The city now makes approximately 5,000,000 calls a year, but by refusing free telephone service to the many hangers-on in the city hall, the city business could be transacted on the basis of 4,250,000 calls, Ald. Cronson insisted.

COAL • HEAT • COSTS • LESS

Coal Heat Saves

$1,447.31 every five years

for this building's owner

Heating with coal costs the owner of this building at 4627 Lake Park Avenue $1,595.64 every five years. It has been estimated that it would cost him $3,042.95 or $5,647.50 to heat the building for the same period with the two fuels that can be substituted for coal.

JUST how much more would it cost me to burn a fuel other than coal? How many times have you asked this question of your friends and of the representatives of other fuels, only to receive vague answers or glittering sales generalities?

But it is possible to get a fair and honest answer by putting this inquiry to any member of the Chicago Coal Merchants Association.

For the past year this Association has been collecting data and actual experience. In its quest for truth, it has even engaged distinguished and disinterested scientists to run competitive tests.

On the basis of the facts it has gathered, it can answer your question right now with a considerable degree of accuracy. It costs from 35 to 50% more to burn the fuel that next to coal is most economical, 60 to 70% more to burn the third fuel.

Of course the conditions established by your heating plant determine the exact cost. Your plant must be in good condition. You must be burning the right type and size of fuel, and, above all, you must be getting 2000 pounds of coal, uniform in quality, in every ton.

Members of the Chicago Coal Merchants Association are not only able to help you figure heating costs, but they are dedicated to helping you realize full economy in fuel. Any one of them will be glad to help you solve your problems, advise with you on the proper coal for your plant, and on the conditioning of your plant. Moreover, you can rely on the weight and grading of orders filled by any one of them. Their pledge in these matters is underwritten by the Association guaranty.

Send for this free booklet on fuel costs

To help you get some idea of comparative heating costs, the Chicago Coal Merchants Association, 30 No. LaSalle Street has prepared a booklet which analyzes the cost of heating a hotel, a home, an apartment building, a church, and a commercial building. PUERTA VERDE OF THE SUNNY LAND CASTS ITS SPELL Ancient Hills Breathe Romance.

BY IRENE STEYSKAL.

Strange what a glamor there is to the names of far places.

Sumatra. Tamatave. Zanzibar. Venice, that has the sound of a sustained violin tone, and a fine dignity that makes one think of the shade of an ancient doge come back with the night, passing again through the narrow streets, and brooding beside the canals where dark water reflects the flames of a thousand torches. Tara, of the kings. Buenos Aires, like a burst of sage scented wind from the pampas, or a song of the gauchos. All names to stir up disquieting echoes and eager desires.

But there are places that lie at the end of the little journeys whose names have another charm, the tranquil loveliness of old melodies.

A Mexican Village.

There is Puerta Verde of the sunny streets, with its squat, adobe houses and their iron grilled windows. And from the home of Teresa and Juan and Hernando it is but a short distance along the Arroyo Pequeño to the mountains of San Andres that rise from the plains of the Rio Grande under the turquoise sky like a great medieval fortress; against whose velvet shadows, on the night of the feast of Our Lady of Guadalupe, glimmering lights descend like a chaplet of fallen stars—small fires enkindled by faithful watchers to guide the Santa Madre over the trail.

In June comes the little fiesta of Juan's birthday, which is the occasion for our summer excursion to the hills. In the early morning before the first streamers of sunlight have touched the tops of the cottonwoods in the patio we are off, with old Manuelita and Felipe to drive the mule and drowse on the seat of the ancient carrillo. We seat ourselves behind them, our feet dangling, and raise our voices in song more hearty than harmonious, to Juan's lilting accompaniments on his new harmonica.

The Mountain Ascent.

The sun has mounted well toward the zenith when we reach the cove of pines at the foot of the hills. Felipe releases the mule. Juan and Hernando lift the huge picnic hamper from the wagon. But there must be no lingering now. We tuck sandwiches into our pockets, wave "adios" to Manuelita and Teresa, who have a fear of the heights, and begin the ascent.

It is a steep, narrow trail. Where there is precarious footing we cling by our fingers to niches in the side of the cliff, and at least one of us murmurs a fervent prayer to the "beato" of mountain climbers. It is not well to look down. But there is reassurance in Felipe's immobile bronze face; it is dark and watchful and, here in the hills, singularly aloof.

Juan, slim and venturesome, bounds lightly ahead with the agility of a cat, whistling and shouting to call up the echoes. Hernando, dark, eyes alight, pauses often to watch a white wisp of cloud change form, or to touch with slim artist's fingers the satin petals of a rock anemone.

And at last Cabeza Alta, the high head.

Silence of the Hills.

The air is clear and cool and strangely luminous. A silence is here as of spread wings. It is told that, long before the Spaniards came, the voice of the Great Spirit was heard in words of wisdom and beauty by an Indian youth who kept solitary vigil on the brow of Cabeza Alta during the moon of young corn.

The horizon is very far, very wide. The Great river is a ribbon of silver winding between square green plots like a thread of embroidery through a patchwork quilt, and beyond it are the broad undulating tablelands of mauve and blue swimming in golden light. Puerta Verde dances and quivers through the heat haze like a town you'd see in a dream; and the houses are small like the toys children play with; and copper glints like little darts of lightning play on the bells in the campanile of the mission of Santa Cruz.

The watcher views from the crest of Cabeza Alta a motley company plodding its slow way along the sun baked banks of the lower river. The sun flashes on armor and spear heads, but there is a weary droop to the silken banners of Castile and the house of Oñate, grandees of old Spain, there are, mounted on fine horses. Afoot are soldiers, and Indians, and friars with tucked up cassocks and dangling crosses. And wagons, and cattle. Brave men, and cruel men all following a dream of gilded towers of the Seven Cities of Cibola. A courageous company; a straining, pitiable company.

A Crimson Sunset.

Already the blue shadows of the slim-stalked yuccas, the candelas de Dios, God's candles, and of the tall fluted columns of giant saguaros are lengthening on the mesas and the sky is a fantasia of sunset crimson and coral and gold. We must hurry back before the night comes.

But the evening star is gleaming above the dark cliffs like a silver spangle on the dress of a Mexican dancing girl when we pass under the arch of the natural bridge that forms the last gateway. We see a red glow through the pine trees.

A shout from Juan and an answering call from Teresa.

A white cloth has been spread on the low flat rock that will serve as our table. Little night winds fan the flames of the candles on Juan's birthday cake. About it are clustered dishes of dates and figs, the meats of black walnuts and thin green crescents of citron; tamales wrapped in corn husks heaped high on impromptu platters of bark; reed baskets of golden oranges and red apples; trays of small corn cakes covered with raisins, and halves of yellow honey-dew melons; slim throated rose and blue ollas that hold a cool drink of lemon and lime juice; little native pottery bowls with fragrant black coffee.

We press forward from the shadows into the circle of firelight.

HONEY ONE OF BEST OF QUICK ENERGY FOODS, EXPERTS SAY

Honey is one of the best of the high energy producing foods, says the United States department of agriculture. Because it is composed almost entirely of simple sugars it can be assimilated with ease. Most sugars require action by the gastric and intestinal secretions to break them down into simple sugars similar to those occurring naturally in honey.

Because it is easily assimilated, honey is of importance where normal digestive activities have been impaired by disease or old age. Honey can be utilized by the body without placing much of a burden on an enfeebled digestive tract and is also recognized as a valuable food for babies and young children.

Honey is especially good in the diet of athletes. The rapid absorption of the simple sugars of honey replaces the sugars in the blood and muscles that have been burned by strenuous exercise.

QUAIL GROW SCARCE BECAUSE OF LACK OF A PROTECTING COVER

Factors that tend to diminish the numbers of quail and other factors that tend to increase the numbers of this wild game have been studied recently by Aldo Leopold, formerly of the University of Wisconsin.

Decreased numbers of the quail, he reports, are due to grazing of woodlots and the removal of osage hedges in the north central states, destruction of woodlots, and fewer farmers cutting corn and letting it remain in fields in shocks where it would offer some shelter and food during the winter.

Conditions tending to maintain the numbers of wild quail, in his opinion, are feeding in fields, the revival of shelter belt planting, and the practice of winter feeding.

DISH WASHING MADE PLEASANT IN THIS STORY

Even washing dishes can be an agreeable task if it is done in the right way and when the dishwasher has the right attitude. Instead of thinking of dish washing as a monotonous job, a lonesome job, and an uncreative one, remember that, well done, it safeguards the family's health by killing harmful bacteria, says Ella Cushman of the New York State College of Home Economics at Cornell university. Washing dishes properly lessens the risk of spreading colds and other infections.

Miss Cushman suggests saving time by washing dishes only once or twice a day, where conditions make this practical, instead of three times, and air drying them instead of drying by towel. She says much time and annoyance are saved by planning the easiest way to wash them before starting to do it. For example, have all the equipment to be used for the dish washing in easy reach of the dish to wash what cooking dishes can be washed as the meal is being prepared, and put those used last to wash when emptied. Having the kitchen in readiness for dish washing—such as clearing the kitchen table and the sideboards and starting the water running—before serving the meal is a time saver.

Trays, wheel trays, and pass up boards, Miss Cushman believes, do save time and steps.

...THE new large size OF CANADA DRY

Now, in preparing for your parties, be sure to put several of the new large-size bottles of Canada Dry—The Champagne of Ginger Ales—on your shopping list. They not only add a new measure of convenience—saving you time and trouble in serving ginger ale—but give you, in addition, a remarkable value.

In the new large size of Canada Dry you get five glasses of the finest ginger ale that can be made, at a cost of only a few cents a glass. The value is exceptional.

Two convenient sizes

For the needs of the large family, or entertainments, the new large size of Canada Dry is ideal. When a smaller quantity of ginger ale is needed, it is economical and convenient to buy the familiar 12-ounce size at its new low price.

Value and recognized quality, greater economy, and now a new convenience—all these are yours to enjoy with Canada Dry—The Champagne of Ginger Ales. Buy the handy cartons of 6 or 12 bottles.

POLITICIANS OF FRANCE ENJOY FOODS AND WINES

Discriminating Eaters and Drinkers.

This is the first of a series on food preferences of governmental leaders of European countries. Another will appear next Friday.

BY ROBERT SWENSON.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, June 18.—The politicians of France do their share to maintain the high reputation of the French race as discriminating eaters. Just as France presents a very respectable percentage of distinguished writers and connoisseurs of art and music, it also has a healthy percentage of gourmets.

If here and there a statesman eats frugally and lets wine alone it is usually because advancing age and ailing stomach force him to do it and not because he lacks a sophisticated palate.

The new president, M. Paul Doumer, is a case in point. Already 74, and blind with seven years as chief executive, he allows himself neither to drink nor to smoke. He furthermore eats very lightly. Instead of the President's inevitable morning coffee and rolls that to the Frenchman are breakfast, he takes a glass of milk. Then for lunch and dinner, usually eaten almost entirely, he eats sparingly of fish, eggs, and vegetables. By contribution to the French national gastronomic picture has been refined by the years from erstwhile fatty proclivities to theory. He still knows what he wants served when there are guests to be dined.

Briand Has Clever Cook.

M. Aristide Briand, perennial foreign minister, is another example of the tragic effect of advancing age on the capacity for gastronomic pleasure. Enjoying a wide reputation among domestic and foreign statesmen for his excellent dinners with well chosen wines, he has had to quit drinking almost entirely, and for several years the inevitable cigaret hanging from his wide, loose lower lip has been a destructioned one.

But he clings to his old cook, Marie —she has no other name the length and breadth of France—who is known as one of the best in all the land. Several attempts have been made by the gourmet politicians to entice her away from the Briand apartment in the Quai d'Orsay but she refuses to budge.

Every night, before going to bed, Marie grinds some coffee for the next morning. Usually between 5 and 6 a.m. M. Briand likes to get up early —she prepares a big cup of cafe au lait, which Emile, the faithful valet, brings to his master along with a few crackers. While he sips his coffee and dips his crackers the old foreign minister hunches his round shoulders over the morning papers.

What He Eats.

M. Briand's lunch usually features fish, as befits a fisherman of his reputation. Brook trout is his favorite. But he eats meat occasionally, a tender piece of veal or a small mutton chop, followed—not accompanied, as is the American habit—by a vegetable or two. He never eats cheese, a curious thing in a Frenchman whose country offers such a wide variety of delicious cheeses. Sometimes he disobeys his doctor and takes a glass of red wine.

He dines about 7 and it is a very light meal, soup and vegetables. No meat. Then he smokes a few of his nonskid cigarets; likes to roll them himself. He reads a few pages of a detective story and retires to his bedroom.

Sometimes he invites a few old friends, about 12 as a rule, sometimes as many as 20, and Marie cooks them a beautiful meal which is served with the exquisite wines afforded by the Quai d'Orsay cellar.

Likes Burgundy Wines.

Premier Pierre Laval smiled roguishly when asked what he eats and drinks, and, black eyes twinkling, chose to dwell almost entirely on the second half of the question.

"I like Burgundy wines, the red Bordeaux wines, and the better champagnes," he said, "and since I am from the Auvergne country I also like occasionally to drink the light wine from there. You can judge for yourself that I am not a water drinker."

"O, yes, as to food," he added, "I have no rules. I drink and eat a lot, and on the whole I like everything that is well prepared."

Girls Sample Wholesaler's Plums

It cost Phil Caruso, 54 South Water Market, a box of plums before these two girls completed their sampling of some of the new California shipments that are in sufficient quantity now to come out of the luxury class. The girls are Tillie Battaglia, 234 Alexander street, and Mary Russo, 4841 West Thomas street. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Child's Antipathy for Eggs and Milk May Be Overcome

Both eggs and milk may be made attractive to those children who seem to dislike them. Such dishes as custards or eggnogs make a pleasant surprise for both the child and the discouraged parent.

A HEAD WAITER, LIKE ELEPHANT, NEVER FORGETS

But This Story Comes to Happy Ending.

BY GENEVIEVE FORBES HERRICK.

Washington, D. C., June 18.—[Special.]—Here's a food story with a moral.

It begins back a number of years ago when the "old" Shoreham hotel was still standing in downtown Washington. The head waiter was a man named Fred Wiesinger. Alert, friendly, tactful; Fred was a good head waiter.

There came to the hotel one day a writing gentleman from New York. Fred, who had ushered the French Ambassador Jusserand and the sprightly Alice Roosevelt and dozens of other celebrities to their seats in his dining room, paid this newcomer all the dignified courtesy he could. The newcomer's name was Strother, Fred learned.

Strother stayed at the hotel three days; went away for a week. The night he returned he stood in the doorway, waiting to be seated. Fred spied him. Instantly he was at the door, saying:

"Good evening, Mr. Strother. Wouldn't you like the same table? I am glad to see you back, Mr. Strother."

Wrote a Piece About Him.

Mr. Strother went back to New York. A few weeks later an article appeared in a widely known magazine, written by French Strother, for it was he, on "Personality." And shining forth in a conspicuous paragraph was the incident of Fred.

Fred Wiesinger read the article; was pleased with the reference to himself; hoped he might some day show his appreciation. And he carefully clipped, with the article, the author's picture. It was a photograph of Mr. Strother, taken with his small son riding by his side on a bicycle.

The "old" Shoreham was torn down. Fred went up to the newly opened Mayflower hotel, rose to be its maitre d' hotel.

And about two years ago French Strother, a famous writer now, returned to Washington to serve as research secretary to the President of the United States. Last month he resigned, to return to private writing. And just the other night his newspaper friends here gave him a big dinner at the Mayflower. The newspaper man in charge of arrangements saw Fred, of course; asked him to have the pastry cook evolve a cake with a sugar book open on it, symbolic of Mr. Strother's profession.

Gets Picture in Candy.

Silently Fred Wiesinger listened when it was explained to him that "the dinner is for French Strother, a distinguished writer who has been with President Hoover." Quietly he promised the cake would be effectively designed.

The night of the banquet the chairman went in to survey the scene. He found the cake, with a big book beautifully wrought. And over on another table he found a picture spun out in candy. It was a picture of French Strother. By his side was a lad on a bicycle. The chairman was bewildered. He hadn't ordered any such elaborate piece of decoration.

Just then the guest of honor came in. He smiled. He turned around to look for somebody, saying, "I know what that means."

Standing nearby, suave and poised as a perfect maitre d'hotel, but smiling all the time, stood Fred Wiesinger.

The two men shook hands, each thanking the other.

VEGETABLE PEAR NEW DELICACY; HAS FLAVOR OF STEWED OYSTERS

For those confirmed shoppers, who aver there's nothing new or different in vegetables for consumption by the more exacting members of the household, some enterprising government marketing specialists have made this announcement:

"A 'new' vegetable for the American table, but one which has been a staple food for centuries in some Central American countries, is the chayote, sometimes called the vegetable pear, mango squash, or mirliton."

The chayote, it is claimed, is gaining favor among southerners who, having created a sufficient demand, now learn that it is being shipped to northern cities in season. The chayote, botanically related to the squashes and cucumbers, holds its shape perfectly after being cooked.

It may be eaten plain boiled, mashed, fried, stuffed and baked, used cold in salads, in fritters, or made into sweet pickles. The root is starchy and may be boiled. The chayote is usually a fall crop, but sometimes comes in spring when the old roots have not been damaged by frost. The fruits of different varieties of chayote vary in weight from three ounces to three pounds.

WHIP THE CREAM FOR SHORTCAKE IN MODERN WAY

Equipment Is Highly Important.

Now that strawberry shortcake is one of the most seasonal portions of the menu, success with the cream whipper is of the utmost importance. Advice insuring successfully whipped cream has been compiled by J. C. Hening, dairy specialist of the New York state agricultural experiment station.

Even skimmilk can be whipped if it is cold enough, says Mr. Hening, although he acknowledged that it won't stay that way long enough to be useful. He uses this fact to illustrate the point that cream must be chilled before the housewife attempts to whip it. Four hours at 40 degrees is recommended as a suitable temperature.

Special Cream Is Best.

"Cream sold as coffee cream, which usually contains 18 to 20 per cent fat, is not regarded as good whipping cream, as the latter should have 30 to 35 per cent fat," Mr. Hening advises. "Cream which has been separated and cooled for one or two hours cannot be expected to whip well, but should be held at 40 degrees for four hours or more in order to chill the fat thoroughly. The temperature of the cream at whipping time should be 40 degrees if possible, certainly not above 60 degrees.

The type of whipper is said to be of great importance, and an egg beater is not regarded as a satisfactory cream whipper. A turbine type of beater in which the blades revolve at the bottom of the bowl will give the best results, experts say. The amount of cream whipped at one time should be regulated by the size of whipper used. If it is necessary to whip larger amounts of cream, successive whippings should be made.

Don't Whip Too Long.

"Cream should be whipped rapidly," says Mr. Hening. "We have whipped one-third of a cup of cream in fifty seconds with a small turbine beater. Two or three minutes should be a good average time.

"Whipping should be stopped at the right time, because whipping is the first stage of churning. With a little too much whipping the whipped cream will be lumpy with a large amount of milk draining from it. It is not necessary to whip cream just before using it, as it will stay whipped if stored in a cold place."

TAKING BLACKNESS OFF BURNED ENAMEL KITCHEN UTENSIL

When enamel kitchen utensils appear hopelessly ruined after food has been burned in them, place a mixture of strong soap powder in them and allow to stand three or four days without changing the water. Then pour the water off and rub with a soft cloth. All the blackness will disappear. Do not scrape before soaking as the enamel will crack.

BETTER BRAN FLAKES

A better combination

THESE crispy, sun-brown Kellogg's PEP Bran Flakes are a wonderful combination. They're full of whole-wheat nourishment—with milk or cream they are virtually a perfectly balanced food. And they contain just enough bran to be mildly laxative—to help keep you feeling fit.

With a better taste

And you'll never know how delicious bran flakes can be until you fill your bowl with these better bran flakes and enjoy that glorious flavor of PEP. Only Kellogg in Battle Creek has the secret of making them taste so good. Serve Kellogg's PEP Bran Flakes often. For the children's supper, for your own lunch, for a midnight snack. In the red-and-green package.

Here is Fruit—with the energy of meat

Calories measure the energy value of foods. An ordinary glass of Welch's contains 100 calories—the same number of calories as a small lean steak . . . a lamb chop . . . a rasher of bacon . . . or a portion of chicken.

If you want the beneficial tonic effects of fruit plus the food energy of meat, drink Welch's.

A glass of Welch's contains four times the nourishment of a half cantaloupe, twice that of a dish of strawberries, a pear or a peach, substantially more than an orange or a half grape fruit. Welch's satisfies hunger, yet does not fatten. That is why this pure wholesome fruit juice so ideally supplements a restricted diet.

If you are trying to keep your weight where you want it you would not dream of eating meat except at meals. Yet you may safely drink a glass of Welch's every hour of the day without the slightest worry.

Welch's is fruit-food in the most convenient form. There is no waste, no bothersome preparation, no squeezing. Science and experience bring you the equivalent of luscious vine-ripened Concords regardless of season every day throughout the year.

There are six servings in every pint of Welch's—a large cluster of vine-fresh grapes in every glassful. It is wonderfully appetizing as a breakfast fruit. Keep a supply in your pantry, but be certain it is Welch's. Then you get grape juice scientifically pasteurized under laboratory control.

KNIGHTS OF OLD CERTAINLY HELD A LOT OF BEER!

The Girls Drank Ale for Breakfast.

BY KATHLEEN M'LAUGHLIN.

Verily, times change—and diets! Consider for a split second what probably would happen if a debutante of this day and age were advised to consume a quart of milk at a single meal. Yet in England in Tudor times a maid of honor at court not only expected, but demanded, a gallon of ale for her breakfast.

In his recently published volume, "The English Medieval Feast," William Edward Mead sets forth a myriad of similar curious facts about the eating habits of those valiant trenchermen, the Anglo-Saxons of the middle ages. Gastronomical habits of the period, he shows, were based more often on necessity arising from conditions under which they lived than from national idiosyncracies, but many of them survive in some form in present day recipes.

They Drank No Water.

It is staggering to compute the amount of beverages [water excepted] that was regarded then as an average day's ration in a single household. At one feast lasting a week in the home of the Archbishop Neville, brother of the "kingmaker," for instance, the guests were provided with the equivalent of 12,000 dozen of wine and 75,600 gallons of ale, he states. The small household of the earl of Northumberland accounted annually for 1,100 dozen of wine and 42,000 gallons of ale.

Water in those times was drunk only as a penance, and was known commonly as "rot-gut stuff." Since sanitation was entirely outside the ken of the wisest men of the age, and the quality of any water used for drinking likely to be extremely inferior, it was a wise enough precaution to ignore it.

They Spiced Their Food.

An even more important reason for the apparent vast thirst of the English of medieval times, Mr. Mead goes on to explain, is found in the dishes common to their tables, wherein condiments and spices played a major part. Loaded with pepper, cubebs, mace, saffron, cloves, ginger, cinnamon, nutmeg, galingale, cummin, liquorice, aniseed, and other tart ingredients, they were prone to inspire the consumer to frequent draughts from the ale keg or beer mug.

Here again the element of necessity entered. For, the author points out, fashion had in reality little to do with the extensive use of these elements. Our ancestors, he reminds us, had not yet begun to breed beasts and poultry for the table, except that the value of the capon was remembered from former days. Mutton was apt to be stringy, beef tough; and men made use of food from sources that today would be avoided with a shudder.

So It Had to Be Done.

In the hope, then, of securing an aid to digestion, as well as to disguise the exact nature of many dishes, the spice box came frequently to hand as the cook worked. For natural crudeness cried aloud for mitigation, even at the feasts described, where kings ate crowned and bishops dined in cope and miter.

One theory has been advanced, that the superior skill of the French and Scotch in the culinary art may have been inspired by the fact that those countries were torn by civil wars and invasions, and the inhabitants were compelled to make the best of the victuals they could secure.

Mr. Mead comments in this connection that the English, who had more peace and better food, with no such pressure to teach them to make the best of it, are even today accustomed to despise and to throw away portions of animals esteemed as dainties in Scotland; and that there was [and probably is] a greater variety of vegetables found in French than in English kitchens.

HERE'S SECRET OF FRYING FISH TO RICH BROWN

Fillet of Sole, Scallops Follow Own Rules.

BY META GIVEN.

Mrs. N. T. B. writes: "How are fillet of sole and scallops fried? I have just about given both of them up. I have tried pan frying and deep fat frying, but without success. I have had the experience of the crumbs coming off the scallops when they are placed in the hot fat. How can I prevent this? At what temperature are these fish fried, and how long does it take to thoroughly cook them?"

The usual directions for coating fish croquettes, etc., to prevent grease soaking in frying are: First roll the food in crumbs, then in beaten egg, and again in crumbs. This is just the reverse of what should be done when frying fish like sole and scallops. The coating adheres best to these foods where they are first rolled in egg or milk, then in flour or crumbs.

Fry in Few Minutes.

All raw foods should be cooked at a temperature of 360 degrees F. The time for frying scallops depends upon the size and thickness. They usually require about 4 or 5 minutes to cook well done.

Here is my method of cooking fillet of sole: Dip the fish into salted milk, roll it in flour, then immerse entirely in beaten eggs and roll in the finest of fresh bread crumbs. Let the sole fry slowly in deep fat heated to 360 degrees F. until it cooks to a fine golden color. Drain on absorbent paper. Place on a hot dish and garnish with parsley and quartered lemons. Serve with tartar sauce.

Here are three different ways that I have used successfully to fry scallops:

1. Put the scallops into a bowl, add salt, pepper, a dash of nutmeg, a few finely chopped shallots, olive or plain salad oil, a little lemon juice, and marinate for an hour or so. Remove scallops from their dressing [marinade], roll in cracker dust, drop into hot frying fat [360 degrees F.], and fry to a rich golden brown.

2. Season the scallops with pepper and salt, moisten with a little milk, roll in whole beaten egg, then in flour, and fry to a golden brown in fat at a temperature of 360 degrees F.

3. Season with salt and pepper, immerse in beaten egg, roll in bread crumbs, and fry to a nice color in fat heated to 360 degrees F. Garnish with parsley and serve with tomato sauce or lemon wedges.

FILLET OF SOLE.

Have the fish, which in this country is most often flounder rather than real sole, cut in long fillets. Sprinkle with salt and pepper, roll, and secure with toothpicks. Roll in beaten egg, then in flour or fine dry crumbs. Fry in deep fat at 360 degrees F. until delicately browned. Serve with tartar sauce.

KEEPING ARTICLE MADE FROM YARN FROM SHRINKING

Yarns can be thoroughly shrunk when in the skeins, and then will not shrink when the article made from it is washed. Place the wool in a vegetable steamer on a plate. When dry it will be soft and fluffy, and will be unshrinkable.

Add Water to Meringue to Make It Very Light

If a teaspoonful of water is added after the sugar is beaten in, your meringue will be very light. A pinch of baking powder added while beating is also very good.

NEW METHOD OF HANDLING BOOSTS VEGETABLE SALE

The modern housewife has found a ready picked, sorted and bunched variety of vegetables waiting for her at the nearby store, where ten years ago she was obliged to dig them from her garden, or pick what she wanted from a heterogeneous pile.

The change in the decade, according to J. P. McCollum, horticulturist at the University of Illinois, has come about to the gain of both producer and consumer. Better grading and better handling have brought it about, he says.

"Bunching is now practiced with all the early root crops, green onions, asparagus, kohlrabi, rhubarb, parsley, leeks, celery and sometimes sweet corn and various other garden products," McCollum says.

"The vegetables should be bunched and handled so as to present an attractive appearance. To this end it is desirable that they be packed into marketing containers with as little delay as possible after they are harvested. Exposure to the hot sun and dry winds wilts the tops and shrivels the roots. Consequently, just as soon as vegetables are harvested they should be shaded and cooled.

"Since bunching is done primarily for convenience in handling in retail stores, the bunches should be of the proper sizes for the ultimate consumer. Vegetables making up each bunch should be carefully graded and selected so as to increase the uniformity and attractiveness of the product.

"As the vegetables are likely to be wilted and dirty they should be washed, preferably after bunching, in running water. Unless the roots are badly caked with dirt, they may be rinsed in a tank of water. However, the water should be changed often to prevent the spread of decay organisms and to insure cleanliness."

Put Vinegar on Stove to Foil Onions' Odor

When cooking onions, a little vinegar placed on the stove in an earthen jar will prevent the smell getting through the house.

CAVIAR BECOMING CHOICE DELICACY WITH CHICAGOANS

Are Food Costly but Is Very Tasty.

BY EVERETT SWINGLE.

Fourteen dollars for as many ounces might seem to make one food enjoying a healthy increase in consumption in a Chicago as almost "worth its weight in gold." Yet that is the price several retail stores ask and receive for the highest quality and most expensive caviar.

Of course there are other grades for those who balance food buying with calory costs. Some small tins containing 1½ ounces of this sea food can be obtained for as low as three tins for $1.

Caviar Is Scarce.

One reason for prices being high is scarcity of the product and the fact that nearly all of it must be imported from Russia. For those who have eaten but have remained mildly curious about caviar, it is the fresh and salted roe of the sturgeon, an armored fish found in a few of the fresh water rivers and bays of the world.

Nearly the entire world's supply comes from the rivers of the Caspian and Black seas and from the Sea of Azof. The finest caviar is said to be that from the comparatively small sevruga and sterlet species of the sturgeon.

When the fish are caught and killed the roe is separated from the skin and fine membranes by gently rubbing through a sieve. The "fresh" is the finest and usually is mildly salted with 1 to 6 pounds of salt to 100 pounds of roe. Then the product is packed in airtight tins or glass jars.

Imported from Russia.

The Czar's importers got the tins and glass containers packed in barrels. The containers usually hold several pounds and are repacked into 2 and 4 ounce tins for Chicago wholesalers. Several companies here make a business of again repacking the caviar into smaller tins and glass containers, using the original names or their private trade names on the smaller packages.

According to one food brokerage house in Chicago, palates here in general are just beginning to take up caviar, although its consumption in New York far exceeds and has, for some time, the per capita purchases in Chicago.

There is no test of caviar by size or color that can be generalized, it seems. The real test is in the flavor. The size of the roe ranges from very small to the size of peas, and the color, although generally black, ranges through various gray, dark green, and brown.

Gold Caviar Is Choice.

The caviar that has the largest size roe and is gray or gold in color, however, commands the highest price usually it is most rare. Gold color is most choice among Russians, while in Germany the preference runs to a purplish color. "Whitefish caviar" is the proper designation for the domestic product that is obtained from whitefish or spoonbill cat, whitefish, lake herring and common, or German carp.

Russian sturgeon are fish that come in various sizes. There is the small sterlet about 4 feet long; the seuruga, twice the size of the sterlet; the osetr, about 12 feet in length; and the huge beluga, or huso or hausen, the largest white sturgeon, which often weighs 1,000 pounds and occasionally reaches a length of 24 feet. A large beluga may yield as much as 300 pounds of caviar, but isn't considered old until it has passed a second century.

SOME CAVIAR COSTS DOLLAR AN OUNCE

Fresh or unsalted caviar is the highest in price and the finest in quality, according to the manager of a sea food department in a food shop on West Washington street. Mrs. E. Todd, 6240 Blackstone avenue, is learning that the glass jar holding eight ounces is retailed at $8, while the 14 ounce tin in the foreground is priced at $14, according to the clerk, Mrs. C. Costello. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

"Hot Dogs" Take on Dignity for Those Indoor Dinners

BY FLORA MARTIN.

"Hot dogs! Red hots! Get 'em while they're warm!" And so goes the familiar cry of the vendor of that sausage, the frankfurter, which during the last decade has leaped ahead in popularity for outdoor and indoor festivities.

Few of us can claim ignorance of the succulence of that vagrant sausage which holds forth on the most informal occasions. To be tasty, it must be hot, fat and juicy. First, take the frankfurter, or "weenie" as it is often called, when it is well plastered with mustard and encased in an elongated roll. Then is when it goes under the name of "hot dog" or "red hot." This is usually eaten on the run and proves a handy sandwich for a quick lunch.

A Good Quick Lunch.

There's the tourist who stops at "red hot" stands along the road to pick up a hasty bite en route, or the baseball fan who, between yells, flips a coin to the "hot dog" vendor and munches on the sandwiches while watching Babe Ruth or Hack Wilson make one of his spectacular home runs. And then there's the hike, the picnic or the beach party, with every one, ravenous after cutting capers in the fresh air, taking turns at roasting frankfurters over an old fashioned bonfire. On occasions such as this, a fairly long fork comes in handy as a safeguard against the heat of the licking flames.

For indoor treats we have the frankfurter again, but this time linked up with the potato in its various guises. A meal can be prepared in a jiffy with frankfurters taking the place of the regular meat course. They are already cooked, so all that is necessary is to immerse and warm them for about 15 minutes in a pot of water, which is kept just below the boiling point.

Baked with Potatoes.

Hot frankfurters joined up with potato salad make a savory combination for a luncheon or supper party. Or again, using potatoes and frankfurters as a basis, we might suggest a combination in which the sausage is baked in the center of the potato. Be sure to select extra long potatoes for this dish. Wash potatoes and remove the center with an apple corer. Fill the hollow with frankfurters and bake in a hot oven for one hour, or until the potatoes are tender.

Or the sausages might be baked with mashed potatoes. To prepare this dish, place the mashed potatoes in a baking dish, sprinkle with grated cheese and set frankfurters on top. Bake in a hot oven from 6 to 7 minutes.

Another kind of frankfurter with which the average person is not familiar unless he has had the misfortune to meet up with it while supping at a practical joker's house is that which is made of rubber. When it makes its appearance it is usually hidden on a platter with the rest of the frankfurters, disguised as a perfect imitation of the real thing, even to being boiled in hot water to give it a more natural appearance. It's liable to cause the unlucky one who tries to spear it a bit of embarrassment and afford the rest of the gathering a hearty laugh.

Or perhaps when the guests have been seated at the table, the host will gingerly serve them with fat and tempting looking frankfurters. If they pop around like Mexican jumping beans in the process of cutting, all may be sure they have been introduced to the rubber imitations of frankfurters.

EARLIER MILK DELIVERIES WILL START MONDAY

Earlier deliveries of milk to households in the Chicago area are due to start Monday morning when companies will have their milkmen begin three, four or even five hours before the starting time that has prevailed since last summer.

Announcement of this agreement was made yesterday in order to advise housewives or other persons charged with marking the daily order for the milkmen that the job should be done in the evening, as some of the routes will be started next week as early as 1 a. m.

Better quality milk, because it will be delivered in cooler hours of the night and day, is one of the reasons given for the midsummer change. In addition, the milk bottles will be arriving in time for an early morning snack for those getting in some extra golf or fishing trips. The change back in the fall will depend on the weather, the milk dealers have decided.

CREAKING TABLE SHOWS FARMER AGAIN PROSPERS

Eating Their Way Back to Good Times in Iowa.

BY PAUL POTTER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Ames, Ia., June 18.—[Special.]—Vacationing back on good old Iowa terra firma, where not only the tall corn prospects are the best in years but the hogs and hens are turning out millions of bacon and egg breakfasts at bargain prices, one is struck by the opportunity for farmers, their relatives, and city cousins to join in a grand old movement to "eat our way back to better times."

Not that the farmer could want better times than he has today so far as the creaking tables of well cooked and amply portioned edibles are concerned. In fact, the sort of "spreads" the modern farm home makers are putting up can vie with most any banquet consort of early history royalty.

The evidence is circumstantial but convincing. Two years ago one could attend a meeting of poultrymen in Michigan or Illinois or Iowa and be served beef, ham, or every other meat but the fried chicken they were producing. Again, he could dine in thousands of homes of dairymen and, instead of having thick, sirupy cream, would get milk in his coffee or on his cereal. The bread spread, sad to relate, would most likely not be butter.

Eating Habits Change.

But times have changed. And so have the eating habits in farm homes as well as urban. I challenge any Chicago vacationer to run into more strawberry shortcakes, cream pies and angel food cakes in one week than have I. The per capita consumption of hen fruit, cream, butter and even wheat has suddenly shot skyward in rural Iowa. There can't be such a sordid outlook on life when green gardens, cherry and mulberry trees, berry patches, chicken yards and dairies are beckoning a family from outdoor work to a home grown and home cooked repast.

Nor can the crop of 1931 model cooks be any rosier cheeked from a quick meal and profuse and well earned compliments on their cookery. They do it just as well as mother ever did, and still have time for a jaunt between times. Plenty of good corn fed Iowa damsels, who in those false days of prosperity envied their urban sisters, are proud today that they took a farmer lad for better, for worse. Just now, they tell you, it isn't so worse.

If there be any better foods served vacationers than the farm aunties and nieces are dishing up on their modern ranges this summer, tell me not, for utter satisfaction has been found right here in Iowa. Compare your two dollar seashore dinner with this one at a third the price, where flavor is just to taste, and capacity is the only thing to be desired.

The first course that greets the hungry from a turn about the "back forty," where blossoming clover or alfalfa fields have whetted the hiker's appetite to pleasurable keenness, gets right to business. Two platters of milk fed chicken, fried in butter and heaped high, are surrounded by bowls steaming with half a dozen kinds of freshly picked vegetables. There's just room left for a schooner of mashed potatoes, another of creamed chicken gravy. About the edge each sizeable dinner plate is accompanied by a sparkling goblet of milk and only the simple and usable items of silver.

In merry yet secretly determined mood all hands get into action. Balanced meals, yes, but you balance not upon calories or vitamins at this meal. You balance only your favorite cuts of chicken or asparagus against the remaining ability to consume. Suddenly the ruins are cleared by young arms tanned in Iowa's sunny breezes, and the huge platters of strawberry shortcake, angel food cake, and cream pie are brought in. Big cups of coffee with plenty of seconds waiting decry your usual men's dainty demitasse.

Chance to Get Even.

Justice is done in full measure in rural Iowa's dining these days. Even if the farmer had time to think of the decline in land values, commodity prices and such worrysome matters on this daily occasion, he leans back with a kind word for the little lady, who "still cooks a smart meal" and rejoices that his cost of eating is also lowered, and even if corn may sell for fifty cents next fall, that back forty is going to have enough extra loads, the way it starts out, to make up for the licking he took this spring on the last shipment of fat porkers.

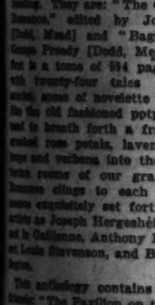
Rex Beach in Florida Loses Some of Punch

"Money Mad," Novel Like Movie, His Latest.

BY EDITH WEIGLE.

FOR twenty-five years Rex Beach has been writing novels, but his new one, "Money Mad," published today by Cosmopolitan book corporation, shows a wide departure from his usual work. It is not one of his tales of prospecting in the far north, but a "civilized" story with Florida and New York as the locale. There's a lot of the old Rex Beach punch in this book, yet to this reader's way of thinking, it is inferior to any one of his earlier things.



REX BEACH.

The only part that at all resembles his former popular adventure romances is the first few chapters. There, with their vivid descriptions of sailing in southern waters and of a sudden storm and the wrecking of an airplane, make interesting reading. You feel that is Rex Beach as you used to know him—the spinner of a good yarn.

But when he ventures into the court society novel manner and starts painting a glamorous picture of the reeling from left to right group of social parasites, the modern Moloch of Wall street, and the laguid daughter-in-law of the modern Moloch, you wish he wouldn't. It's all spread on a bit too thick. It's the movie lot in print.

And how's this for a regular movie scenario of a plot: Banker father of charming heroine is caught in bank failure; gets prison sentence, although he's innocent; heroine goes to New York and is helped by fabulously wealthy society woman to get a job on Wall street; uses her wits to climb the financial ladder; wants money, money, money to help her poor old pappy back in jail; wins it on the stock exchange; then the stock crash, but not before pappy gets out; a return to the Florida homeland; a reinstatement in the old home town, and green lights ahead for ROMANCE.

The novel is partly redeemed by clever dialogue and by one excellent passage—the picture of the stock crash on Wall street.

Also published today are two books of stories that make ideal vacation reading. They are: "The Omnibus of Romance," edited by John Grove [Dodd, Mead] and "Bagatelle," by Gouge Preedy [Dodd, Mead]. The first is a tome of 944 pages packed with twenty-four tales and short stories, some of novelette length, all in the old fashioned potpourri that used to breath forth a fragrance of crushed rose petals, lavender, heliotrope and verbena into the cool Victorian rooms of our grandmothers. Romance clings to each story, romance exquisitely set forth by such artists as Joseph Hergesheimer, Richard le Gallienne, Anthony Hope, Robert Louis Stevenson, and Booth Tarkington.

The anthology contains many old stories: "The Pavilion on the Links," "Monsieur Beaucaire," and "Rosemary Rosella" among others. If you have never read this last story, Hergesheimer at his best, you have a great treat before you. And do not think that "The Omnibus of Romance" is a carload of gushing love stories thickly coated with sugar, for it isn't. It is much more subtle and beautifully done than the so-called "best book" stuff. It is the sort of book readers can pick up at any time to find enjoyment for an idle hour.

This compilation is excellently done by the same man who collected some of the best adventure stories ever printed, in "The Omnibus of Adventure."

George Preedy, who wrote "Bagatelle," is the author of "General Crack." Although these new stories are called "Bagatelle"—a diversion, a trifle—they are much more than that. Written with a sensitive, colorful pen, they are artistic fragments that go to make a work of real merit. They are impressive and full of action and at the same time delicately and beautifully executed.

Each tale lifts the curtain on a brilliant, gay or tragic scene of long ago. Some is the story of Karl August Count von Appenmont Reckheim, collector of Chinese rarities, who sought to crown his collection by adding a living treasure, a Chinese princess, to his store. There is the pathetic story of Philip V. of Spain, who was sent from Spain to rule a foreign people in a court utterly devoid of life, gayety and brilliance to which he was accustomed. And in between is ruled by church and state with a strictness that made him feel like a prisoner.

The titles are as intriguing as the stories: "A Fanfare for Silver Trumpets," "Capriccio," "A Visit to Versailles," "Serenata." There is a touch of tragedy in all the episodes. Even through the gayety of the characters lies disappointment, disillusionment, frustration, irony. "Bagatelle" is the work of a master hand; you cannot put it aside once you have turned its pages, and long after you have read it, you'll remember its beauty.

Experts Discuss Birth Control, New Economics

Italians Laugh at Report of Lectures in Rome.

[Copyright: 1931: By the New York Times.]

LONDON, June 18.—[Special.]—At today's session of the International Union for Scientific Investigation of Population Problems, Prof. Henry P. Fairchild discussed the Malthusian theory that population growth would exceed food supply. Prof. Fairchild said birth control could remove the menace of over population which Malthus feared.

"Malthus laid down first that the natural capacity of humans to reproduce is so great that it exceeds man's ability to get subsistence from the land. Secondly the force behind reproduction is so powerful that they drive the population to press upon the means of subsistence causing perpetual misery.

"The United States record alone is proof of the first position. From 1870 to 1930 the population has increased thirty fold. But the nineteenth century is unique in history embracing the discovery of the western hemisphere, and industrial and commercial revolutions. Such combination of circumstances, calling for the phenomenal increase of population, never can be repeated.

"Malthus disdained birth control, but it can no longer be ignored. It has caused a restatement of population growth and made population a manageful feature of human welfare. Malthus visioned population as a great menacing force threatening humanity with burden and misery, but we can harness it to human purpose."

Dr. George W. Kosmak of America, an obstetrician, said "with the tendency toward smaller families, there is perhaps a laudable desire to make child bearing easy and as painless as possible.

"The United States has been accused of furnishing one of the highest puerperal death rates among civilized nations, though early infant mortality has declined, owing to better milk and more intelligent care. A generation ago one in five babies died in their first year while now only one in seventeen die.

"A physician knows the uncertainties, failures, and fears attached to contraceptives of the present day, by which slight degrees of fertility may be destroyed or actual fertility obscured until it is too late for effective remedial action. Physicians have listened overmuch to the clamor of birth control but less to the popular appeal of 'birth release.' There is a pressing need of a better knowledge how to increase and retain fertility."

Dr. Marie Stopes, noted birth control advocate, said today she had been invited to speak in Rome on birth control and probably would deliver a lecture there in the middle of next month.

Dr. Stopes implied at first that Premier Mussolini was backing the project, as she said the invitation had been received direct from his representative and that the premier himself would take the chair during the lecture, but when she was informed of a denial in Rome that Il Duce had invited her, she said:

"The invitation reached me from an official committee and I understood that Premier Mussolini himself was to be chairman. The invitation did not come from the premier himself.

"It is preferable to produce four children 100 per cent healthy," she declared, "than eight weak and rickety children who are eventually a burden on the state."

Italian Officials Laugh at Idea of Invitation.

ROME, June 18.—(AP)—Italian government officials laughed today at reports that the British birth control lecturer, Dr. Marie Stopes, had been invited to speak here.

It was remarked that the idea was so absurd that government spokesmen disliked to dignify it with a formal denial.

Chicago Lawyer, Others Discuss Birth Control.

Minneapolis, Minn., June 18.—(AP)—George Packard, Chicago attorney, told the American Birth Control league here today that "it will be a long time before legislation is enacted authorizing your program."

Present laws on the subject are "benighted, illogical, and absurd," he said, contending that in the humanitarian relation between physician and patient "the physician has the right to prescribe contraception for the needs of his patient."

The Rev. David Bryn-Jones, Minneapolis, Baptist clergyman, declared that human progress is continuous interference with nature and that birth control holds great possibilities of human progress. He said that it is morally justified.

CHICAGOAN WINS HARVARD HONORS; WILL STUDY ABROAD

Cambridge, Mass., June 18.—(AP)—Victor M. Harding Jr. of Chicago has received Harvard university's highest award for study in residence abroad, the Lionel de Jersey Harvard studentship at Emmanuel college, Cambridge university. That was announced today. Harding played end on the varsity football team during the last two seasons.

Harvard today conferred nine honorary degrees.

Those given the doctor of laws degree were Sir James Arthur Salter of England, financier and statesman; Sir Robert Alexander Falconer, president of the University of Toronto; Newton D. Baker, secretary of war under President Wilson; Thomas W. Lamont of New York, a member of the firm of J. P. Morman & Co.; Harlan Fiske Stone, a justice of the Supreme court of the United States, and the Rt. Rev. William Lawrence, retired bishop of the Episcopal diocese of Massachusetts. Dr. Harvey Cushing of Boston was made doctor of science and Allston Burr, Boston business man, and Herbert Collins Parsons, probation officer of Massachusetts, master of art.

The degrees were conferred by President A. Lawrence Lowell. The university today conferred 2,076 degrees in course, the largest number in its history, at its 295th commencement exercises.

Twelve received their degrees "summa cum laude," the highest scholastic distinction in Harvard college.

Son of Chicago Lawyer.

Victor Mathews Harding Jr., who won Harvard's highest award, carrying study at Cambridge university, England, is the son of a Chicago lawyer and a nephew of George F. Harding former city controller and county treasurer. Victor M. Harding Sr. worked on THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE many years ago. The son has been prominent in athletics at Harvard for the last two years, playing end on the varsity. While a substitute in 1929 in the game against Yale, which Harvard won, young Harding was carried from the field and it was found that his spleen had been ruptured. At the Stillman infirmary an operation was performed which saved his life.

VICTOR M. HARDING JR.

His father also is a Harvard graduate, class of 1889, and while in college was a member of the Hasty Pudding club. The elder Harding is a member of the Harvard club of Chicago and the Union League club. His office is at 123 West Madison street, and his home 789 Burr avenue, Hubbard Woods.

George R. Koons Wins Culver Memorial Honor

George R. Koons, 6827 East End avenue, was announced yesterday as winner of a scholarship offered at the Culver Military academy to the high school students of Illinois. The examinations were held recently at the University of Illinois.

The scholarship, valued at $6,000, was offered by the Culver trustees in memory of Mrs. Emily Jane Culver, wife of the founder.

Koons is a student at the Parker Junior High school. He has been on the honor roll throughout the last term and was mayor of the school city organization and sports editor of the school paper.

Britain to Show World Wings Late in June

War and Supply Planes to Vie in the Air.

LONDON, June 18.—Among the innovations to be shown at the Royal Air force display at Hendon June 27 will be the Pterodactyl, a new tailless, three seater inverted engine plane. This weird looking machine has a 120 horse power Gipsy engine and is capable of 110 miles per hour.

Probably the fastest machines at the show will be the Fury Harker craft, reputed to be the speediest military planes in the world, being capable of doing 200 miles per hour and reaching an altitude of 20,000 feet in ten minutes.

This year's dispay, according to plans of the air ministry, is organized to emphasize the practical use of the exhibits. There will be, for example, an interesting exhibition of supply dropping by Atlas Aircraft, a method of bringing food to beleaguered troops which has already been employed with great success on the northwest frontier in India.

One of the features of the show will be a new development of aerial bombing in which a squadron of planes converge on the target from all directions at once instead of all the planes proceeding from one direction as in the past. Although it necessitates most careful timing by the pilots, it has the advantage of directing the plane straight at the object of attack.

Some of the outstanding events will be: Inverted flying; a display of three flying boats; six parachute jumps from three machines; crazy flying; a simultaneous takeoff of six fighting planes; a parade of new and experimental aircraft; and the catapulting of a large, twin engined bomber. The land catapult differs considerably from the type used at sea and is designed for use where the coasting area is limited.

For the first time there will be an exhibition of refueling military aircraft in the air.

C. A. Roland, 72, Leaves for His Wedding Trip

Charles A. Roland, 72 years old, of 21 Scott street, left on his honeymoon last night with his bride, the former Miss Florence K. Sanborn, 42 years old, 451 Belmont avenue. They were married at the Unity church, Barry avenue and Broadway, after County Clerk Robert M. Sweitzer had issued them a license himself. Roland, a widower, has lived in Chicago since the great fire. He has been employed for the last thirty years by William Graham & Co., plumbers.

Movie Gossip From Hollywood

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Hollywood, Cal., June 18.—[Special.]—Hollywood is hot over the turmoil raised in New York by the men behind the film studios' money bags, anent the disclosures by P. G. Wodehouse that he worked one year in Hollywood, earned $104,000, and not one thing he wrote appeared on the screen. It was called "willful waste" and the financial backers of picture studies set up an awful wail.

This situation is so old in Hollywood as to be part of the local color—in fact, an august tradition.

Donald Ogden Stewart worked on the same lot for months with the same result. He left Hollywood and wrote a successful play, "Rebound," that went over on the stage and is now being made into a film.

One follow-up on the experience of Wodehouse that comes to attention right now is that of Lajos Sillany, Hungarian writer, who now is on his way back to Europe after being paid bp Paramount for eight months without doing anything other than translating one of the studio executive's ideas into a screen play.

Final decree of divorce from Josef Von Sternberg, director and "discoverer" of Marlene Dietrich, has been entered here in favor of Riza Royce, actress.

The summer doldrums in Hollywood are the railroad companies' gain. The following exodus from one film plant here, Paramount, started today and continues tomorrow, with Henrietta Cohn, only woman movie studio unit business manager; Joe Mankiewicz, writer; Al Shean, formerly of Gallagher and Shean; Ed Sloman, director; George K. Arthur, and Karl Dane heading east. Shean, who isn't an actor any more, having served as "comedy constructor" for the recently finished Marx Brothers' talkie "Monkey Business," is going back to see whether Broadway might not need him on the stage again. Arthur and Dane are going to make some short reel comedies at the Paramount eastern studio. Prior to termination of their former series of feature length comedies this pair worked for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Sloman is going east to direct Nancy Carroll in the red head's next picture, "Wild Beauty," on the Long Island lot.

Fox has acquired talkie rights to "David Harum," and this sure fire story will be done again, this time by Will Rogers late this summer.

Ruth Renick is a one time screen favorite back before the camera. She is at Paramount doing a part in "Silence" and its her first screen work in nine years.

Monroe Owsley says his ambition in pictures is "not to make a million dollars, but merely to play one good part where I don't have to be continually inebriated on the screen."

Richard Barthelmess is bringing his daughter, Mary Hay Barthelmess, back to Hollywood from New York this week and a spic and span household is ready to welcome home the little girl who was snatched to New York last autumn as result of her mother's reopening the matter of her divided custody. Mary Hay will stay with her father here for the next six months.

Chic Sale, the Champaign, Ill., comic, has made a sound record of his recitation, "The Specialist," and it is being rented for projection at parties and dinners for from $50 to $100 per showing.

Tom Mix has signed a contract with Universal and at the expiration of his circus season will return to films as a cowboy hero again. His horse, Tony, is also stipulated to face the camera with Tom. At one time Mix was the highest-paid actor in films, during the silent days, when he drew $21,000 a week.

Norway's King May Visit Chicago for World's Fair

King Haakon VII. of Norway will probably be invited to Chicago during the World's Fair to dedicate the Leif Ericson memorial on the lake front. This was indicated yesterday.

BETROTHED

MISS MARY A. RYAN.

[Auburn Photo.]

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Ryan of 7128 Oglesby avenue announce the engagement of their daughter, Mary Alice, to Leslie Patrick Kewley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Kewley of 7722 East End avenue.

THE STAGE

THE favorite question of playgoers during the last year—"When will 'The Green Pastures' come to Chicago?"—may now be answered. This drama dealing with the religious fantasies of plantation Negroes, which has "de Lawd" as its central character, will come to Chicago early in the approaching theatrical season. It will be lodged at the Illinois theater, with its original cast, and is expected to remain there for about ten months.

Thus the new dramatic year in Chicago will have a sturdy backbone. No matter how flabby the list of "legitimate" offerings may become, we will be able to point with pride to "The Green Pastures." It is strictly a vertebrate affair. It has reached 550 performances in New York, and its life on tour, which will begin with the Chicago engagement, will probably last as long as that of "Ben Hur."

The booking of "The Green Pastures" at the Illinois suggests that the Theater Guild's program will be shifted to another theater. That may be the Erlanger, because the Guild's contract is with the Erlanger; but it is an open secret that this organization is yearning for a return to its old Chicago home—the Blackstone. Tracy C. Drake's plans for the latter playhouse have not yet been formed, but fifteen or twenty weeks of Theater Guild drama would not prevent him from carrying out his ambition to improve Chicago's reputation as a theatrical producing center.

Hubert Osborne, director of the disbanded Goodman repertory company, will leave Chicago today to amuse himself among the summer resort acting colonies of New England, and to read plays by undiscovered geniuses. He will return early in August; and if his present schemes ripen, the Osborne touch in stage direction will figure in the stage news of the year.

Several of the New York dramatic critics have been trying to anticipate Burns Mantle with lists of the "ten best" plays of the past season in Manhattan. Here, for example, is the list of titles announced by Robert Garland of the World-Telegram:

"Tomorrow and Tomorrow," "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," "Grand Hotel," "Elizabeth the Queen." "Once in a Lifetime," "Five Star Final," "As Husbands Go," "The Vinegar Tree," "Up Pops the Devil," and "Brass Ankle."

Mr. Mantle's selections will be announced in next Sunday's TRIBUNE.

The last week in July will find Ethel Barrymore on her way to California, ready to act Lady Teazle in Sheridan's classic comedy, "The School for Scandal." When that venture is well under way she will revive Ibsen's "Hedda Gabler" and call the two plays a repertory. She will travel extensively in her new rôle as muse of the one-night stands, but visits to Chicago and New York are included in her plans.

Lenore Ulric, recently of "Pagan Lady," will appear next season in a play called "The Social Register," written by John Emerson and Anita Loos, whose "Cherries Are Ripe" gave Vilma Banky and Rod La Rocque profitable employment on tour during the past winter. The latter comedy is listed for a Broadway showing when the new season begins, with a new pair of celebrities in the leading rôles.

"The Rap" will end its engagement at the Studebaker theater tomorrow night. C. C.

HOW TO KEEP FROM GROWING OLD

CANCER DEATHS GROW, 1930 BROKE RECORDS, DR. F. L. HOFFMAN SAYS

New York, June 18.—[Special.]—Cancer killed more people in this country last year than in any year on record, and it is now the second or third leading cause of death in American cities. That statement is made by Dr. Frederick L. Hoffman, consulting statistician, in the issue of The Spectator, an insurance publication, out today.

The cancer death rate rose from 71.6 per 100,000 in 1906 to 122.3 per 100,000 in 1930 in fifty American cities, a table contained in the articles revealed. Those cities, including the largest in the country, had a population of 18,171,248 in 1906 and of 30,504,520 in 1930.

The rising cancer death rate, the writer added, is apparent in all the civilized nations of the world, despite "world wide search for a cancer cause or a cancer cure." He added that, "thus far publicity methods to interest the public in early diagnosis and early treatment of the disease have been far from generally successful."

Deaths from cancer in New York city increased from 7,548 in 1929, a rate of 114.4 per 100,000, to 8,125, a rate of 116.2 in 1930, the article reveals.

Another Group Escapes City Heat at Camp

More Friends Add to Fund for Algonquin.

The sun was at his best summer form yesterday, but old and new friends of Camp Algonquin and the Free Ice fund were on the job.

Just before the warm weather closed in, ninety mothers and their children of pre-school age had been whisked off to Camp Algonquin for a breathing spell. Yesterday ninety more departed on the Northwestern railroad for the same destination.

Safe yesterday under the huge shade trees, they could roll in the green grass or paddle in the Fox river shallows, secure in the knowledge that wholesome, full meals would be waiting them three times a day for weeks to come. That babies will get all the sweet, rich milk they can drink, and that rest and sleep and exercise will replace pallor with the flush of health, and hollows will fill out day by day as weight increases.

Fortunately for these mothers and their families, and the many others clamoring to be admitted to the camp, the fund got off to a flying start this season with an anonymous check for $1,000, from an old friends of this philanthropic work. Interest items on other TRIBUNE funds have swelled the total, and the first donations from the general public are encouragingly generous. Here is how the list stands:

CAMP ALGONQUIN FUND.

Anonymous	$1,000.00
Abbie E. Tyrrell fund	349.86
Harriet E. Sayres Trust fund	25.00
Rogers Park Women's club; Leslie R. Nichols; Dunham Ladies' club; Ada M. Clarke; Washington Boulevard Temple	10.00
E. L. S.; Second Presbyterian church, Oak Park	5.00
Total	$1,434.86

Not nearly so great good fortune attended the debut of the Free Ice Fund. That carries on for those in the city, while the camp fund provides for those fortunates who manage to be assigned for two weeks there. But perhaps the former supporters of this fund only need to be reminded how necessary the ice is to the folks who haven't the pennies to spend for it. Down where the sun's rays beat most pitilessly, electric refrigerators are a thing unknown, and the free ice wagons on their daily rounds are hailed with joy and gratitude.

The luxury of ice is most appreciated when it is needed, and when every cent has been apportioned for something that simply cannot be done without. With the few cents that would go to purchase the cooling chunks cannot be spared because there must first be food, regardless of whether it is cool and nourishing, or not.

At least one group remembered the Free Ice Fund this year, however. The Temple Sholom Sisterhood, which contributes annually toward the charity and usually is first with their annual check, maintained their record again. The only other contribution received was from Pueblo, Colo., the donor being anonymous. Here is the condition of the Free Ice Fund now:

FREE ICE FUND.

$10.00	Temple Sholom Sisterhood
.60	Unknown, Pueblo, Colo
$10.60

Any amount, large or small, that you can spare to contribute either to the ice fund or the camp fund, may be mailed to this newspaper in care of the cashier of THE TRIBUNE, and will be acknowledged here. There is a long summer ahead, more mothers and children to be cared for than ever before, and perhaps the greatest need either fund has ever been called upon to help alleviate. Why not mail that check today?

United Jewish Group Sought to Safeguard Jews of All Nations

Wawasee, Ind., June 18.—[Special.]—Appeal for a united world group of Jewish organizations was voiced by Rabbi Felix Levy of Chicago. He spoke at the forty-second annual convention of the central conference of American rabbis here today.

There are five hundred rabbis attending the sessions which will continue until Sunday June 21.

"Amelioration to world wide Jewish distress might be induced if Jewery were organized and presented a united front to all its foes," Rabbi Levy said. "Nowhere is there a united world body authorized to speak for Jewery, but on the contrary at Geneva there are several associations that believe they speak for the Jew. This manifest division is an invitation to offending nations to continue their policy of discrimination. It is to be profoundly regretted that our Jewish organizations everywhere refuse to forget their differences."

Fort Dearborn to Bring Westerns Back to Screen

Indians will bite the dust once more on the screens of Chicago movie palaces, and cowboy heroes will lead the United States cavalry to the rescue of the beleaguered blonds, Carl Laemmle Sr., motion picture magnate, declared yesterday as he passed through the city. The public is tired of too many society pictures, and ready for a return to the old "westerns," he declared. Reconstructed Fort Dearborn on the lake front will be the scene of a picture built around the massacre, he said.

German Movie Men Want U.S. to Keep 'Hell's Angels'

[Copyright: 1931: By the New York Times.]

BERLIN, June 18.—[Special.]—The Federation of German Movie Theater Owners has notified United Artists that they demand the immediate withdrawal of the American picture "Hell's Angels" from the world market, it was learned, as an "anti-German picture that derogates the reputation of the German people."

Yankees Find Egypt Holds Them Friends

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, June 18.—The average American knows nothing about Egypt and cares less unless he has sufficient money to travel there. It is dismissed with a vague impression of tombs and relics of antiquity. The popular picture, like most, is false.

Under the changed conditions of the post-war period Britain decided to turn the country over to a native government as soon as a treaty could be signed by a truly representative group of ministers. Meantime, under the protection of the British mandate, American traders, educators, scientists and travelers have established deep interests in the country. Withdrawal of British protection will affect them deeply.

The American minister has much work to do in Egypt. Since the Egyptian Capitulations—an agreement to extra territoriality rights for foreigners—he is responsible for the exercise by Americans of the privileges they enjoy under the capitulations, and for their abuse. America has universities, colleges, hospitals, schools, missions, and archaeological expeditions working by the Nile.

They all enjoy these privileges which are considerable—including immunity from molestation by the police without the sanction of their minister. But not in ten years has an American been involved with the Egyptian police.

Egypt's two great industries are cotton and antiquities. America is vitally interested in both. The fluctuations of the cotton market at Alexandria is of prime interest in the United States. The raw materials Egypt exports to the United States she buys back as manufactured articles. Trade with America has been steadily on the increase, chiefly in machinery, automobiles, and scientific instruments.

The second industry of Egypt is now almost completely Americanized. If, owing to a war or an economic crisis American travelers ceased to visit the Nile the entire Delta would starve thereby.

Boys She Doesn't Like Kiss Her, While Ones She Cares For Don't

BY DORIS BLAKE.

"Marie" says this is a phonograph record of a young woman thinking out loud:

"I've that darned old kissing problem on my hands. There's no getting away from it. If I like the fellow and he treats me nicely and takes me places, I don't see why I shouldn't let him kiss me, once or twice. The only trouble is that I'm in love with a fellow who doesn't care two pins about me and it goes against the grain to kiss any one else. . . . That fellow the other night called me a 'punk' because I wouldn't let him kiss me. I couldn't have kissed him if he promised me a million gold nuggets. . . . Funny, though, he tried to date me twice after that. . . . But he's my girl friend's crush.

"A couple of weeks ago when I was out in that large car. . . . The going was all right; we had lots of fun, good show. But coming back, not so good. The car crowded and I had to sit on a fellow's lap. He wanted to kiss me. I like him, but I don't want him kissing me. Still, I didn't want to hurt his feelings and, inasmuch as the others were necking, I let him kiss me. But it was just like kissing a fish, or my brother. I managed to keep my head buried the rest of the way home.

"Still, I felt kinda badly because the other two couples go steadily together and it hurt me because I didn't have any one to like me a lot, too. The one I was with I guess likes me a lot—but I just don't care for him that way.

"Last night I went out with a chap and another couple. We two sat in a rumble seat. The air was so sweet and fresh and we were bundled up. He told me ghost stories and I enjoyed myself immensely. I rather like Dick. I wouldn't mind if he kissed me, but he didn't.

"Gene is the only one who sends the shivers up and down my spinal column, but he hardly ever takes me anywhere. He knows I like him and that pleases him. I'm just another scalp added to his waist belt. He has more girls than he knows what to do with. Admits he would like to have more, and that's the one I would fall for.

"I don't want to kiss the others. Then they don't date me again. O, yes, some of them come back. Still, what difference does it make about kissing them? I have to kiss somebody, don't I, and if I can't kiss the one I want to. Aw, but gosh, I don't want to!"

DORIS BLAKE ANSWERS

Backs Exposed to the Summer Sun Should Be Smooth 'n' Lovely

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

If you're going to turn out in one of those new bathing suit models which have in the back little more than a narrow strap to hold the rest of the skimpy thing on, you'd better turn the large sized hand mirror on that back and see if it's going to be equal to the exposure.

I saw a bathing suit the other day that may get by the beach censors—if their eyesight isn't too good. It is honestly described by a Fifth avenue stylist as "the most scandalous yet." It's no more than a brassiere and shorts. Heaven help the other poor beach patrons if a plump one sees this suit and becomes attached to it! And isn't it comical how the most unbecoming thing is so often chosen by the one who should not wear it? But it is of backs, rather than bathing suit censorship, we should be talking. Barer backs than ever are promised [or should I say threatened?] And backs can be awfully ugly, as well as very beautiful.

Of course, the bone structure you may not have full control over. Not this season, perhaps, because you can't pad out those wing flapping shoulder blades in a brief season. Too, I wouldn't be for scaring a skinny sister away from the beach haunts, for the water, if she swims enough, will be a body molder of first order.

The thing that is repulsively ugly about backs is a poor condition of the skin thereon. Noticeably up around and between the shoulder blades. Here is one of the favorite seats of blackhead and pimple activity. The suspicion is that the long handled brush is not put into active enough service for a good daily scrubbing thereabout.

Of course, much can be done for the contour of the back by simply holding the spine in a self-respecting, erect attitude, meaning not slumped, nor rounded, nor swaybacked.

Now, if the skin is cloudy, or worse, mother or sister or the maid will have to be begged to come to apply a little elbow grease to that unreachable spot. Elbow grease, soap and water and a fairly stiff bath brush—that's the quickest way to clean up. Follow with a warm rinse and a cold to clarify the skin further.

BEAUTY ANSWERS

M. H.: BLONDES SHOULD USE rouge sparingly, and only in delicate colorings. A glaring makeup cheapens their appearance. The lipstick should be a light carmine rather than a glaring red.

J. S.: RUB THE CALLOUSES with pumice to smooth down the hard skin. Then oil with olive oil or cold cream. My leaflet on the feet may be had for a stamped, addressed envelope.

Mrs. Charles E. F. McCann arrived today on the Europa accompanied by her daughter, Miss Helena W. McCann, who was recently presented at the Court of St. James's. They will go to their summer home at Sunken Orchard, Oyster Bay, L. I.

Chic Diamond Print for Daytime Costume

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

PARIS.—[Special.]—In spite of the bright colors liked by Paris couturiers, black and white hold their own in the spring race for chic, and at Longchamps, the horse show, and the Ritz—in fact, in all the haunts of fashion favored by the Famous Forty—black and white are present in considerable quantities, and on the smartest women, too.

Worth's society runner for daylight hours is in black and white reversible crêpe de chine. On one side it's printed with hair striped diamonds in white on a black ground and on the other vice versa. It's sketched here and the complete list of names, including Mme. Allez-Gadala, Mrs. Henry Monroe, and Mrs. Hendrick Van Loon, for whom it is being made, would take up all our space.

The frock of this ensemble, shown on the large figure, has a long tunic overskirt flared in front by a plaited panel and the sides mounted in curves on the fitted top and finishing in a plait. Its collar and lower sleeves use the white side of the material edged with bands of plain black crêpe de chine. There's a knotted sash of the black side with its ends edged in white.

The seven-eighths coat, shown on the small figure at the right, is of plain black crêpe de chine lined with the white side of the checked crêpe de chine which shows inside the collar and revers. This coat barely meets in front. It's trimmed outside its front edges with tiny appliqué triangles of white crêpe de chine and similar triangles accentuate the line of its slightly puffed lower sleeves. It's completely reversible and may be worn white side out, at will.

French Discovery . . . New Lemon-Magnesia Pack

An Utterly New Beauty Treatment . . . Whitens Skin Gently, Safely and Quickly . . . Draws Out Blackheads, Blemishes and Discolorations . . . Freshens and Tones the Skin to Unbelievable Smoothness

WHEN this new discovery was recently announced in Paris, beauty specialists were astonished!

Never has there been anything even remotely like this Lemon-Magnesia Pack. Applied as a smooth, white, dainty creme, it swiftly forms into a soft pliable mask that brings instant beauty to your skin.

Immediately you feel a gentle toning and lifting effect as sagging contours are corrected. Loose, "crepy" tissue about the eyes is perceptibly tightened and smoothed—crows' feet and surface wrinkles blended away.

Just smooth the dainty, fragrant creme over face and neck. Let it dry nine minutes. Then wash off gently. Skin is white—fresh, smooth, free from blackheads, lines and wrinkles, and full of natural color.

Simultaneously, dark skin is gently lightened and whitened. Sun-tan and sallowness are coaxed away. Coarse pores are reduced to normal invisibility—while the complexion takes on a natural delicacy of color and velvet-smoothness that no cosmetic has ever been able to imitate!

Secret French Process

The magic of this new rejuvenating facial lies in the exclusive French process by which it is made. Lemon and magnesia are blended in such a way that their effectiveness is multiplied many times. Held closely in clinging contact with the skin, their potency is doubled and tripled through the action of body warmth.

Lemon-Magnesia Pack not only acts as a marvelous corrective, but is a super-cleanser and freshener as well. One of its rare ingredients blandly dissolves pore impurities. Old dead cuticle is washed away—blackheads are eradicated—while the skin is left glowing with youth and radiant color!

Dazzling New Freshness and Color

Your first Lemon-Magnesia Pack treatment will give you a new beauty-thrill. The whole process takes only nine minutes. But the rewards are really amazing.

Try it tonight. Ask for Boncilla Lemon-Magnesia Pack at any drug or department store. See for yourself how it smooths and refines the skin. Only a dollar for a generous size jar or tube. And your money will be refunded if you are not delighted with results. Get it today! For sale by all good drug and department stores.

today at Onwentsia.—There are more than 400 entries in the various horse show classes—gaited, harness and hack, school horses, hackney and Shetland ponies—and over 200 dogs, many of them from some of the best kennels in the country . . . there will be more ponies than any other kind.

president, and Mrs. Cudahy probably will be back from Omaha where Mr.
Cudahy was called by the death of

To Wed Tomorrow

MISS JUNE S. MILLER.
[Weber Photo.]

The marriage of Miss June Spofford
Miller, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. P.
W. Miller of Champaign, Ill., to George M. Ackerman III., son of Mr. and Mrs. G. M. Ackerman Jr. of 6332
North Francisco avenue, will be solemnized tomorrow in St. John the Divine Episcopal church in Champaign. The bride attended Ward Belmont college at Nashville, Tenn., and the University of Illinois. There she became a member of Pi Beta Phi. Mr.
Ackerman was graduated in 1929 from the University of Illinois.

his partner on Wednesday. . . . The John Payne Kelloggs are giving a luncheon at Onwentsia tomorrow.
. . . Mrs. Robert G. McGann, chairman of the box committee, says that the proceeds will most probably fulfill the quota desired for the beneficiary of the show, the Lake Forest Hospital association. . . . The box-holders' list is very long and impressive. . . . Dicky Stevenson has asked to be permitted to enter his prize fishing worms in the pet show.

"Smörgasbord — Swedish National Sport," from the clever pen—or is it a portable typewriter?—of Mrs. J.
Allen Haines, is to appear in the July 1 issue of Vogue. Mrs. Haines has had several articles published in the last few years, one of them entitled "Adding Personality to Canned Goods" in a recent Ladies Home Journal. A fourth and enlarged edition of Mrs. Haines' unique cookbook,
"Tried Temptations," is to come out
this coming fall.

Carleton Smith to Lecture on Operas for Ravinia.

The first of a series of six lecture recitals to be given by Carleton Smith for the purpose of telling north shore women all about the operas to be presented at Ravinia this summer will be this morning at 11 o'clock at the residence of Mrs. J. Williams Macy of Hubbard Woods. This morning Mr.
Smith is to explain and analyze "William Tell," with which the season will open tomorrow evening.

During the course of the other lectures he will touch on the various works to be given this season for the first time. The Ravinia Opera club women who are sponsoring the lecture recitals include Mrs. J. Lawrence
Houghteling, Mrs. William B. Hale,
Mrs. T. E. Morrison, Mrs. George Stanley Parker, Mrs. Roland Whitman,
Mrs. Sidney Bartlett, Miss Isabel
Kline, and Mrs. Dwight Orcutt.

The here and there of it—the Cuban consul, Gaston Fernandez, is inviting 150 people to a soirée in Diana court on June 30 to see various versions of the Cuban "rumba" dance demonstrated by two dancers recently arrived from Europe . . . Miss Harriet Trowbridge, daughter of the Mason Trowbridges of 227 East Delaware place, has departed for a two months' European tour . . . Mrs.
Milan Hulbert and her four daughters—Ethel, Helen, Olive, and Adele

WASHINGTON SOCIETY

Washington, D. C., June 19.—[Special.]—President and Mrs. Hoover returned to the White House this afternoon from their trip to the middle west. They will spend a quiet twenty-four hours resting before going to the Rapidan camp for the week-end.

Mrs. Helen Leseure Richardson and her sister, Mrs. William Houghteling of California, granddaughters of the late Speaker Cannon of Danville, Ill., returned to New York this morning from several months stay in Paris. They will return to Danville for a short time before Mrs. Houghteling goes to her home in San Francisco. Mrs. Richardson usually makes her home here with her aunt, Miss Helen Cannon, but Miss Cannon's house has been closed for many weeks.

Mrs. Frank B. Kellogg, wife of a former secretary of state, is at the Mayflower. Mr. Kellogg received a degree from Princeton university yesterday.

—have been spending a few days at Lake Louise in the Canadian Rockies, having recently returned from a round the world trip on the Empress of Japan . . . Hubbard Phelps, who joined his mother, Mrs. Louise de Koven Phelps, at Watch Hill this week after finishing his school year at Middlesex, has two of his schoolmates as week-end guests, and they are to attend the Yale-Harvard boat races at New London . . . Mr. and Mrs. Robert McMurdy of Evanston have returned from a motor trip to Quebec and the Thousand Islands . . . Dr. and Mrs. James Whitney Hall are meeting their son, James Whitney Hall Jr., in New York on his return from a six months' European trip. (He spent some time with an archaeological commission of Johns Hopkins university doing dredging in Greece) . . . Charles Knickerbocker, Joseph Leiter, and the Stuyvesant Peabodys are having large luncheon parties before the American Derby at Washington Park race track tomorrow.

George Norton Northrop, head master of the boys' Latin school, Mrs. Northrop, and their son and daughter, Alexander and Jane, set sail on the S.S. Lafayette yesterday for a pleasant summer in Europe. In England Mr. Northrop will pay visits to Lord Dunsany at Dunstall priory in Shoreham, Kent; to Lord Hollenden at Hall place in Kent, and to Sir John Gladstone, bart., at Barden Park, Wiltshire. For July and August the Northrops will be at St. Marguerite in Brittany. Miss Jane, who has just been graduated from Miss Hall's school, is to remain in Paris.

Ernest A. Hamill II, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred E. Hamill, is on the honor list of Yale graduates for "high orations." Gaylord Donnelley, the Thomas E. Donnelley's son, and Alfred B. MacChesney III, son of Mr. and Mrs. Nathan W. MacChesney, are mentioned for "orations." Mr. MacChesney also is to receive a reserve corps commission.

THE CLICK OF THE GATE

By Alice Campbell

SYNOPSIS.

Clare, 15 year old daughter of Iris de Bertincourt, disappears mysteriously. Iris has been separated for years from her husband, Marcel, a man of great charm but no moral sense. They are cousins and the possible heirs of their tyrannical aunt, the Comtesse de Castelmauren.

Iris planned to divorce Marcel and marry Maj. Alan Charnwood. Charnwood and his friend, Tommy Rostetter, conduct a private search for Clare.

Iris moves to her aunt's home and learns that her husband is already domiciled there. He seems to have reformed. Alan meets Marcel and recalls having seen him at Le Touquet, hobnobbing with a coarse looking couple. That night Alan sees Marcel with Suzanne Marly, an actress.

A letter is sent to Iris, stating that Clare is being held for ransom. Her aunt offers to pay the sum asked if Marcel and Iris promise to become reconciled. Marcel calls on Alan. That night an attempt is made to asphyxiate Alan. He moves to Tommy's apartment.

Marcel sent flowers to Iris the night Clare vanished. From Iris's description of the man who delivered them Alan recognizes him as de Bertincourt's companion in Le Touquet. Marcel, who is known to be heavily in debt, is suspected as the instigator of the kidnaping, with the couple, known as Yetta and Pietro, his partners in crime, the motive being the ransom. Alan and Tommy make an unsuccessful search for the couple, but learn that they have a half-witted son. Tommy sees Marcel leaving Suzanne Marly's home at the hour scheduled for him to deliver the ransom. Alan calls on Iris and learns Marcel has not returned home. Marcel arrives shortly after, badly beaten up, and declares he was robbed by the kidnapers. Tommy and Alan tell the story to the police. They return to question Marcel and find he has vanished. They leave to search for Yetta and Pietro, in the neighborhood outside of Paris where they are supposed to dwell, each taking separate routes.

INSTALLMENT LIII.

A SUCCESSFUL SEARCH.

The figure stopped, gazed vaguely about like a blind man, then limped on as before. Charnwood started towards it at a jog-trot.

"Wait there," he cried in French, "I have something to ask you!"

Again the being halted, arms at sides, nor did it stir a muscle till the runner had crossed the intervening space.

What Charnwood saw was a young boy, hollow-cheeked and frail, his spare body clothed in a coarse dark jersey which came up to the chin. The small bullet head was bare, its jet black hair cropped close like a convict's. The face was a white blur, his legs still enveloped in mist, and as he stood there, poised for flight, he had the look of a semi-materialized spectre floating in mid-air.

"Can you show me the way to the Chartres road?" asked Charnwood as soon as he had come sufficiently close. "I've missed it in the dark."

There was no reply. Three more strides bringing him within a dozen feet of the waiting form, he described two dark slits of eyes fixed on him with an expression compounded of somnolence and petrified fear. Also he noted the youth's extreme emaciation, the shoulders sharp as knife blades, the lumpy, protruding elbows. Not a trace of answering intelligence altered the blank features, which yet had nothing of repulsive idiocy about them.

"The Chartres road," Charwood repeated, patiently explanatory, "you understand me, don't you?"

He took another step forward. Quick as a hare the boy evaded his approach, doubled, darted off at a tangent. For half a minute he could be seen stumbling and bobbing up and down, then, quite suddenly, the mist swallowed him up.

"Queer chap, that," murmured Charnwood, gazing incredulously at the spot where he had vanished, "Certainly not all there. The village idiot, no doubt. . . . However, I must get on."

Soon with the aid of his torch he discovered the path, and following it closely this time to avoid accidents, came upon a second stile beyond which was the wide, glistening road. The red latticed windows of the inn shone out of the night not fifty yards away. He hurried towards them with relief, and pushing open the door, entered and looked about him.

The tower at last—and in a locality he never would have thought of searching.

Within was a warm taproom, reeking of wine and spirits. Loungers sprawled on the wooden bench against the wall, some talking, others playing draughts, a few deeply engrossed in cheap newssheets. No one gave him more than a cursory glance, but the snubnosed landlord, polishing down the bar, nodded with reserved nonchalance.

"Monsieur?" he interrogated, hands on hips.

Charnwood ordered a bock and drained the glass before attempting more serious business. After this be asked for the telephone, but was told there was none here.

"Is there a garage, then? I want to hire a car."

No, the inn had no garage. There was one at the far end of the village. But it would be waste of time to look for it, since the only available motor had been let yesterday to a gentleman touring the château country. Something might be got from Chartres, though the postoffice, where the public telephone was situated, had closed an hour ago, and the one private instrument belonged to the local doctor.

Stalled again! There seemed nothing for it but to call on the doctor for help, or else push on to Chartres. While debating the problem Charnwood commanded another bock and decided, as he was here, to hazard once more his threadbare questions.

"I am looking for an old acquaintance who, I believe is living somewhere about this neighborhood," he began half-heartedly. "Do you happen to know of a man called Hector Lepin?"

He expected no result, sure by now that the persons he sought were employing some other name. Accordingly he almost dropped his glass when he saw the publican's eyes light up with instant recognition.

"Hector Lepin!" came the immediate response. "But certainly, monsieur, he is a client of ours. Indeed he spends most of his evenings here in this very room."

Impossible! Charnwood almost mistrusted the ready reply.

"This man is an artist," he stated, "with a wife and a young son. Can it be the same?"

The landlord gave a shrug. "I don't know so much about a wife," he said. "I understand the old woman with him is his housekeeper." He smiled and winked meaningly. "But there is a boy, a poor cripple, and Lepin himself is a poster artist, a clever one, too. If you'll glance behind you, monsieur, you'll see the sketch he did of me the other night," and he pointed, chuckling, to a charcoal sketch pinned to the wall.

He suppressed an exclamation of astonishment and bent closer. Along the bottom was inscribed a vulgar witticism, signed by the artist. The lettering was neat, beautifully done, with m's, n's and long-tailed p's which he recognised. No, there was no doubt about it. The hand which had written this had certainly penned the anonymous letter.

On the heels of this thought sprang another. That strange, lame creature who just now had fled from his approach—who could it be but the invalid boy whose connection with the Lepin couple had presented such a puzzle? He understood now the halting gait, the blank stupid gaze. Yes, he had actually seen Pietro's son, which must mean the artist's home was nearby.

"Yes, that's my friend's work right enough," he declared with satisfaction. "And now, perhaps, you'll tell me where to find him. I'll go along now and pay him a visit."

"Good, monsieur, I'll show you how to get there." The landlord threw open the door and waved his arm in the direction from which Charnwood had come. "You must go along this main road, away from the village, take the second turning opposite, and climb to the top of the hill. It's about two kilometres from here. There you'll come to a big common with a pond in the middle, and just beyond, standing quite alone, is Lepin's house—Clos Vert, it's called, a huge barn of a place. You can't miss it—it's the only house in sight, and has a bell tower."

The tower at last—and in a locality he would never have thought of searching!

"Have you seen anything of this afflicted boy?" Charnwood asked as he settled his bill.

"Only once—in his father's car. He looked very ill; I hear he suffers from fits. Yesterday the old woman came in to get a bottle of cognac for him—said he'd been taken bad. O, he's a great care, that Jacquot, but they seem fond of him for all he causes so much bother."

All this was rather mystifying. If the boy was subject to these attacks and altogether so fragile how was it he was allowed to prowl about at night? It occured to Charnwood he must have eluded his guardians' vigilance for once, and it was on the tip of his tongue to mention the matter, but thinking it none of his business he kept silent. What really concerned him was Clare.

"Is there any one else living with them?" he ventured as he turned to go.

"No one, monsieur—though how the housekeeper can do the cooking, marketing and cleaning in that big place and find time to nurse the invalid like a baby is more than we can understand."

Evidently the landlord had no suspicions regarding them. He had spoken of Lepin with respect, almost affection. If it had not been for the tell-tale lettering on the caricature Charnwood would have been inclined to think he had run these people to earth only to find them utterly harmless. He was satisfied, however, that it was they who had cut off the lock of Clare's hair and sent it as proof that they had possession of her person, they who had issued the abominable threats of violence and disfigurement which had thrown Iris into a panic. In other words he was about to deal single-handed with unscrupulous villains who would stop at nothing. Would it be wise in the circumstances to notify the local police and obtain help?

Margery Durant Calls Private Air Tours Abroad Fun

BADEN-BADEN, Germany, June 18.—(AP)—Miss Margery Durant, of New York, who is resting here for a few days after completing a 7,000 mile air tour with her pilot, Charles LaJotte, was enthusiastic today about the flying facilities of Europe, North Africa and Asia Minor.

"Those who have their own planes need not hesitate to view these parts of the world from the air," she said.

Miss Durant, who is the daughter of W. C. Durant, American automobile manufacturer, and her pilot left Hollywood April 8. Later she shipped her monoplane to Southarpton from New York and started her air tour of three continents from England.

From Croyden Miss Durant flew to Paris, Marseilles, Rome, Catania, Tunis, Tripoli, Benghasi, Cairo, Jerusalem, Damascus, Aleppo, Istanbul, Bucharest, Budapest, Vienna, Munich, and Baden-Baden.

The trip from Aleppo to Istanbul, a distance of 750 miles was flown in five hours and five minutes. That Miss Durant said she believed was a record.

Early next month she plans to continue to Bremen and Berlin and thence to the Scandinavian countries. She will return home in August.

New Summer Camp Carries On Relief Work

A summer camp is being established on a 207-acre tract of forest near Winter, Wis., for undernourished children and mothers by an organization which sponsors the Shelter, 2234 Geneva terrace. An appeal was made for public financial support yesterday by A. D. Plamondon, who last fall founded the Shelter.

A. D. PLAMONDON. [Matzene Photo.]

The camp is situated on Hunter lake with a 1½ mile frontage on the Chippewa river and a ¾ mile frontage on the lake. A 30 day vacation for each child will cost $20, or $5 a week, it is estimated. The Shelter has had appeals from hundreds of children.

Young Lutheran Pastor Urges Fact Facing as Repentence Basis

Members of the Young People's Luther league and Choral union at the Stevens hotel yesterday heard a young student pastor of Northfield, Minn., exhort them to dare to be "different."

"Jesus Christ never called men to do as the multitudes did," said the Rev. Lawrence M. Stayig in his address, "Repent Ye." He continued: "He challenged them to dare to go apart. Jesus Christ never called men to be like all other men; He challenges them to be different.

"The majority are indifferent, busy with material things, seeking the satisfaction of the natural being. To them the challenge, 'Repent,' means little. They will not get excited about it."

WANTS OLD IRONSIDES MANNED, UNDER SAIL AS IN THE WAR OF 1812

Washington, D. C., June 18.—(AP)—Plans are afoot to have the restored frigate Constitution sail on its "patriotic cruise" from the Boston navy yard July 3 under its own sail and manned by a crew of 75 dressed in naval uniforms of 1812.

Representative Bloom of New York, associate director of the George Washington bicentennial commission, said today he agreed with advocates of the proposal that "Old Ironsides should be put into commission exactly as it was of old—to the last detail."

He added he would urge the navy department to give favorable consideration to the proposal.

How to SUNBATHE HEALTHFULLY AND avoid SUNBURN

1 In the beginning, expose yourself to direct sun-rays for a short time—until your skin has become accustomed to the sun. In small doses the sun refreshes and benefits. In large doses it burns.

2 To have a safe, comfortable sunbath never expose your skin to the sun while it is wet.

3 While nothing in the world will positively prevent a burn if you expose yourself carelessly, you can avoid an ordinary burn and lessen a bad burn by sunbathing with the skin dried off and protected with an application of Nivea Creme before and during exposure. This precaution will assure you a fresh, healthy and invigorated skin.

4 When you have not taken these precautions and a sunburn or skin dryness develops after exposure, apply Nivea Creme—it will quickly soothe and cool your skin.

5 Druggists, department stores and chain stores will supply you with Nivea Creme.

FARM and GARDEN BY PAUL POTTER

"GAS" ANTS IN LAWNS.

Although ordinarily the industrious ant does not invade yards and gardens in sufficient numbers to be troublesome, at times in sandy soils, especially, it is deemed best to apply control measures. The simplest is said to be with the use of carbon bisulphite, also known as carbon disulphite.

A can of the liquid must be handled carefully, as it is as explosive as gasoline. One treatment usually is sufficient. The method recommended by F. Z. Hartzell, station entomologist of the New York state college of agriculture, is as follows:

The best way to get the fumes of the carbon bisulphite into the ant colonies, says Mr. Hartzell, is to make small holes about 8 to 12 inches deep and 6 to 8 inches apart around and through the infested area in the lawn. In each of these openings is placed one tablespoonful of carbon bisulphite and the hole immediately filled with soil. The treatment is made more effective by placing a wet blanket over the area fo rahout 4 hours to confine the gas. Carbon bisulphite gas is heavier than air and will replace the air in the tunnels occupied by the adult ants and the immature stages of the insects, thus effecting a quick death. One treatment usually suffices as most of the adults will be killed, and the young, if not killed outright, cannot survive without the care of the adults.

It is not necessary to purchase highly refined carbon bisulphite, which is often quite expensive, as the so-called "technical" grade is entirely satisfactory for the purpose and can be obtained at most drug stores at a reasonable price. Carbon bisulphite is highly inflammable.

Health Isn't Gauged by Height and Weight Charts, Say Experts

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEYAR

"How old is he?" said the school examiner.

"Twelve."

"What does he weigh?"

"Eight-one pounds," said the mother.

The school examiner looked at his chart.

"He's underweight," he said.

And a mother, with a perfectly healthy son, had anxiety bred in her heart.

For years parents and educators and doctors, too, drew such conclusions as this from arbitrary charts of height and weight for children of certain ages, for boys and for girls.

When, as a result of years of observations, you have been using parents to takes these standards with a grain of salt, it is gratifying to be at last able to back up your suspicions with the conclusions of such scientific authorities as physiological experts.

Dr. Mendel of Yale mentioned, not long ago, the fact that these standards of weight and height are arrived at by testing a large number of children of varied race, environment, etc., and arriving at an average. It is a misnomer to call that a norm for every individual child.

Dr. Charles Davenport, head of the department of genetics of the Carnegie institution, mentions another phase of the subject at a meeting of the American Philosophical society. Dr. Davenport has been making a study of growth curves of children for seven years. He compares an individual child's growth with an average of 100 cases, and he finds this:

That individuals often do not fit these averages of growth. They have different periods of growth—sometimes behind the mass, sometimes ahead of it, and some times taking a number of spurts. But—and here's the important but—such children are normally healthy. Dr. Davenport will present a new set of growth tables.

So, be reassured if your child does not fit a chart of height and weight, but seems perfectly healthy. The chances are 20 to 1 that he is.

WHAT TEN-WORD SENTENCE CAN YOU MAKE USING ONLY THE WORDS IN TODAY'S ADS?

the Chicago Tribune will pay

$1000 A WEEK IN CASH PRIZES for the Best ORIGINAL

"GOOD TIME CHARLIEGRAMS"

What Is a Good Time Charliegram?

A Good Time Charliegram is a sentence of exactly ten words which conveys a timely message of good cheer or sound advice:

"Every time you buy something you help bring back prosperity."
"The time to stock up is when prices are low."
"Large savings can be made on nearly everything bought today."
"When business stirs humming prices are bound to rise again."

Do you think you can make up a better Good Time Charliegram than any of these?—using only the words appearing in advertisements in today's Chicago Tribune? Try your hand at it! Read the simple rules and start looking for your words now!

WHAT sentence of exactly ten words can you make up, using only the words which appear in advertisements in today's Chicago Tribune?

Ten little words—that's all you need to make up a Good Time Charliegram. Just pick the words out of any ads in today's Tribune except the Want Ads. Put them all together and they may spell one of the big cash prizes which the Tribune is paying!

Try it. It's loads of fun—just like a treasure hunt. Read the simple rules and start looking through the ads for the words now.

THE SIMPLE RULES:

1. The Chicago Tribune will pay $1,000.00 a week in cash prizes to the persons who send in the best and neatest complete sets of seven (7) original Good Time Charliegrams in accordance with these rules.

2. A Good Time Charliegram is a sentence of exactly ten words which conveys a timely message of good cheer or sound advice. The sentence must be made up of words taken from advertisements EXCEPT Classified or Want Ads, published in a single day's issue of the Chicago Tribune. To indicate where you get each word, simply write down the name of the advertiser following the word. Words are NOT to be taken from the Want Ads.

3. Not more than one word shall be taken from the advertising of any one store, company, or individual. If an advertiser has more than one advertisement in the same issue of the Tribune, only one word from such advertisements may be used in the same Good Time Charliegram. The same word may be used more than once, provided that it is taken from a different advertiser every time it is used.

4. The prizes for each week are as follows:

1st Prize		$250.00
2nd Prize		100.00
Next 2 Prizes	$50.00 each	100.00
Next 4 Prizes	$25.00 each	100.00
Next 25 Prizes	$10.00 each	250.00
Next 40 Prizes	$ 5.00 each	200.00
73 weekly prizes totaling		$1,000.00

5. This offer is open to every one—men and women, boys and girls—except employes of the Chicago Tribune and their families. You pay nothing. Just prove your skill.

6. Good Time Charliegrams are to be submitted in complete sets only. DO NOT send in each day's entry separately. Hold all Good Time Charliegrams until you have the complete set of seven (7). Then send them to "GOOD TIME CHARLIEGRAMS," the Chicago Tribune, Tribune Tower, Chicago, Ill. All entries in the Fourth Series must be received in the Tribune office before 6 P. M. on Wednesday, June 24, 1931.

7. Contestants may submit as many sets of Good Time Charliegrams as they wish, but no contestant will be entitled to more than one prize.

8. You need NOT buy the Chicago Tribune. You may use the handy blank supplied each day in the Tribune or you may submit your entry on a separate sheet of paper. The Tribune may be examined at any of its offices or at public libraries free of charge.

9. The judges will be appointed by the Chicago Tribune. Their decision will be final. In case of ties, duplicate awards will be made to each tying contestant.

LITTLE ORPHAN ANNIE: What? No Witnesses?

VID LIFE ENDS WITH DEATH OF MRS. HAMMOND

Shared in Privation and Risks of Husband.

(Turn to back page.)

Washington, D. C., June 18.—(AP)—[illegible] which had led [illegible] adventure in the [illegible] of the earth to riches and [illegible] ended today with the death of Mrs. John Hays Hammond. She was [illegible] years old.

Her husband, the famous mining engineer, who was condemned to die on a South African gallows, was at her side. Their golden wedding anniversary came to Jan. 1.

Mrs. Hammond was instrumental in [illegible] Paul Kruger and other [illegible] Boer leaders to change the [illegible] of death against her husband to [illegible] sentence. Later a fine relieved the prison term. The incident grew out of the Jameson raid, one of the events leading to the Boer war.

Met Husband in Germany.

Mrs. Hammond was Miss Natalie Rossiter of Mississippi, the daughter of [illegible] Nathaniel Harris. She met her husband when both were studying in Germany. She once said of their early days together:

"We have suffered many hardships [illegible] and during my early life [illegible] have known what it [illegible] to be sheltered and cold. I have [illegible] with my baby on my breast [illegible] in the dust of the highroads. We have traveled together in [illegible] sort of vehicle, bullock wagon, cape cart and private pullman.

"For days at a time, my saddle has been the only pillow I have known at night. I have always been my husband's comrade, his greatest admirer and his best friend."

The Hammonds went to London from South Africa and the road after that was broad and smooth.

Women of Varied Interests.

Mrs. Hammond's interests were as varied as her experiences. She wrote often on South Africa; founded the Order of Mercy to combat infantile paralysis, worked for prison reform and continued her musical studies.

Her death was caused by sleeping sickness, but her physician said it had no connection with her life in Africa, nor was it even a form of the disease [illegible].

Three of her children, Harris, John Hays Jr., and Natalie, were with her when she died. The other son, Richard, is in Paris.

She will be buried tomorrow in Greenwood cemetery at Brooklyn.

REV. D. J. TUOHY FUNERAL RITES TO BE TOMORROW

Funeral services for the Rev. Denis J. Tuohy, who died in Java on April 11 while on a trip around the world, will be held tomorrow at 10:30 a. m. in St. Laurence's church at 111 east 72d street and Dorchester avenue, of which he was pastor. Burial will be in Holy Sepulcher cemetery.

The body of Father Tuohy reached San Francisco on Tuesday and is to arrive in Chicago this morning. It will lie in state in the church until the services, which will be attended by Cardinal Mundelein, are held. Father Tuohy was 55 years old.

Schools Ask $9,200 for Summer Pupil Food Fund

William J. Bogan, superintendent of schools, yesterday asked the board of education's commission on unemployment relief for $9,200 to provide food for summer school students. In a letter to Frank R. Loomis, secretary of the commission, Superintendent Bogan outlined summer school food needs as follows: five summer schools, $4,000; the Lorden school, $700, and $500 to be spent in various amounts in the high schools.

PASTOR HANGED NAKED; SAVED AS ROPE STRETCHES

Cries Bring Rescuers to Church.

Dallas, Tex., June 18.—(AP)—B. P. Brown, part time preacher and hotel baggage man, was stripped of his clothes by four masked men early today and hanged to a chandelier above the pulpit in the North Dallas Baptist church. His life was saved because the rope stretched until his toes touched a chair. Tonight he blamed dissension among members of the congregation for the attack.

The hanging, he said the men told him, was "an example" to his pastor, the Rev. H. P. Marler. A former member of the church who recently resigned as a deacon was arrested this afternoon for questioning.

Trouble in the Church.

"We've had trouble at the church all right," Brown told newspaper men. "Some of the members want Brother Marler to resign. They don't like me, either, but they are going to have a hard time running me off."

Brown said he and Mr. Marler had received threatening letters during the last three months. Federal postal authorities were expected to investigate this angle.

The volunteer preacher said he was abducted shortly after midnight after leaving the hotel where he works.

Rope Thrown Over Chandelier.

"They tied my hands behind my back and tied my feet together," he related. "A noose was put about my neck and the other end of the rope was thrown over a chandelier.

"After pulling me off the floor they put a folding chair under my feet, just below the tips of my toes. As they went away, one of them told me the chair wouldn't hold my weight even if I got my feet on it."

Brown said he kicked about and the rope stretched until his weight rested on the chair when he stood on tiptoe. He tore off strips of adhesive tape covering his mouth and began calling for help.

About three hours later he was rescued. He suffered no serious injury.

Forschner Will Leaves $1,500,000 Estate to Widow

The inventory of the estate of Thomas J. Forschner, contractor who died Dec. 12, was filed yesterday before N. J. Bonelli, assistant to Probate Judge Horner. It lists assets at $1,500,000 in cash, stocks, and bonds. Under his will the entire estate is left in trust for his widow, Mrs. Grace M. Forschner, 4800 Ellis avenue. The Forschners had no children.

Boy, 15, Is Granted Change of Venue in Murder Case

Varner Corry, 15 years old, slayer of Policeman Edward Smith, was arraigned in the Criminal court yesterday morning before Judge Philip J. Finnegan. The boy's attorneys asked for a change of venue, which was granted. It was indicated that Judge Joseph Sabath will probably hear the trial of the boy for murder.

CALL ON INDUSTRY FOR FAIR DIVISION OF ALL ITS PROFITS

New York, June 18.—[Special.]—The twenty-seventh annual convention of the Advertising Federation of America ended today with the business meetings in the Hotel Pennsylvania. About 125 persons were present to elect directors—who in turn immediately reelected the principal officers of the federation.

GILBERT T. HODGES [Harris & Ewing Photo.]

A resolution was adopted calling for equable distribution of profits made possible by the development of machinery and stating that the establishment of confidence that employment will be maintained and the use of advertising to arouse desire will release buying power now latent.

Chicago Bids for Convention.

Miami, Havana and Columbus, O., bid for the 1932 convention and Chicago and Milwaukee for that of 1933. The directors will select the 1932 convention site later.

Resolutions already adopted by the directors on the deaths of Walter A. Strong, publisher of the Chicago Daily News, and Timothy W. Le Quatte were adopted as expressing the sentiments of the entire membership, Mr. Strong was chairman of the federation board.

Gilbert T. Hodges, a member of the executive board of the Sun, was reelected president of the federation.

G. R. Schaeffer of Chicago was elected a director.

The resolution setting forth the federation's general position was offered by O. C. Harn of Chicago, chairman of the resolutions committee.

REPORT ENVOY TO DENMARK IS CRITICALLY ILL

COPENHAGEN, Denmark, June 18.—(AP)—Ralph Harmon Booth, American ambassador to Denmark, is very ill at Bad Gastein, Czecho-Slovakia, where he went after suffering from a heart ailment, it was learned at the embassy today.

It was said that the ambassador took over the post here while suffering from a weak heart and that his condition was made worse by a severe chill while crossing the Atlantic. He was much improved by a stay in southern Europe last December, but suffered an attack of influenza after his return to Copenhagen New Year's eve.

A recent sojourn at Nauheim, Germany, was said to have brought an improvement in Mr. Booth's condition but he was reported to have suffered a relapse after his arrival at Bad Gastein.

Estate of Shirley Short, Pilot, Is Valued at $48,000

Oscar S. Caplan, assistant to Probate Judge Horner, granted letters of administration for the estate of her husband yesterday to Mrs. H. Arne Short, 609 Ashland avenue, River Forest, widow of Shirley J. Short, who died with three others on May 26 in the crash of the Chicago Daily News plane. Short left insurance policies for $43,000 and real estate valued at $5,000. The widow and a daughter, Shirley Jane, 6 years old, are the sole heirs.

Dog Saves Life of Farmer Buried in Cave-in of Ditch

Willis Johnson, 21 years old, a farmer near St. Charles, is alive today because of the alertness of his pet police dog. Johnson was repairing a pipe line in a ditch when he was buried in a cave-in. His dog saw the accident and barked excitedly until neighbors responded. They dug out Johnson. He was unconscious and had suffered a fracture of the collar bone.

HOLD UP MARKET OWNER.

Ben Horvitz, owner of a meat market at 2031 West Division street, was robbed of $350 by a bandit who entered the place yesterday morning.

GIRL, 5, KILLED BY AUTO AS SHE CROSSES STREET

Elinor Nygard, 5 years old, 2051 Dakin street, was killed last night when she was struck by the automobile of George Turner, 51 years old, 1234 Argyle street, while crossing Dakin street at Garfield avenue, near her home.

This death increased the 1931 Cook county toll to 514.

An inquest yesterday into the deaths of a man and a woman killed early in the day in a grade crossing accident at 79th street and the Grand Trunk railroad tracks was continued indefinitely for a further report on the condition of another woman, critically hurt in the crash.

Those killed were Mrs. Marie Sanford, 24 years old, 8049 Manistee avenue, and George Masterman, 28 years old, of Ashtabula, O. Mrs. Margaret Mausen, 27 years old, also of the Manistee avenue address, is in the Little Company of Mary hospital with internal injuries which may cause her death.

Linus Cunningham, Milwaukee salesman, driver of automobile which killed George D. McLaughlin of Lake Forest in a collision June 8, was ordered held to the Lake county grand jury on a charge of manslaughter by a coroner's jury yesterday.

DROP PLEA FOR EXHUMATION OF BODY OF WHITE

Attorney Harry Berman, representing Stanley W. White, did not appear at the state's attorney's office yesterday to press his petition for the exhumation of the body of George Hastings White, who disinherited his two sons, Stanley and Leslie, and left his estate to Miss Elfrieda Prestel. Miss Prestel said she had been engaged to marry White.

The sons had intimated a belief that their father died under suspicious circumstances. On Wednesday, Attorney Berman asked Acting Chief Justice Joseph Sabath to order the body exhumed, but was told to confer with the state's attorney.

Radio Chief Asks Delay for Chicago Church Station

Washington, D. C., June 18.—(AP)—Chief Examiner Yost recommended today that the radio commission permit the North Shore church radio station WPCC, Chicago, to use more time on the frequency it now shares with station WIBO, Chicago. At present, WPCC broadcasts on Sunday only. Yost suggested it be permitted to broadcast Mondays to Saturdays, inclusive, from 12 noon to 1 p. m., and from 7 p. m. to 8 p. m. WPCC's Sunday schedule would be: 10:45 a. m. to 12:45 p. m.; 3:30 p. m. to 4:30 p. m., and 7:30 p. m. to 11:30 p. m.

Suicide Verdict Returned by Jury in Theater Death

A verdict of suicide was returned yesterday by the coroner's jury which investigated the death of Chris Kelly, 63 years old, 5153 North Oakley avenue, a druggist, who shot himself while seated in the Uptown theater on Wednesday night. A niece, Miss Ruby Kelly, testified that he suffered a paralytic stroke several months ago, the effects of which impeded his speech and made it almost impossible for him to sleep.

SHOOTING VICTIM IS NEAR DEATH; 2 WOMEN HELD

While Charles Rurey, owner of a bakery at 10238 Vincennes avenue, lay near death last night from bullet wounds received early yesterday, two women were being held at the detective bureau for questioning on the circumstances of the fray. They are Mrs. Amelia Matias, landlady of an alleged beer flat at 1803 West Washington boulevard, in front of which the shooting occurred, and Miss Opal Whitman, sweetheart of Rurey.

According to Miss Whitman, she and Rurey went to Mrs. Matias' flat Wednesday evening. The three took part in a drinking bout, in the course of which an argument began.

Dr. C. H. Lane was summoned by Miss Whitman to the Vincennes avenue address early yesterday and found the baker badly wounded. He notified police and Rurey was taken to the Jackson Park hospital.

Wife of Canadian Envoy Dies While in Childbirth

Yonkers, N. Y., June 18.—(AP)—Mrs. Ellen Cox Ewing Stone, wife of Thomas Archibald Stone, of the Canadian legation at Washington, died tonight in Yonkers General hospital, in childbirth. She was 23 years old.

Mrs. Stone was the daughter of Thomas Ewing, who was in charge of the United States patent office, during President Wilson's administration, and Mrs. Anna Cochran Ewing.

Her sister is Mrs. Alexandria Noyes, wife of Newbold Noyes, of Washington, whose father, Frank B. Noyes, is publisher of the Washington Star and President of the Associated Press.

Raise Height Requirement of Police Force One Inch

Aspirants to the Chicago police force must be an inch taller hereafter. In ordering examinations for patrolmen to start on July 7, President Collins of the civil service commission announced yesterday that hereafter the minimum height will be 5 feet 9 inches instead of 5 feet 8 inches. The age limit for applicants was set between 21 and 28 years, in place of a previous limit of 23 to 31 years.

FATHER'S ESTATE SHRINKS; SON'S SHARE NOW NIL

The boom time optimism with which George A. School, owner of a confectionery at 6306 Stony Island avenue, drew his will in 1929 collapsed yesterday under examination in the Probate court, and as a result Nicholas School, 23 years old, won't get the schooling which his father thought he was assuring him.

When the father drew up the will, stocks which he owned had a market value of $30,000. He left $2,000 to a sister, Miss Ellen School, and $1,000 to Mr. and Mrs. G. Hranaka, 6413 Harper avenue. The residue of the estate, which he thought would be $27,000, was left in trust for Nicholas' education.

School died May 9. Yesterday Attorney D. Parry informed Oscar S. Caplan, assistant to Probate Judge Henry Horner, that the estate has dwindled to $3,000 at present stock prices, and that after the payment of the prior bequests, there will be no residue for Nicholas, now a senior at Armour Institute of Technology.

MAYOR OF GARY MAKES CHARGES AGAINST THIXTUN

Mayor R. O. Johnson of Gary yesterday announced that Lieut. Paul Thixtun, night commander of Gary police, who was suspended Wednesday, would be charged with insubordination. The mayor declared that Thixtun had written a letter to Prosecuting Attorney Robert G. Estill criticizing the mayor's conduct of the police department and the behavior of police officials.

MAYOR R. O. JOHNSON.

Lieut. Thixtun denied he had written such a letter and Prosecutor Estil said he had not received the letter. The mayor exhibited an unsigned copy of a leter as proof of his charge.

Assistant Prosecuting Attorney Kenneth Parmalee, in charge of an investigation into vice, liquor and gambling conditions in Gary, disclosed that on May 9 Lieut. Thixtun furnished a list of gambling places in Gary against which padlock proceedings are pending. Among these places were a number owned by James Umpleby, campaign manager for Mayor Johnson, the prosecutor said.

The Lake county grand jury yesterday took up charges of a "fee grab" which were made by County Commissioner Charles Baran of Gary. He alleged that $86,000, which was paid to Rose Smith of Hammond for inspecting county highway materials over a five year period, was excessive.

ADE'S SPORTS CONGRESS SEEN IN A PREVIEW

Thousands in Cast at Soldiers' Field.

The Program

THE program for the Chicago Sports Congress to be held at Soldiers' field next Sunday afternoon follows:

1:00-1:30—Parade and flag raising.
1:30-2:00—Children's games and Grecian dance.
2:00-2:30—Address by Mayor Cermak.
2:30-3:00—Parochial Junior High school.
3:00-3:30—Relay races and Norwegian girls' drill.
3:30-4:00—Czecho-Slovak Sokols.
4:00-4:30—German turnverein.
4:30-5:00—Tug of war, 500 competing.
5:00-5:30—Mixed apparatus drill, 700 competing.
5:30-6:00—Polish Falcons.
6:00-6:30—Mass drill.

BY WILFRID SMITH.

Thousands of men and women stand at attention. The men are clad in white shorts. The national colors and the bridal dress of the women are colors of flame to the throng. Unbroken ranks, row on row strung with geometric precision, the thousands over the floors of Soldiers' field, from the horse shoe curve at the south to the far northern grass slope.

The thousands stand immobile facing their leaders. Then a massed band of 50 pieces, amplified a hundred fold by electricity, breaks into melody. The opening bars signal attention. Minutes of music, then the song of gymnasts, the largest ever assembled in Chicago, swings into the rhythm of its exercises.

Move in Unison.

Thousands of bodies bend forward, are suddenly are thrust overhead in arms. The thousands right face, left face, turn. What had been a rich suburban sea now is wave on wave of movement. But all move together.

This is the finale of Chicagoland's first sports congress next Sunday afternoon at Soldiers' field. And all for fun.

At Soldiers' field will be German Turners, Polish Falcons, Czechs, Slovenians, Norwegians. For the first time all will come together in demonstration of true gymnastics.

Before this astonishing magnificence of massed strength and ability born of diligent practice in drill halls.

Soldiers' Work Intricate.

There will be a thousand Czechoslovaks in their calisthenics. These men and women of the sokols will present a perfect picture of intricate patterns. And one of the bands will accompany their exercises, beating the rhythm which governs their movements. A week ago the Czechs presented their annual review at Cermak park, and today they will bring their skill and prowess to additional thousands of Chicagoans who never have been privileged to see it.

There will be a thousand Poles in a massed number, repetition of exercises first presented at St. Louis this year.

Two hundred boys from Foreman Turner high school, with their band and under the direction of their instructors, Ernest Lieberson and Edward Hall, will pass in review before the judges.

Features of Activity.

Hundreds of German Turners of the Illinois district, with drum corps in the lead, will swing out in long columns of athletes to spread in far flung groups and there to present features of activity.

The group will be champion Ruth Jaques, Lydia Danz and Eleanor Oeler, three of 16 girls in the Chicago Turngemeinde, will be one of the innumerable pictures, a unit of a gigantic whole.

Men, clad in one piece gymnastic garments, demonstrate companion, hand stands, pyramids, tumbling and acrobatics. Alfred Schreiber at the Turngemeinde, and Miss Jaques is the A. A. U. A. U. all around gymnastic champion.

Children Open Program.

Groups of children will open the two and a half hour program. In a few minutes they will show the progress of their races.

Then one corner of the field the Ukrainian, artists in the poetry of motion, will give their performance.

Two hundred runners, members of the Turner clubs, will sprint back and forth across the Stadium in a shuttle race. Two hundred men, half of them in gymnasium clad in military uniform, will test mass strength in the annual tug of war. For 600 feet, the length of the Stadium gridiron, a great rope, a divisor of that length, will stretch.

Field Exceeds 5,000.

More than 5,000 contestants from the ranks of metropolitan Chicago and Milwaukee, Aurora, Whiting, Gary, Racine, Kenosha will participate in the inaugural parade. Bands will be set in motion by the tramp of boots which, bursting high in the air, will release tiny American flags.

Tuesday the final drill.

POOR HENRIETTA— HOW LONG WILL HER GROCERIES HOLD OUT?
HOW LONG CAN SHE KEEP UP THE FRONT?

CAN'T HE SEE THAT SHE'S MADLY IN LOVE WITH HIM?
TOM— TOM— WAKE UP!
THINK WHAT BIM WOULD GIVE TO BE IN YOUR SHOES—
WELL— THE OLD BUSINESS KEEPS UP— YOU SEE— LOOK AT THESE ORDERS— ORDERS— ORDERS— ORDERS— FROM EVERYWHERE— COUNTRIES I'VE NEVER HEARD OF— NOTHING CAN STOP ME NOW— MY ONLY ADVICE TO YOU IS TO HANG ON TO YOUR STOCK—
BUT TOM MONEY ISN'T EVERYTHING IN THIS WORLD—
I KNOW— HENRIETTA— BUT THINK OF THIS BUSINESS— WHAT I'M DOING WITH IT— CONSTANTLY EXPANDING IT— AND THAT TAKES WORK— TIME AND MONEY— VAST SUMS OF MONEY— I'VE HAD TO BORROW ENORMOUS AMOUNTS FOR MATERIAL AND LABOR— THAT I'LL NOT GET BACK UNTIL THE GOODS ARE DELIVERED— I HAVE TWO OR THREE NOTES THAT ARE DUE IN A FEW DAYS THAT WILL REACH UP INTO THE MILLIONS— BUT WHEN THIS IS ALL OVER— AND THE WORK IS DONE— WHAT A BUSINESS I WILL HAVE— THEN IT WILL BE TIME TO PLAY—
In the meantime

Mastro Floors O'Dowd Twice; Takes Decision

Earl Mastro, the best featherweight Chicago has sent to the boxing wars in many a season, last night started a campaign which he hopes will carry him to the throne, now occupied by Bat Battalino. Mastro, who had fought only once since his draw with Fidel La Barba last August at the Chicago Stadium, decisively outpunched Midget Mike O'Dowd of Columbus, O., in ten rounds at Mills stadium.

The veteran O'Dowd stood up to Mastro for 30 minutes, never retreating, yet never better than an also ran. Twice Mastro floored O'Dowd with right hand punches. In the third round a right bounced Mike across the ring and to the floor for nine seconds. In the ninth, Earl shot a short right to the jaw and O'Dowd went down for a count of eight.

Knockdowns Spur O'Dowd.

Each time O'Dowd came back with a stamina that belied his age. After the second knockdown Mike shot a left to the face which sent Mastro falling away to the ropes.

Only in the sixth could O'Dowd stem the attack of his young opponent. And then, he could do no better than hold him even. Despite the uneveness of the battle it was interesting. And the crowd of 2,800 applauded after each round. They cheered Mastro's skill but they also praised O'Dowd.

Kid Irish, Cicero featherweight, and Leroy Dugan, Memphis Tenn., fought a six round draw which provided almost as much action as the main bout. Dugan lost the first and last rounds but his attack in between, in which he twice sent Irish down for one counts, brought approval.

Justo Slugs to Victory.

Pep Justo, former Wisconsin student and stable mate of Mastro, whipped Joe Sharkey, a middleweight from Albion, Mich., in eight rounds. Justo had a decided advantage in the slugging.

Al Engle, Muskegon, Mich., middleweight, knocked out Les Finnucane of Chicago in the second round of a scheduled six rounder. Finnucane was down five times before the conclusion. Harold Brown, a featherweight, won a decision in six rounds over Patsy Flanagan of Danville, Ill.

Pat Murphy, Evansville, Ind., protégé of Bud Taylor, knocked out Oscar Liebman, a gangling lightweight from the west side, in the fourth and last round of their fight. In the opening bout Small Change, Chicago Negro, was awarded a decision in four rounds over Sammy Goldman of Grand Rapids, Mich.

SUN MEADOW'S TRIAL WINS HIM DERBY SUPPORT

Has Plenty of Good Looks and Still More Speed.

BY FRENCH LANE.

A quiet, slender man and his race horse, both from Virginia, were in the spotlight at Washington Park yesterday where hundreds in the advance guard of American Derby visitors had gathered. There was something about this quiet Virginian horseman and his big bay colt that seemed to whisper, "Here's your American Derby winner."

The slender horseman was Tommy Rodrock. The big bay colt was Sun Meadow, which Rodrock trains. The owner of this big bay colt is Katherine Elkins Hitt, daughter of the late Senator David Elkins of West Virginia.

Yes, sir, there was an eleventh hour switch in sentiment to Sun Meadow that threatened to develop into a landslide by post time. The birds in the trees chirped it. The larks over in the adjoining meadows warbled it. The ducks and the geese in the infield lake seemed to quack quack, "Sun Meadow is the big horse of the Derby."

Steffan Will Be Up.

The rush of support to Sun Meadow started early in the morning when he arrived at Washington Park by motor van from Arlington where others in the stable owned by Mrs. Hitt are quartered. It continued to grow when it was announced that Jockey Earl Steffan had been engaged to ride the colt. It was under full headway after he engaged in his final Derby training gallop which took place between races.

Sun Meadow is the best looking horse I've seen this season. He's a picture. The old masters never put a more beautiful thoroughbred horse on the canvas. And can he run!

Of course you knew he could run a little or he wouldn't have beaten Jamestown and finished second to Twenty Grand in last Saturday's Belmont stakes. You knew he could run some or he wouldn't have been matched up with Twenty Grand and Jamestown in such a race as the Belmont.

Shows 'Em How It's Done.

All the folks at Washington Park were shown that he can run in that training gallop. It was a whizzer, the most remarkable perhaps any horse ever engaged in so soon after taking part in a grueling mile and a half battle like the Belmont of last Saturday.

Breaking from the three-quarters pole and under a tight pull all the way —well, you can study the fractions and see what he did for yourself. A quarter in :22 3-5, a half in :46 1-5, five-eighths in :59 1-5, six furlongs in 1:12, seven-eighths and breezing in 1:26, and

Chicago Becomes America's Turf Capital Over Week End

BY ARCH WARD.

The racing spotlight, which has been shifting from Baltimore to Louisville and back to New York, centers on Chicago this weekend. One of the turf's leading attractions, the American Derby, is down for decision at Washington Park tomorrow afternoon.

MATT WINN.

This will be the twenty-third running of the American Derby. Its inaugural was in 1884 when Ed Corrigan's Modesty raced away with the $10,700 stake. Since that day it has been won by such famous horses as Emperor of Norfolk, Spokane, Boundless, Rel el Santa Anita, Pink Coat, Sidney Lucas, Highball, Boot to Boot, and Toro. The value of the purse has been increased to $50,000.

There was no running of the American Derby between 1904 and 1926, when racing was outlawed in Illinois. The scene of the race until 1904 was old Washington Park, 63d street and Cottage Grove. It has been held at the new Washington Park near Homewood since its revival, with the exception of 1928 when the track was being rebuilt. It was moved to Arlington that year.

The absence of Twenty Grand, winner of the Kentucky Derby and the Belmont stakes, deprives the race of the class it ought to have. On the other hand, it looks like the most open of any of the rich three year old specials this year. There will be a dozen or more starters. Mate, the colt that beat Twenty Grand in the Preakness, has the best record.

Col. Matt J. Winn, president of the Washington Park Jockey club, is looking forward to brisk business at the turnstiles and mutuel windows. Attendance and betting have been off less than 10 per cent at Homewood this season despite three rainy Saturdays. This indicates the crowd may be larger tomorrow than at recent runnings of the American Derby.

SCHMELING'S TITLE CLAIM.

You hear various explanations for the apparent lack of interest in the heavyweight championship fight between Max Schmeling and Willie Stribling at Cleveland July 3. Some say people have no money to spend for prize fights at title price scales. Others contend neither is a fighter of championship class.

Maybe so.

But the one that amuses me is that the title is not really involved because Schmeling has no right to the crown. There can be no question that the honors, both technical and mythical, belong to him just the same as they have to every ring monarch from John L. Sullivan down through the ranks.

In a fight designated by all the governing boards as a test of championship class, Schmeling met and won from Jack Sharkey, the man ranking next to him in the opinion of those who sanctioned the match. It was no fault of his that Sharkey, in a heedless flurry, rendered him unfit for further action by a heavy blow to the groin. Whether he would have won or lost had the bout been continued is not pertinent to the championship issue.

An attempt to cloud Schmeling's title claim is in bad taste, if not a blot on America's reputation for sportsmanship.

PARADE OF NATIONS.

The Chicagoland Sports Congress, which will be presented at Soldiers' field Sunday afternoon, will bring together more groups than ever before have met in an event of its kind. For the first time the Germans, Czecho-Slovakians, Poles, Ukrainians and Norwegians come together to take a look at what the other fellow is doing in the way of mass athletics.

Sunday's spectacle will be the culmination of nearly a year's effort. Instructors in the various organizations have been drilling their pupils for months. Perhaps few outside of the technical committee can appreciate the time and work involved in arranging a mass drill acceptable to 5,000 participants from groups miles apart on the type of exercise they prefer.

It is not too early to congratulate the men and women who have cooperated with THE TRIBUNE in the promotion of the congress. They have labored enthusiastically to exploit the form of athletics they practice.

OLD PARTNERSHIP DISSOLVED.

Sammy Mandell, former lightweight champion, and Teddy Bodkin, who shaped his ring destiny, have come to the parting of the ways. They had been in business together since Sammy was knee high to a grasshopper. Let Bodkin tell about the grievances leading up to the break:

"After Singer knocked out Sammy in New York last summer I wanted him to retire from the ring. He had made enough money to live in comfort the rest of his life. I suggested that we build up a stable of three or four fighters and share our end of the earnings. This income would have enabled Sammy to keep intact the money he made in the ring.

"But I couldn't convince Sammy he ought to lay aside his gloves. He had two bouts in the fall and two more in Florida last winter. Meanwhile I picked up Wesley Ramey, a lightweight who won decisions from two boys who beat Mandell after he lost his title. Now that Ramey looks ready to make real money Sammy demands half of his earnings.

"Ramey's contract mentions only myself as his manager. I would gladly have split with Sammy, as we always have done, had he agreed to quit the ring."

Sig Hart is now Mandell's business representative. It is reported that Ramey wants Mandell as his manager but is bound to Bodkin by contract.

Bodkin brought Mandell to the front as a bantamweight ten years ago. Although the firm of Kane and Long and later Kane alone handled Sammy's affairs for several years, he and Bodkin have been associated throughout his career.

HAGEN'S RECORD 68 LEADS FIELD IN WESTERN OPEN

Veteran Shows Flash of Old Golf Skill.

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.
[SCORES ON FOLLOWING PAGE.]

Dayton, O., June 18.—The general suspicion in golfing circles that Walter Hagen will erase his embarrassment of last year, when he failed to win a major championship, was partly verified today when he shot a record breaking 68, three under par, to lead the first round of play in the thirty-second annual Western Open golf tournament at the Miami Valley Country club.

The tournament goes into its second 18 hole round tomorrow, but before the 36 hole final on Saturday is reached, Walter may have considerable difficulty in winning his fifth Western open title. His chief obstacle appears to be one Ed Dudley, of Wilmington, Del., a lengthy, drawling person who came up off the eighteenth green along about sundown today and casually turned in a card of 69 to take second place.

Dudley Not Only Contender.

This is not to say that Dudley is the only stone in Hagen's path to a comeback. Sixty-four of the 96 players who competed today brought back scores of 78 or better. All of them will continue in the second round, and tomorrow's 64 low scorers, together with ties for 64th place, will engage in the final Saturday.

Among the others reckoned to get in Hagen's way before Saturday night are Olin Dutra, Santa Monica, Cal., and Charley Garringer of Indianapolis, each of whom had 70's; Gene Sarazen, Flushing, L. I., the defending champion, who shot a cautious par 71 today; Gene Marchi, the assistant pro at the Miami Valley club whose knowledge of every hill and dale on the course brought him a 71, and another Buckeye golfer, Lew Waldron of Celina, who also had a par card.

Following them, and all tied at 72, were Bob McDonald of Chicago; George Von Elm, the business man golfer from Los Angles; Emmet French, Southern Pines, N. C.; Clem Weichmann, Portsmouth, O.; Jules Ackerbloom, Little Rock, Ark.; J. B. Rooney, Columbus, O.; and Joe Corsillo of Cleveland.

A Competitive Course Record.

Hagen's round of 68 sets a competitive course record for the Miami club. Walter reconnoitered the situation here shortly after his arrival yesterday afternoon, contenting himself with 70 in a trial round. His putting has been slightly awry, and he dabbled on the practice green for some time before going to the starters' tee today.

He came up to the ninth green even with par, but startled the fulsome gallery by missing a 3 foot putt at that point, giving him a one over par 36 at the turn. That error apparently

Yale-Harvard Crew Race an Evening Party

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New London, Conn., June 18.—Tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock on the River Thames, at this place, those two ever-loving enemies, Harvard and Yale, are having their sixty-ninth exclusive rowboat race—exclusive that is by comparison with the big free-for-all at Poughkeepsie, which Harvard and Yale annually have nothing to do with.

If the start is delayed as much as half an hour by any of the little maladjustments which often contrive to delay the starting of boat races, the boys will be given mandoline and paddles and the race will be turned into a moonlight canoeing party. The reason, for delaying the start until 8 o'clock is something to do with the tide, but I hope I will not be pressed for details about this because the decision was made by the committee and the committee cannot be pressed.

Any and all persons not wishing to wait around until 8 p. m. for the start of the row-boating have the committee's permission to go away, but I do not think anybody will go away because the crowd generally is composed exclusively of young and old Harvards and Yales and their sisters and the cousins and their guests.

It's a Swanky Affair.

There is a noticeable tendency to pass cutting remarks about the exclusiveness of the Harvard and Yale race, but Harvard and Yale do not pay any attention to this, their theory being that a couple of gentlemen ought to be allowed to go out and row themselves some boat race if they wish to, without any obligation to invite everybody else who happens to own a boat. If Harvard and Yale were to do this, the race would not be the Harvard-Yale race any more.

The River Thames is always chock-a-block with big, private steamboats whose very work boats, hanging modestly on the davits, are as big as yachts to the common run of citizens, and the natural presumption that all this fleet belongs to old graduates of Harvard and Yale plainly suggests that the boys of H. and Y. make good.

Mr. Morgan's an Old Grad.

Perhaps, with the aid of a Lloyd's register and a who's who, I could prove that one of these big boats belongs to some old grad of Southwestern Oklahoma Normal or Long Island dental college, but, just offhand, the event being what it is and all these custom built steamboats being present in such profusion at no other occasion, the burden of proof is on Poughkeepsie. And, anyway, the largest private and personal steamboat in the world, the Corsair, which is supposed

HORNSBY HITS 9TH HOME RUN AND WILSON 7TH

Pat Malone Stops Brooklyn.

BY EDWARD BURNS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Brooklyn, N. Y., June 18.—It shouldn't be so hard for you to forget about the 7 to 5 beating that Dazzy Vance gave the Cubs in the first game of today's Chicago-Brooklyn double header if you'll just concentrate on the 8 to 0 blistering Pat Malone gave the Robins in the sundown tableau.

It is true, old subscribers, that Dazzy was the Dazzler of old in that he struck out eleven Cubs in the first game. But, there were differences at that, not the least of which was Hack Wilson's No. 7 homer, a great affair that hit in the upper deck of the left centerfield stand. Hack didn't used to get homers off Dazzy, but he got a fine one today and a single besides.

Cubs Score Third Shutout.

But it's that second game that we want to talk about—that No. 5 victory of Pat Malone's and the third shutout the Cubs have whittled out this season.

Only five hits were knocked off Pat and three of these were made by Babe Herman. Nary a runner got to third and only two reached second. Pat fanned six and walked only one, the one being Bissonette, who got passage with two out in the first inning.

In this cheering second contest Manager Hornsby appeared, terminating a three game benching which he imposed on himself in Chicago for not hitting. It may be said that Rogers took the reprimand like a little man and his response to the setdown was a single, which developed into the first and winning run of the game, and later he made the third Cub run with a homer into the left field stand, his No. 9 of the year. Manager Hornsby said after the game that he thinks he'll let Second Baseman Hornsby keep playing for a spell, seeing as he did so noble this afternoon.

Hemsley Has Perfect Day.

Don't get the idea, however, that Malone and Hornsby were the whole works in this triumphant spectacle. Rolly Hemsley had a perfect showing at bat with a walk and three hits. His first hit drove in the first two runs, his second developed into a run, and his third drove in Wilson. Cuyler and Stephenson also were three hitters.

The series will be resumed here tomorrow afternoon with Charley Root going against Babe Phelps, with Sloppy Thurston a possible alternate for the Babe.

FIRST GAME

Vance made it apparent at the outset of the first game that he was scheming to make it one of his old time strikeout carnivals. Cuyler started the game with an infield single. Then Dazzy rared back and fanned English, Blair, and Stephenson; Woody after a count of three balls and two strikes; Clarence after one ball, two strikes and a mess of fouls, and Stephenson on three pitches.

In their half the Robins picked up a pair of runs rather cheaply. Frederick started things with a hit that might have been fielded by Grimm and went to third on Gilbert's single to center. Herman walked, and the bases were full, with none out. Bissonette flied to Wilson, Frederick scoring and Gilbert going to third after the catch. A wild pitch by Sweetland permitted Gilbert to score and Herman to proceed to second. O'Doul bounced to Grimm and Wright flied to Cuyler.

Wilson Among Victims.

To start the second Wilson fanned to make it four in a row for Vance, Hack whiffing after getting two balls. Hartnett took two strikes and then beat out a roller towards third. Gabby was caught dozing off first and Jurges fanned after a count of two balls and two strikes.

Both teams made a run in the fourth, the Cubs on singles by English and Stephenson, an error by

In the Wake of the News

EARLIER CHICAGO.

DEAR WAKE: That locality from 22d to 24th street and from State to the L. S. & M. S. tracks which is in line with Clark street was an open prairie in the '70s, and there we played baseball.

About 1876 A. G. Spalding and others built a ball park extending from 23d to 24th and from Butler (now Armour avenue) to the railroad right of way. That was the original White Stocking park.

The Chicago City Railway company operated a horse car line on State from Lake to 31st and later to 39th street, then the city limits. There was a switch at 23d, and when baseball games were being played extra cars were "stored," until the game was over, on a side track on private land on the north side of 23d street. We kids played on and about these cars, which were of the cross seat type of summer car used later in cable trains after 1882.

State street in the '70s was simply a dirt road from 22d street south. The idea of raising the grade was being slowly carried into effect south of 22d to 31st (1876-'80). It was up steps and down steps on the walks. Some were at the new level and many had not been changed. It was a long time before all were made uniform.

J. C. Howland.

Hamlin's Grand Opera house, the present Cohan's Grand, was located on Clark street, opposite the courthouse. It was reconstructed on the site of the former "Coliseum" and opened in the fall of 1880. It was rebuilt, except for a different proscenium wall and the stage ventilator, in accordance with the theater ordinance, and was considered one of the safest theaters in existence. A large ventilator was placed through the roof to discharge foul air from the auditorium (1882). F. R.

Personality in Music.

A music score has personality
As surely as in human face 'tis writ—
A certain radiating entity
Which breathes from it.

Some tunes are only drab parades of notes
Which hasten by in colorless display—
The gushings from uninteresting throats
With naught to say.

But other songs have not been heard before,
Their measures simple, yet show subtle skill,
And touch the listening soul's responsive core,
Make us thrill.

'Til music fails to satisfy the ear,
Songs legion from impassioned minds will float—
The host which with indifference we hear,
The few of note.

HAGEN'S RECORD 68 LEADS FIELD IN WESTERN OPEN

Veteran Shows Flash of Old Golf Skill.

riled Walter no little bit, for he disposed of the 495 yard tenth with an eagle 3, manufactured with an 18 foot putt.

He brought down birdies on the second, third, fifth, and fifteenth greens, and obligingly reserved his fifth and final birdie for the eighteenth, where the clubhouse gallery surged down from its place on the big slope and joined the faithful walkers in cheering a 15 foot putt, which brought the birdie 3.

Few Trail Dudley.

In contrast to the crowds which divided themselves among the Hagen-Mortie Dutra and Von Elm-Sarasen acts, only a few stragglers trailed Dudley around in his effort of 69. His performance didn't have the brilliance of Hagen's, for it was marked by only three birdies as compared to Walter's five. But it was the same consistent golf which the long boy from Delaware has been displaying since he started going around the course Monday.

Dudley is one of those golfers who always seems to be in at the finish, but not far enough in front. He fooled the experts in the winter, however, by taking the $10,000 Los Angeles open title, and tonight many predicted that he will finish in front of Hagen when this tournament ends.

The cards turned by Hagen and Dudley follow:

Hagen, out	532	335	845—36
Par, out	444	345	434—35
Hagen, in	545	433	433—33—68
Par, in	545	434	434—36—71
Dudley out	446	245	433—35
Dudley in	445	433	434—34—69

Von Elm Under Handicap.

There was a great to do in the neighborhood of the ninth green, which, like the eighteenth, is a stone's throw from the clubhouse, when Von Elm came along with a 33 for the first nine. Even though he exploded comparatively on the second nine with a 39, George's total of 72 was remarkable in that he was operating with a left thumb dislocated in a recent accident. He played with a grooved splint built so as to fit the handles of his clubs.

Chick Evans of Chicago, the only amateur to win the western open, having taken it away in 1910, surprised the experts with a 73, which might have been considerably improved but for his failures on the greens. McDonald and his 73 also have been included in the title reckoning, since he might have bettered it if he hadn't three putted the sixteenth and seventeenth, after taking birdies away from the first, fourth and fourteenth.

The field was reduced by a number of late scratches this morning, including that of Abe Espinosa of the Medinah Country club, Chicago, winner of the Western open in 1928; Charley Lacey of Great Neck, L. I.; and Clarence Gamber of Detroit, Mich., famed as the longest driving golfer in the country. Whatever may have been taken from the tournament by Tommy Armour's withdrawal yesterday has been more than made up by the playing of Hagen, Dudley, Sarazen, and Von Elm.

CLINKSTOCK AND STEINKE MATCH SIZE ON MONDAY

Hans Steinke and Jim Clinkstock, who clash in one of Promoter Doc Krone's double windup contests next Monday night in the opening open air all heavyweight mat show at Mills stadium, are two of the largest men now active in any sport.

Boxing has its Primo Carnera and baseball has its Buzz Arlett, but both Steinke and Clinkstock are taller than the giant Italian boxer and weigh almost as much. For years rival grapplers feared Steinke because of his tremendous physique and most of his opponents were beaten before the match started.

Clinkstock is slightly taller than the German and outweighs him by a few pounds. Both are close to the 250 pound mark.

In the other half of the main event Jim McMillen, former Illini football player, takes on Frank Bronowics. Three other contests have been arranged in support of the dual features, as follows: Karl Pojello vs. Nazareno Poggi; Milo Steinborn vs. Jack Washburne, Jack Smith vs. Marshall Blackstock.

LOW NET IS WORTH ONE GOOD HAM AT OLYMPIA SUNDAY

Sunday will be Stockyards day at the Olympia Fields Country club, and members who spend their working days in the Union Stockyards are expected to compete. A novel list of prizes will be offered. Hams, bacons and such being offered in place of the usual cups and prizes.

Awards will be made in low net for class A, B, C, and D players, low net for father and son, low net score for any guest, low net for five 1931 members at Olympia, low net for ladies, low net for mixed foursomes, low net for father and daughter, low net for brother and sister, and all events, full handicap.

Among those expected to compete are George A. Blair, president of Olympia Fields; Edward F. Swift, Harold H. Swift and John B. Scott.

300 BOND MEN TO GOLF TODAY OVER MEDINAH

More than 300 will participate in the nineteenth annual field day of the Bond Men's Club of Chicago at the Medinah Country club today, the largest turnout for the annual event in the history of the club.

The feature event on the card is the intercity golf competition in which the Milwaukee Bond club golf team, composed of James S. Daggett, J. Tracy Hale, Karl Maier Jr., and William G. Margin, will compete for the Dillon-Read cup with the Chicago team, composed of Howard R. Walton, captain; Douglas Casey, George Dawson, and John Lehman.

Play will be over courses No. 1 and No. 3. Players will be divided into two classes, class A, consisting of players with the lowest handicaps, and class B, consisting of players with the highest handicaps. There will also be a tennis singles tournament for the I. Newton Perry cup, a five inning baseball game, exhibition boxing bouts, a buffet luncheon, a dinner, music, movies, and indoor sports events.

Yale, Harvard Crews Hold Their Own Regatta Tonight

to run up a bill of $8,000 a day even when she is tied to a dock, belongs to a Harvard old grad by the name of J. P. Morgan.

In fact, Mr. Morgan seems to have overbuilt this last time, for his present Corsair is so big that she can't go through the draw bridge at the south boundary of the four mile rowing course. His son, Harry Morgan, who was captain of the Harvard boat in nineteen something, was out there on the tide this evening, tugging at a sweep and blowing a bit with the exertion, in an informal race called, if you please, the annual gentlemen's race.

So, you see, Harvard and Yale are so well along in tradition by now that they have gentlemen, even as Oxford and Cambridge.

Harvard has won only one race in the last ten years and none since 1927, but the Harvards are a patient lot and Mr. Will Bingham, their athletic director, may merely be pursuing a twenty year plan. This year Harvard beat the Navy, and as the Navy beat Columbia, which had beaten Yale, maybe Harvard should now tell Yale to go and get a reputation.

But that isn't the way they do at Harvard and Yale. Harvard would rather be licked by Yale than to win from every other school in the U. S. A. and, though they don't reciprocate the feeling in full down at New Haven, nevertheless they do take more pleasure from licking Harvard when they do, than they would if they could, from licking all the rest of the world.

Here's a sporting proposition

IT is gratifying to watch the great country-wide swing to Camels, But, knowing as much as we do about tobacco, it is hard for us here at Winston-Salem to understand why everybody doesn't smoke them.

We've about come to the conclusion that the people who don't smoke Camels are simply the people who haven't tried them.

You see Camels are a blend of fine Turkish and mellow Domestic tobaccos, the choicest money can buy.

We don't have to parch these tobaccos to make them mild. They're just naturally a cool, delightful smoke.

Parching, sometimes resorted to for the purpose of reducing the bite and burn of strong, rank tobacco, would ruin the flavor and aroma that has made Camels so popular.

In fact, we take every precaution to safeguard the natural flavor of our tobaccos by wrapping every Camel package in a Humidor Pack of moisture-proof Cellophane to air-seal that flavor in.

If you don't smoke Camels, it must be because you haven't tried them. And if that is true you simply don't know what you're missing.

So here's a sporting proposition. Switch over to Camels for just one day. Then, after you have known the delights of a rich, cool, mild cigarette properly conditioned, go back to your old brand—if you can.

CAMELS

NO CIGARETTY AFTER-TASTE

● Don't remove the moisture-proof Cellophane from your package of Camels after you open it. The Humidor Pack is protection against sweat, dust and germs. It delivers fresh Camels and keeps them right until you smoke the last one

CARDINALS SCORE FOUR RUNS IN 7TH BEAT BRAVES, 5-4

Haley's Homer Provides Winning Margin.

Boston, Mass., June 18.—[Special.]—The Cardinals scored four runs in the seventh inning off Ed Brandt and beat the Braves today, 5 to 4, in the second game. A double by Mancuso, three bases on balls, and two Boston errors gave St. Louis its four runs. Boston filled the bases with one out in the ninth after scoring one run, but Moon fanned and Moore grounded out. Haley hit a homer in the eighth.

GIANTS BEAT PIRATES, 3-1.

New York, June 18.—[Special.]—Carl Hubbell pitched a six hit game today as he shifted the Giants to defeat Pittsburgh, 3 to 1, in the first game of the series. The visitors raised New York's winning streak to six straight. Hubbell had the Pirates puzzled all the way and would have scored a shutout except for successive errors by Jackson and Terry in the first inning. Lloyd Waner got three of the Pirates' six hits.

Larry French, who had won two victories over the Giants, was touched for nine hits, seven being bunched in three innings. Score:

Frederick and Wilson's infield out. The Robins made theirs on Wright's double and a single by Finn.

The Cubs tied the score in the fifth. After Jurges had fanned the second time, Grimm beat out an infield hit and scored on Sweetland's triple. Sweetland held third while Gilbert was throwing out Cuyler, but came home on English's double.

The 7 to 3 tie did not last long, maybe because Lester had to run so hard on his triple. The Robins made four runs in the fifth on singles by Vance and Gilbert, a double by Herman, a single by Bissonette, the winging of O'Doul by Sweetland, which caused Lester to go away, and a single by Wright off Bush.

In the sixth the Cubs made their fourth run on singles by Stephenson and Wilson and an error on Grimm, by Finn.

The last run of the game was Wilson's homer.

SECOND GAME

There weren't many scoring threats in the second game until the Cubs busted loose for a couple of runs in the fourth inning.

After English had been retired in the fourth, Hornsby singled to left and went to third when Stephenson knocked his second single of the game. A walk to Wilson filled the bases. Then Hemsley stepped up and smacked a single to right center which scored Hornsby and Stephenson and put Wilson on third. Further progress in the inning was halted when Jurges hit into a double play.

The Robins hoped to do some scoring in their half of the fourth, when Bissonette opened with the Robins' third hit off Malone, but Cuyler retired O'Doul, Wright, and Finn, making nice catches on all three.

Hornsby Hits Homer.

The Cubs' third run was that homer of Hornsby's in the sixth. Before the inning was over the Cubs had another run. Wright threw out Stephenson and Wilson flied to Frederick. Hemsley then singled to left, after which Gilbert made a bad throw to second on Jurges' grounder, putting Hemsley on second and Jurges on first. Grimm singled to right, Hemsley scoring and Jurges reaching third.

The Cubs added three runs in the seventh. With one down, English singled off Day, who had relieved Luque at the start of the inning, and went to second on a wild pitch. Woody went to third on Hornsby's out and scored when Stephenson pounded his third hit of the game and his fifth of the afternoon. Wilson then doubled off the scoreboard in right center, scoring Stevie, and Hack came home when Hemsley made his third successive single.

The Cubs made their last run in the eighth on a walk to Grimm, Malone's sacrifice, and Cuyler's third single.

Sox Gather Again; Meet Macks Today

The various sections of Donie Bush's nomadic White Sox will reassemble today as the southsiders prepare to engage the Philadelphia Athletics in the first game of a four piece series at Comiskey park.

Bush returned to the city early last evening with the reserves, who defeated the Albany, N. Y., Eastern leaguers in an exhibition game. Here they joined that part of the aggregation which came directly home from Boston and the cripples, who have been holding forth on the local rubbing tables while their mates participated in the disastrous eastern trip.

Encouragement, which had been painfully missing on the road campaign, came in the form of an announcement by Bush that Carl Reynolds would be ready to take his place in the Sox outfield this afternoon. Reynolds has been ailing with a bad charley horse for the last four weeks.

Caraway to Pitch.

With the giant collegian back in the lineup, Bush saw hopes of a little more offensive strength at least. The outfield has been hitting the size of its belt buckle of late, this deficiency being one of the predominant factors in the record of ten defeats against two victories in the seaboard battle fronts.

Pat Caraway, who left Chicago three weeks ago with a record of six victories and three defeats, and returned yesterday with seven defeats against six triumphs, will face the Macks in the opener today. His opponent in all probability will be George Earnshaw, Mack's big right hander.

Bush's Hope Rises.

Even though the Macks are generally regarded as the greatest team in the world at the moment, the Sox played their best ball against them on the road. In four games they managed to win the finale, 7 to 5, in twelve innings, suffering only one real defeat. Caraway lost the first game by a single run on a home run, and Tommy Thomas suffered a similar fate in the second game of the series. Both were excellently pitched games and were Sox victories, save for the untimely home runs.

PANTALEO PUTS WHITE AWAY IN THIRD ROUND

Paul Pantaleo, south side heavyweight, last night knocked out K. O. White in the third round of a scheduled ten-round bout at Shrewsbridge field. White was down twice in the second and twice again in the third. Pantaleo weighed 179½ pounds, and White scaled 170.

Other results:

Dick Sisk knocked out Tommy Schull, Niles, Mich. [3]; Jackie Davis and Len Camp, Moline, draw [6]; Johnny Rich, Cleveland, beat Freddie Miller [6]; Willie Kenny and Tony Sanders, draw [4].

Becker Gives Formulae for Mosquito Dope

BY BOB BECKER.

It takes just one experience to convince the outdoor fan that insects can make life miserable for anybody on a fishing, camping or canoeing trip and that some kind of anti-mosquito dope is a valuable accessory to one's outfit.

There are numerous mixtures on the market which, if applied correctly will keep flies and mosquitos away. Some are thick like an ointment and others are heavy liquids. Nearly all of them utilize a group of oils or other ingredients which send bothersome insects on their way.

Here are some suggestions on fly dopes the outdoor fan can have made up in most any drug store. We have tried these mixtures over a period of years and have found them efficient.

One combination that has a heavy base and several powerful oils in it is made as follows: Castor oil, 1¼ ounces; pennyroyal, ¾ ounce; camphor, ¼ ounce; citronella, ¼ ounce; oil of bergamot, 1 dram. The castor oil acts as a base for the volatile oils and also is something of a repellent. If you want to make this mixture a little more "delicate" use olive oil in place of the castor oil.

The other day we encountered the formula for a fly "dope" which we haven't tried, but we're going to have a small amount made up to experiment with while canoeing down the Flambeau river on THE TRIBUNE'S Boy Scout canoe cruise.

This particular mixture is heavy dope and recommended ingredients are: camphor, 30 per cent; carbolized petrolatum [jelly], 40 per cent; and salol, 30 per cent.

Salol is a crystalline compound derived from salicylic acid. Camphor long has been known as a repellent but it is so volatile that it has to be mixed with a heavy base or its strength is soon dissipated.

Parker Halts Lindblom in Prep Series

Parker stopped Lindblom's march toward the Chicago Public High School league baseball championship by handing Lindblom its first defeat in the semi-finals yesterday at Hamilton park. The score was 12 to 11.

If Lindblom had won it would have qualified for the championship game at Wrigley field June 27, but now two of the other three schools have a chance to force Lindblom into a playoff.

It was Lindblom's third and last game in the semi-finals. Parker now is tied with Tilden for second place with one game won and one lost. Bowen remains on the schedule of both teams.

Bowen was scheduled to meet Tilden yesterday, but the game was postponed pending the result of the Lindblom contest. Since Lindblom failed to clinch the south and central title, Bowner will meet Tilden this afternoon. Parker will face Bowen in the last south central battle tomorrow.

Parker took an early lead in yesterday's game when Boole Snyder's double in the first inning drove in the first run. Then with Louis Wasserman and Asher leading the attack, Parker scored seven runs and took an 8 to 0 lead at the end of the second inning. Chester Janka, Lindblom pitcher, was replaced by Frank Narbut in the third. The latter was pounded for five hits in the fourth and Parker scored four more runs.

Bill Kenefick held the Lindblom batters hitless until the fourth inning when the central section champions collected four hits and scored six runs. They scored three runs in the eighth and two in the ninth, including a homer by Manrovich.

The north and west sectional championship will be decided tomorrow when Lane Tech, 1930 league titleholder, and Schurz, undefeated in the section, meet at Logan Square park. Marshall and Harrison, which were eliminated from the race by losing two games, have agreed to cancel their contest scheduled for this afternoon.

Parker-Lindblom score:

Lindblom	000	600	302—11
Parker	170	400	00x—12

Janka, Narbut and Boswell, Larson; Kenefick and Hammantt.

Lou Moore to Drive Boyle Special Sunday

A Boyle special, sister car to the one driven so successfully by Cliff Woodbury in many races, will start for the first time at Roby speedway, 103th and Indianapolis avenue, Sunday. It will be driven in the A. A. A. 100 mile race by Lou Moore, who was second to Frank Lockhart a few years ago at Indianapolis.

Moore was engaged to drive in the 500 mile event this year, but the car was not finished in time.

The three Lous entered in Sunday's races may make a runaway of it. There are Louie Schneider, Indianapolis winner this year; Lou Meyer, who defeated Schneider at Detroit last week, and now Lou Moore.

Woodbury will swing the starting flags.

Only twelve of the twenty cars entered will be permitted to start, A. A. A. officials decided after watching the way the two man cars acted on the dirt at Detroit.

SOCCER GROUP MEETS HERE TO CONSIDER RULES

Whatever changes in soccer rules are decided on by the United States Soccer Football association will be announced today at the second session of its eighteenth annual meeting, Armstrong Patterson of Detroit, president of the association, said in an address at the opening meeting yesterday at the Palmer house.

Soccer, like other sports, has suffered from the business depression, although not as greatly as baseball, according to Tom Birk, sports writer for the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph and sports enthusiast. He said, however, that the sport was growing in popularity in the east.

Mate and our fast but inconsistent westerners are not going to lose Sun Meadow when the Derby battle starts. They're not going to lose him at any stage of the tussle. They're going to find him running like the wind as the struggle nears a climax.

Looks Like Winner.

Sun Meadow is going to win the American Derby if he doesn't have any bad racing luck. Please don't wake up Sunday morning and say that I didn't tell you about it.

The size of the field? Well, there seems to be no end to it until the starters are named through the entry box at 10:30 o'clock this morning. The handicappers whose lead pencils were holding out were throwing the figures on 19 possible starters. They believed 14 are likely to go to the post and they can't see how the field will be less than 15 if good weather and track conditions continue to prevail.

There were other workouts yesterday but not of a serious nature by any of those supposed to have a chance to win the Derby. The best took place over at Lincoln Fields where The Mongol, owned by Madden brothers of Kentucky, stepped the Derby route of a mile and a quarter in 2:07. This fellow is one of the extreme outsiders in the Derby. Unless he is hooked up in the field he should be at about 500 to 1 in the betting.

Karl Eitel Wins Feature.

Chicagoans in the advance Derby crowd at Washington Park yesterday had occasion to stage sort of a pre-Derby celebration. Ald. Bathhouse John Coughlin's Karl Eitel beat some of the fleetest handicap horses here and won the Apron String purse which was the day's feature. The Firat wardens in particular were jubilant, for they had played Karl Eitel and when he got the decision over Pigeon Hole and Brown Wisdom by some three lengths they collected at $32.74 for a two dollar ticket.

Karl Eitel was much the best and ran his seven furlongs in 1:24 3-5, just a second off the track record. Pigeon Hole came from far back to beat Brown Wisdom, the early leader, for the place money. Silverdale was the favorite. He ran close up to midway in the stretch then had nothing left for the final drive and dropped out of the picture.

It was the first race Karl Eitel has won since early last season. He triumphed but once throughout last year's racing.

Rainville Beats Rexinger in West Tennis

Play for the Western Tennis championships at River Forest quickened yesterday and several seeded players fell by the wayside. Play in the final bracket will get under way today in the women's singles and men's and wimen's doubles.

Marcel Rainville, seeded top position, was nearly upset yesterday in his quarter—final match by Scott Rexinger, Big Ten champion. It was the stamina of the Canadian Davis cup star that finally conquered, 1-6, 6-1, 6-1.

George Jennings, National Public Parks champion, played a better brand of tennis than George O'Connell, Chicago, and won, 6-3, 6-4. The placements of Jennings proved too much for O'Connell.

Coggeshall Beats O'Connell.

Harris Coggeshall, defending titlist, continued to breeze along by defeating Frank O'Connell, 7-5, 6-1. He will meet George Jennings to enter the final round.

Herbert Bowman, who won the Municipal tourney last week, advanced to the semi-final round by defeating Charles Lejeck, 6-1, 6-1.

In the women's singles Clara Zinke, Mae Cuervorst, Catherine Wolf, and Ruth Riese advanced to the semi-finals. Ruth Reise was extended to the limit to down Eugenie Sampson, Chicago, who gamely fought to a 6-2, 7-5 decision.

Williams, Thalheimer Win.

In the doubles division, Luke Williams and Louis Thalheimer entered the semi-final round by scoring over George O'Connell and T. R. Halsted, 6-8, 6-1, 6-4, 7-5.

MRS. HILL GAINS SEMI-FINALS OF ST. LOUIS GOLF

St. Louis, Mo., June 18.—(AP)—Mrs. O. S. Hill of Kansas City beat par again today and advanced to the semi-finals of the fifth annual women's trans-Mississippi golf tournament along with the Oklahoma state champion and two St. Louis women. The Kansas City golfer, winner of the trans-Mississippi title in 1928 and 1929, stroked the first nine holes one under par in defeating Mrs. Rossmore Kohn, St. Louis, 9 and 7, in the third round.

Lucille Robinson, Des Moines, who played par golf in her first and second round matches, faltered today and slipped out of the tournament, the victim of Mrs. I. S. Hynes, St. Louis, on the 19th hole.

The St. Louisan will meet Mrs. J. Walter Beyer of Tulsa, Oklahoma champion, in the semi-finals tomorrow. Mrs. Mahlon B. Wallace of St. Louis, who defeated Elizabeth Douglas, also of St. Louis, 4 and 3, in the quarter-finals, will meet Mrs. Hill.

STEPHENSON'S 5 HITS HELP IN BIG SIX BAT RACE

Riggs Stephenson, Chicago Cub slugger, gained ground in the National league batting race yesterday when he collected five hits in ten times at bat in a double header against Brooklyn. His .500 average for the day boosted his mark to .343, only one point behind Bill Terry of the Giants, who hit two of four to hold second place. Harvey Hendrick, the leader, dropped below .400 when he failed to connect in three attempts. All American league clubs were idle. The leaders:

Foreman and Hertz Stables at Arlington

Arrivals at Arlington Park yesterday were the stables of John Hertz and G. W. Foreman, aggregating some forty thoroughbreds of various ages, all seasoned by spring racing. They came from Belmont Park, all in fine condition.

Foremost of the Hertz establishment is Risque, daughter of Stimulus and Risky, winner last season of the Lassie stakes at Arlington and the Spinaway at Saratoga. Successful in her last three races at Belmont Park, Risque is the most formidable rival now for the current seasons 3 year old fillies crown of Tambour, winner of the Coaching Club American Oaks, at Belmont Park, and Cousin Jo, winner of the Kentucky Oaks, at Churchill Downs.

She did not start in the Coaching Club American Oaks because she wasn't eligible. With luck she will meet Cousin Jo and Tambour, Battle, contender in the Coaching Club American Oaks, and Toney Penna, Betty Derr, Blind Lane, Dark Monnet, Martha Jones, Ann Arnold, Ladana, Thais, Avenger, and Alyne in the second $20,000 Arlington Classic at one mile and a furlong on July 2.

Risque is in the second Arlington Matron handicap with her 4 year old stable companion, Valenciennes, who won the Matron inaugural last year, stepping a mile in 1:35 4-5. Valenciennes finished her 3 year old season at Bowie last November by winning the tenth Thanksgiving handicap, which netted her $8,900. She is in splendid condition now, racing and training she and her companions, some twenty-two in all, had at Jamaica and Belmont Park in May and June were developed in preparation for the Arlington meeting.

Frank Hackett and Bill Brandi have the Hertz string in charge. Top double jockey is Earl Steffen.

Valenciennes is in the Stars and Stripes and Arlington handicaps and the Arlington cup as well as the Matron handicap. Well Heeled, a son of Royal Canopy, was a 2 year old win-

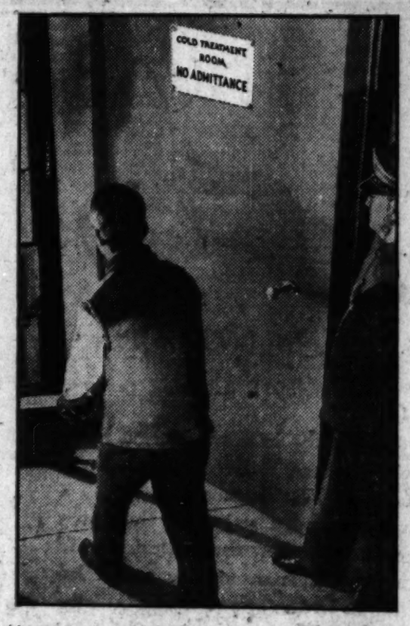
"COLD-TREATED" CIGARS WILL BE DOUBLY WELCOME



Approach to "Cold-Treatment" room, where Dutch Masters have fresh-made flavor and mellowness sealed in by this secret process.

IF YOU could take your Dad right to a cigar factory, and hand him a box of "just-made" cigars, how pleased he'd be to enjoy that greatest of smoke pleasures—cigars that are absolutely fresh.

You can give him this pleasure, by giving him Dutch Masters, for every Dutch Masters cigar is as fresh and full of flavor when it is lit, as it was at the moment it was made. The new "Cold-Treatment" process makes this possible.

This unique new process takes a Dutch Masters cigar just as it comes from the machine—just at the moment when the mellow tobaccos are at their fresh Peak of Perfection...

And then, by "Cold-Treating," that new-made fragrance and taste are sealed within the cigar itself! So between a Dutch Masters and an ordinary cigar, there's as much difference as there is between fresh fruit and dried fruit!

Buy a box for Dad. And try one yourself—to-day. Manufactured by the Consolidated Cigar Corporation, New York, N. Y.

GEN. MOTORS IN BIG DEAL WITH LIBBEY GLASS

Sells Plant, Places $50,000,000 Order.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, June 18.—[Special.]—Allen F. Sloan Jr., president of the General Motors corporation announced today that the corporation had agreed to sell the Ottawa, Ill., plant of the National Plate Glass company, a wholly owned subsidiary, to the Libbey-Owens-Ford Glass company of Toledo.

In connection with the sale the General Motors corporation will enter into an agreement with the Libbey-Owens-Ford company to buy a large part of its needed supply of glass from the Toledo company, the announcement said.

Sales advices today said that the contract would run for seven years and that the estimated minimum requirements of the General Motors corporation under the agreement would exceed $50,000,000. It is said to be the largest order for glass in the history of that industry.

Will Expand Capacity

In order to take care of the large requirements of the General Motors corporation in addition to those of its other customers, the Libbey-Owens-Ford Glass company will expand its plant capacity by the acquisition of the Ottawa plant of the National Plate Glass company.

The property purchased by the Libbey-Owens-Ford company includes two complete plate glass manufacturing plants known as the Illinois factory and the Federal factory. The latter, built five years ago, employs the Fourcault casting process similar to that used by the Libbey-Owens-Ford company in its new plant at Rossford. The Federal plant is operating at full capacity. It can produce more than 20,000,000 square feet of glass a year. In addition to those facilities the Libbey-Owens-Ford company acquires valuable sand deposits.

Now in Strong Position.

The three plants of the National Plate Glass company compose the largest manufacturing equipment of that company. It also owns a smaller plant at Kokomo, Ind., with an annual capacity of about 10,000,000 square feet of plate glass. The total capacity of the company before sale of the Ottawa plants was 30,000,000 square feet a year.

John D. Biggers, president of the Libbey-Owens-Ford Glass company, said:

"We have been working on these negotiations for five months. The glass industry consumes approximately 70 per cent of all plate glass manufactured in America.

"The General Motors business, together with our other valuable accounts, places us in a strong position. Our directors regard this as a great forward step for the Libby-Owens-Ford glass company."

Navy Orders $4,700,000 in Electric Engine Parts

New York, June 18.—(AP)—The Pennsylvania Railroad has placed orders for construction of mechanical parts, it stated, for 90 of the 150 electric locomotives for which the railroad recently purchased $16,000,000 worth of electrical equipment. Construction and material orders for the 90 chassis will total $4,700,000. Of the locomotives included in today's orders, 54 will be built by Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co., at Eddystone, Pa.; 25 will be constructed by General Electric Co., of Erie, Pa., and 11 will be built in the Pennsylvania shops at Juniata, Pa.

St. Regis Paper Elects McMillen Vice President

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, June 18.—Directors of the St. Regis Paper company today elected C. D. McMillen, vice president and director of the Union Bag and Paper corporation and become chairman of the board of that company, succeeding H. H. Wallace. Mr. McMillen will take up his duties with the St. Regis company and will be located at the company's office here. Alexander Calder has been elected executive vice president of the Union Bag and Paper corporation in charge of its entire operations.

Ten Years Ago in Finance

R. G. Dun & Co. reports 229 business failures during the week compared with 209 failures in the preceding week and 252 for the same period a year ago.

The attack in the New York stock market shifts to the railway shares. Southern Pacific drops to 105, the lowest in twenty years. Chesapeake & Ohio shares sell down 3¾ points to 49¾. New York Central is down 1⅞ to 65⅝.

The New York curb market plans to enter its new building in Trinity place within a week, abandoning the picturesque open air trading in Broad street. The exchange now will have a new ticker service.

J. C. Penney company reports May sales of $3,306,307 against $3,714,248 in May, 1929. Sales for five months were $16,756,020 against $12,210,860 for the similar period of 1929.

Chicago bank clearings for the week were $209,634,000, an increase of $16,000,000 over the preceding week, but a decrease of $148,322,855 from the corresponding 1929 week.

American Gold Stocks at Peak; Increase $90,000,000

New York, June 18.—(AP)—New records in stocks of American gold were achieved today.

The total monetary stock of gold in the United States was reported by federal reserve board to be $4,593,000,000, an increase of $90,000,000 during the week ended June 17. This increase is believed to be the largest weekly gain on record. The aggregate monetary gold stock has reached a new peak also.

The weekly statement of gold movements of the federal reserve bank of New York showed a net decrease of $75,819,000 in gold embarked for foreign account. Imports of $9,772,000 and no exports were reported for the week ended June 17. These two totals together account for most of the $90,000,000 increase in monetary gold stocks. A decrease in embarked gold means simply that some foreign central bank has kept part of its gold stock in New York which it has sold.

Reichsbank Operations.

Official comment on earmarking operations is not available at the federal reserve bank but it is generally agreed in financial circles that the great increase in American holdings is indirectly the result of operations by the reichsbank to protect reichsmark exchange.

It is believed that the latter institution bought gold from the holdings of the Bank of France in New York and used the metal in its exchange operations. In turn the Bank of France received payment from the reichsbank.

BROKERS' LOANS SHRINK

Another sharp decline in brokers' loans, totaling $71,000,000, was reported yesterday. The drop brings the total volume of credit devoted to speculation down to another new low record mark of $1,419,000,000. Comparative figures for the years prior to 1926 are not available but the current total is the smallest on record.

The New York banks accounted for $65,000,000 of the shrinkage in the loans. These institutions are now lending a total of $1,070,000,000, compared with $1,135,000,000 a week ago and $1,850,000 a year ago. The loans of the interior banks remain unchanged at last week's level of $177,000,000, while the nonbanking lenders, including corporations, reduced their loans by $4,000,000 to bring the current total to $17?,000,000.

The weekly report of the federal reserve system shows that borrowings of member banks increased $633,000 to a current total of $185,383,000 but the system's holdings of bankers' acceptances dropped $20,403,000 to $107,814,000. Note circulation expanded $26,364,000 during the week and now stands at $1,668,313,000.

Deposits Up $32,488,000.

Deposits of the thirteen reserve banks increased $32,488,000 and gold reserves of these institutions jumped $78,286,000. Total reserves increased $91,672,000. The reserve ratio increased correspondingly to 85.2 per cent from 84.4 per cent a week ago.

The report of the New York reserve bank shows a decline of $4,263,000 in member banks borrowings but a gain of $1,019,000 in bankers' acceptances. Government securities held by the bank were unchanged at $145,170,000, while total deposits dropped $69,623,000 to $1,088,687,000.

The report of the Chicago reserve bank shows a decline of $509,000 in member borrowings and a decrease of $3,194,000 in holding of bankers' acceptances. Government securities increased by $395,000 to $32,786,000. Total deposits receded $14,427,000 to $335,654,000. The reserve ratio rose to 89.9 per cent from last week's figure of 88.7.

Acceptances Ahead of 1930.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, June 18.—A nominal decrease of $9,506,275 in total acceptances outstanding, leaving the total as of May 31 at the relatively high figure of $1,412,515,400 compared with $1,422,021,675 on April 30, and $30,-303,545 above the total for May 31, 1930 — namely: $1,382,206,855 — was shown in the monthly report of the American acceptance council, published today.

During the first five months of this year there has been a seasonal decrease in bills outstanding of only $143,450,801, whereas in the corresponding period a year ago the decrease was $350,299,533.

An analysis of the month's changes, issued by the council in the absence of Robert H. Dean, executive secretary, who is in Europe, said, in part:

"With rates at the lowest levels on record the opportunity has been provided to finance business transactions with bankers' acceptance credits to those who heretofore had financed themselves by commercial loans at their own banks. The situation in that respect has been unchanged during the month.

Export Bills Increase.

"In contrast to the record of the preceding month, the largest decrease in outstanding bills in May was in the classification of domestic shipments, which fell off $4,644,111. There was a small increase in bills to finance exports, the total volume being $361,160,805, an increase of nearly $1,000,000 over the preceding month. The volume of acceptances employed in financing imports fell off $3,584,882 against a decrease of $1,270,254 in April. This is an extremely favorable showing in view of the heavy decline in certain classifications of imports since the middle of March.

"The increased use of acceptances is also emphasized when the study of the decline in commodity prices is taken into consideration. In other words $1.00 of credit will perform a great deal larger service in both domestic and foreign business than two or three years ago or even a year ago.

"Analyzing the volume of outstanding acceptances by districts we find in New York a decrease from April of only $5,389,872. Boston shows an increase of $4,233,725, Philadelphia an increase of $1,170,824, Cleveland an increase of $2,617,908, Chicago a decrease of $1,046,743 and San Francisco a decrease of $3,785,586."

SEN. CAPPER DOUBTS 'JUDGMENT' OF FARM BOARD'S MEMBERS

Topeka, Kas., June 18.—(AP)—Kansas farm leaders were notified today that the federal farm board had rejected their request for assurance that old wheat held by the grain stabilization corporation would not be sold in competition with the new crop now being harvested.

Chairman James C. Stone, in letters to Senator Arthur Capper and Calvin A. Ward, president of the Kansas State Farmers union, said the board would not depart from its policy announced March 23, which he quoted as follows:

"Stabilization supplies of wheat will be handled in such a way as to impose the minimum burden on domestic and world prices."

Stone said the board felt a change of policy "would not be to the benefit of the wheat growers of the country," and expressed the opinion "that the less the question is agitated the better it will be for the wheat growers."

Senator Capper expressed disappointment. "I know their intentions are the best," he said, "but I doubt their judgment in the matter."

At a conference at Manhattan, Kas., last week, a group of Kansas farm leaders urged Stone to make a promise that holdings of the stabilization corporation, estimated in the neighborhood of 200,000,000 bushels, would not be sold until the price of wheat reached 80 or 90 cents.

Pollard New President of Central of Georgia

Savannah, Ga., June 18.—(AP)—Henry D. Pollard, for six years vice president and general manager, was elected president of the Central of Georgia railway, at a meeting of directors here today. Directors of the Ocean Steamship company, meeting after the railway board, elected E. R. Richardson, vice president and general manager for several years, as its president. Presidencies of both companies formerly were held by Albert E. Clift, who died a short time ago.

Rains in Canada Force Wheat to 35 Year Low

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Wheat closed at the lowest figures yesterday since July, 1896, the market breaking to new low levels for the season on all deliveries as the result of soaking rains in parts of Alberta and showers in Saskatchewan. July and September touched 55¾c on the decline, the former delivery coming within 2¼c of the inside price of 35 years ago. Stop loss orders were uncovered on the way down, with the finish at net losses of 1¼@1¾c with July and September closing at 56@56½c, and December at 59¾c.

Bearish sentiment in the wheat trade was intensified by the press reports from Washington saying that the farm board refused to pledge itself to withhold its stabilization grain from domestic markets for another year.

Good Rains in Alberta.

Official and private reports from the Canadian northwest indicated rain had fallen over a wide area, but they were largely in the way of showers except in Alberta where over 1 inch was received at some points, and the forecast was for showers over the three provinces. Regina, Sask., reported several showers during the day, and claimed a bad dust storm prevailed late in the afternoon. The trade ignored reports of continued crop deterioration in the western third of North Dakota and eastern third of Montana, although the forecast was for generally fair weather this side of the international line.

The Winnipeg wheat market held up better than Chicago as traders there felt that the showers in Saskatchewan were too light to be of material benefit and record high temperatures were claimed in parts of Manitoba and Saskatchewan. The finish there was 1¾c lower, with July, 59¾c. Liverpool was ⅛@⅝d lower, with July, 60⅜c.

Wheat crop of the three provinces was estimated by Nat C. Murray at 240,000,000 bu against 376,000,000 bu harvested last year, the condition being placed at 65.

Hedging pressure from the southwest had some effect in depressing the wheat market toward the last and sellers of bids were forced to protect themselves on the way down. Between 30 to 50 cars of new wheat were reported as having been received at Kansas City, while Fort Worth, Tex., also had a liberal run, and the forecast indicated favorable weather for harvesting operations. Export bids for new crop winters were about 1c out of line as compared with sellers' views, but there was a fair trade in old crop, and Seattle, Wash., wired it was understood there the farm board had sold a part cargo of white wheat to Ireland on the basis of 48c f. o. b. Portland.

July Corn Weakens.

July corn reversed its recent action and was as weak yesterday as it was strong early in the week, dropping nearly 2c from the finish of the previous day, and went to 3½c over the September, compared with 4¾c at the close on Wednesday and 5¼c on Tuesday, the finish being at net losses of 1¾c at 56@56¼c. The deferred deliveries were off ⅛@¼c for the day with September 52⅝c, and December 46¼@46⅜c.

Selling of July corn was headed by a house that frequently acts for a leading local professional who has been credited with having been a good buyer of late. There was also selling of July against purchases of September and some pressure on the nearby delivery was due to selling by scattered longs on stop loss orders. Country offerings to arrive were smaller than on Wednesday, purchases aggregating 35,000 bu.

Oats were dull and prices held within a range of ¼c, closing at the bottom, with net losses of ⅛@¼c, with July, 25⅛@25¼c; September, 25⅛@26c, and December, 28⅝c. Short covering and commission house buying checked the decline.

Weakness in wheat and the better weather reports from Canada had a depressing effect on rye and the close was 1@1⅜c lower. July finished at 36⅝c; September, 38½c, and December, 41¼c. Houses with northwestern connections were fair buyers at times.

G. M. PYNCHON TO JOIN STOCK FIRM OF POTTER & CO.

George M. Pynchon, head of the former firm of Pynchon & Co., and Clifford Bucknam, a former partner of the same firm, will become associated with the New York stock exchange firm of Potter & Co., as of July 1, 1931, it has been announced.

It was also announced that Potter & Co. about the same date will open an office in Chicago, where Pynchon & Co. previously maintained two offices. The new office of Potter & Co. in Chicago will be under the management of Jack C. Sturtevant, a former resident partner of the Pynchon firm in the Chicago territory.

Potter & Co. and predecessor firm have been active members of the New York Stock exchange since 1905, doing a commission business, and are prominent in the banking field.

EXPLAINS SETUP OF COMPANIES IN TEXTILE MERGER

Gastonia, N. C., June 18.—(AP)—A. G. M. Myers, president, and J. H. Separk, secretary and treasurer of Textiles Inc., recently formed $17,000,000 textile organization, today issued a statement explaining the relation between their company and Hampton Textiles, Inc., a mercerizing and finishing plant owned jointly by Textiles Inc., and the Hampton Mills of East Hampton, Mass.

"This development is of great importance to the textile industry," the statement said. "It represents an affiliation of interests which, in a large, modern plant located in Gaston county, N. C., will be devoted to manufactured and finished yarns and other materials for the textile trade."

The Hampton company will continue to operate its present eastern plant at East Hampton, Mass., which is reported running at normal capacity.

BY FRED HARVEY.

New York, June 18.—It was just another day in Wall street. The share market drifted sluggishly to still lower levels and nobody even reached out for a passing grab at old man slump's suspenders. Wall street and the stock market seers, however, are not overly concerned at the way things are going. This is the summer season. A sort of an in-between-time. Those with their ears closest to the ground and their eyes widest open feel that the plums are ripening in the sunshine and that big business is merely waiting for the bell.

The turnover today was a bit better than yesterday, touching the 1,100,000 mark, but when that is said most of the story is told. Renewed weakness in commodity markets, declines in other trading marts and a general spirit of lassitude had its affect on the price range. There was a dribbling downward movement most of the day and the close found prices at their lowest levels.

Scattered stocks such as Westinghouse, Transamerica, Industrial Alcohol, and Case were soggy, the last named shedding 6⅛ points in a 40,500 share turnover. Auburn Auto in light trading shed 7⅛ points, Lambert & Co. lost 4 points and there were one to three point declines throughout the list.

U. S. Steel Weak.

United States Steel, American Telephone and Telegraph, and General Motors were weak and closed at their lowest range during the day. Utilities were irregularly lower, but price changes were fractional. Great Northern and Northern Pacific were off on the dividend cut of the former. Libbey-Owens Glass climbed a bit on news of a contract with General Motors and there were one or two stout fellows elsewhere in the list. The movement, however, was definitely downward.

The current dullness has been credited to a number of things and the financial community generally has conceded that the stock exchange questionnaire calling for data on the short position, which member firms must file daily, is one of the factors. Bear traders, who under ordinary circumstances might be more active, find the latitude of their play shortened considerably. The frequent flurries

TRADE OUTLOOK IMPROVED, SAYS H. D. PETTIBONE

The peak of receivership has been passed and the outlook on the whole is optimistic, according to Holman D. Pettibone, vice president and trust officer of the Chicago Title and Trust company, in his address yesterday at the weekly meeting of the Kiwanis club at the Hotel Sherman. Mr. Pettibone listed three reasons for his optimistic statement: the majority of receiverships are operating and not liquidating ones, operating results can and have improved under receiverships, and the peak was passed this spring.

"The greater part of receiverships are operating, not liquidating" said Mr. Pettibone, "with a revamping of the capital giving the creditors the opportunity of taking over the business and becoming owners. In contrast to the receiverships of previous cycles of business depression which hit theaters, chain stores, and factories, the present ones have had to do, for the most part, with residences.

"Receiverships began increasing in 1929, reached their peak this spring, and since then have been declining, according to the figures in our office."

Report 79,000 Workers on Ford Pay Roll in Detroit

The Ford Motor company factory in Detroit is reported currently employing 79,000 workers, an increase of several hundred over last week and compared with 84,000 during peak operations in April.

NOEL STATE BANK CLOSES; DUE TO WITHDRAWALS

The Noel State bank, 1601 Milwaukee avenue, was closed yesterday at the request of the board of directors. The action was taken because of the heavy withdrawals of the last few days. Deposits of the institution were estimated to be around $4,000,000 yesterday as compared with $7,350,000 on March 25, the date of the last bank call. Plans for the reorganization of the bank were being discussed yesterday, but no definite action is expected until a complete audit has been made which will take several weeks. The bank had capital of $1,000,000 and surplus of $400,000.

The Waukegan State bank of Waukegan, Ill., was also closed yesterday by the state auditor at the request of the board of directors. State Auditor Oscar Nelson said that it is expected that the bank will be reorganized with no loss to depositors. The institution had deposits of $1,200,000, capital of $200,000 and surplus of $100,000.

CHICAGO SHARE PRICES DECLINE IN QUIET TRADE

Trigsby Reports May Sales of $2,609,086.

BY THOMAS FURLONG.

Prices of Chicago stocks worked moderately lower in the dull trading yesterday. The run of the day's news had little apparent effect on the course of prices. Many of the leading stocks were traded in infrequently and there were few significant changes.

Cities Service was turned over to the extent of 3,450 shares following the issuance of the company earnings report and the announcement of the declaration of the regular dividends. The issue was moderately easier, closing at 16⅝ compared with its previous closing quotations of 17¼.

New Refrigerator Business.

Grigsby-Grunow stock was dull in the face of the company's report on May sales. The firm reported that sales for May amounted to $2,609,086 as compared with $558,778 in the corresponding month last year. The increase was attributed largely to new business in the refrigeration line.

Don N. Compton, vice president and general manager, said that sales so far this month in the refrigerator division are holding at approximately the same rate as May and the company is currently operating on radio and battery sets and automobile radio sets. The company's plants will close for ten days beginning Friday, June 26, for a vacation period and operations will be resumed July 6. The company is also working on a new midget model on which production will start shortly after the resumption of operation in July.

The automotive accessory shares generally held within a narrow range. Borg Warner Bendix and Cord all showed slight shading in price on small volume of transactions.

In Line with Market.

The Insull issues and the other utility shares were in line with the general market. Insull Utility and Middle West were off fractionally on slight trade.

The reorganization plan of the Inland Utilities, Inc., has been declared operative by the debenture holders' protective committee and the North American Gas and Electric company's reorganization managers. Final consummation of the plan is contingent upon the approval of the class A and common stockholders, who will meet the latter part of this month. Plans are now being made to merge Inland Utilities with the newly formed Southeastern Gas and Water company.

GREAT NORTHERN 1931 DIVIDENDS TO BE $4 A SHARE

Transamerica Corp. Reduces Quarterly Payment

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, June 18.—The Great Northern Railway company today announced a dividend of $1.50 a share on the capital stock, payable Aug. 1, and substantially stated that the action was to be construed as placing the stock on a $4 annual basis, since a dividend of $1.50 semi-annually already had been paid this year, on Feb. 1. The total of $4 for 1931 compares with a rate of $5 paid in 1930.

For the first four months of 1931 the Great Northern's net railway operating income has aggregated $927,-684, compared with $674,385 in the corresponding period last year. It is estimated that, on the basis of the first four months, the road is earning at a rate of $7.28 a share, compared with $2.34 a share in 1930.

The directors of the Magma Copper company today cut the dividend to 25 cents for the quarter, compared with 50 cents previously paid. The reduction places the stock on a $1 annual basis, compared with $2 previously.

On the Year Basis.

Transamerica corporation declared a quarterly dividend of 10 cents a share, placing the shares on a 40 cent annual basis, compared with a rate of 12 cents quarterly, or $1 a year, initiated Oct. 25, 1930, prior to which the annual rate was 40 cents quarterly, or $1.60 a year, initiated Oct. 25, 1929, following distribution of a 100 per cent stock dividend.

In declaring the dividend the board also authorized a change in the shares to no par value from $25 par, subject to approval of stockholders, to give the corporation a more flexible capital structure.

Elisha Walker, chairman, said that the board had felt that a reduction from the previous rate was desirable in view of present conditions and in view of the policy of the corporation to keep regular dividends in line with the presently anticipated recurring earnings from interest and dividends received.

Quota Payment.

The Pittsburgh Forging company omitted the quarterly dividend of 25 cents on the common due at this time.

The Weinberger Drug Stores, Inc., declared the usual extra of 1 per cent in common on the common stock and the regular quarterly dividend of 25 cents on the common.

Top yesterday, $8.60; average, $7.15.
Estimated receipts at Chicago today: Cattle, 2,500; hogs, 17,000; sheep, 7,000.

Another sensational advance was scored in hogs yesterday. Prices jumped 25@40c at Chicago. Low western markets came up even faster and tops forged past the $8.00 line at far eastern points. Supplies at Chicago fell short of expectations and the clearance was the best for Thursday in recent weeks. Most of the hogs left were being held off the market in hopes of another upturn today.

The extreme top here advanced to $7.60, highest since May 2, and $1.40 above the low point three weeks ago. Omaha reported $7.50 and Kansas City came through with $7.45 near the close. Unless conditions change abruptly there is a possibility of $8.00 hogs at Chicago shortly. Range of prices is widening because of the bigger proportion of sows in receipts. The general average advanced 25c yesterday at $6.95.

September Hogs Offered at $8.

Contracts to deliver hogs weighing anywhere from 170 lbs to 210 lbs next September were offered at $8.00 on the futures market yesterday, but the highest bid at the close stopped at $7.50. August lightweights were also bid $7.50, but no offers to sell in this month were made. Today's lightweights carried bids of $7.60 on the "to arrive" market.

The two-way trend continued in the cattle market yesterday, light steers and yearlings selling readily at fully steady to strong prices, while medium and weighty beeves ruled weak to lower. Fancy $9 lb yearlings topped the price list at $8.85, while only occasional sales of heavy steers were made above the $8.00 line. Some 1,429 lb averages sold at $8.25.

Heavy carcasses are accumulating again in the coolers and the trade looks for a further widening of the price range in the near future, with top yearlings working higher. Top sales are in line with a week ago, while weighty beeves are selling 25@50c lower for the first four days of the week. Best cows and heifers were steady, while others ruled weak to 25c lower, showing 25@50c loss for the week. Stockers and feeders were steady. Best calves were firm and others weak.

Best Lambs Stronger.

Best grades of fat lambs were in good demand at strong prices yesterday, while others held about steady. Supplies were smaller than usual, the total at the seven leading western markets at 27,000 head being smallest of the year for Thursday, and below any corresponding day in recent years.

The next smallest Thursday total this year was 28,000. Thursday totals during the last eight weeks ranged from 41,000 to 67,000. Best natives were sold at $8.50@8.60 and some medium quality Idahos went at $8.00. Yearlings were firm, selling at $6.75 and below, while aged sheep sold steady at $1.75 and under. There was some inquiry for young breeding ewes at $2.50@3.50, the lowest prices on record.

Receipts at Chicago for today are estimated at 2,500 cattle, 17,000 hogs and 7,000 sheep, against 2,326 cattle, 13,415 hogs and 8,712 sheep the previous Friday, and 1,320 cattle, 20,039 hogs and 8,967 sheep a year ago.
